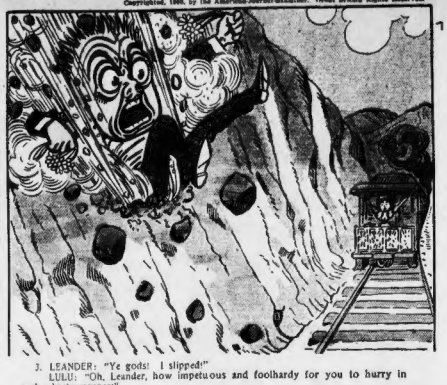
1. LULU: "Oh, Leander, just look at those beautiful wild-flowers up there on the mountain side."
LEANDER: "And you shall have them. Anything to please my little wife. Something is the matter with the engine and the train has stopped. I'll get out, climb up and get those flowers for you."

2. LEANDER: "Ah, nothing is too much risk for me to please that sweetest of women. Now that she is my wife, my bad luck is quelched."
LULU: "Leander! Leander! Come, hurry down; the train is about to start."



3. LEANDER: "Ye gods! I slipped!"
LULU: "Oh, Leander, how impetuous and foolhardy for you to hurry in such a hasty manner!"

4. LULU: "Oh, Leander, hurry! hurry! hurry! The train is going! Oh, you will be left!"
LEANDER: "Great Scott! Has my ill luck overtaken me again?"

5. LEANDER: "IT HAS!"

6. LEANDER: "Ye gods! Can THIS be married life? I had fond hopes that my marriage would be an anti-hoodoo proposition. My entrancing bride on that train and me having to foot it for twenty-five miles! Oh, woe is me! Woe is me!"

THE BEAUTIFUL COUNTESS OF WARWICK.

A Spirited Plea by the Most Beautiful Woman in England and One of the Most Aristocratic of the King's Friends for the Full Development of Muscles and Morals, With the Nation in Charge of the Dietary.

THE Countess of Warwick, the friend of the King and the most beautiful woman in England, has become a Socialist and friend of labor. Without waiting for the establishment of a Socialist state, she believes in promoting all reforms for improving the conditions of the laboring classes, particularly those recommended by the trades union leaders. First among these reforms she places the feeding of all school children at the public expense, and on this subject she has written the following article.

Copyright, 1906, by Cassell & Co.

IT might be well to make it clear that I only deal with certain causes of physical deterioration and with the more immediate and practicable remedies. Bad housing, unsanitary conditions, a defective or injurious milk supply, are serious evils affecting young lives in particular. So also is the employment of women too late before, and too soon after, child-birth. This is an evil difficult to check; the law is systematically evaded, and will be so long as the only attempt to cope with it is by repressive legislation.

So many of the suggestions for improvement here are met by the old cry of "interference with family life," although in the factory districts family life has been pretty well destroyed. In any case, whether in connection with this or the other reforms already dealt with, surely we must recognise that the family is a human institution, maintained for the purpose of elevating the race and advancing its higher interests. But that does not justify us in using it as an argument against the interests of the race. It is for the children's sake above anything else that "the home" exists, and the community has a right to know how far the institution enabled serves its purpose. Is it, for instance, living us a healthy, vigorous and progressively increasing race?

Let the Registrar-General's returns answer that question with their falling marriage rate, falling birth rate, and appalling infantile mortality. Despite all improvements in sanitation and the generally low adult death rate, the rate of infantile mortality is practically where it was twenty-five years ago. When we have 145 deaths under one year of age out of 1,000 births we may judge something of the stamina of the majority of survivors.

The falling marriage rate, and to a certain extent the falling birth rate, are due largely to the fact that our complex and chaotic civilisation does not secure to the majority of men the prospect of a livelihood. No amount of personal desert on their part insures them either regularity of employment or adequate pay for their work. The more prudent hesitate to marry, or, if they marry, limit their families. The less prudent marry early, have families, and if the luck be against them help to make up those terrible figures of the Registrar-General, which show us that one-third of the total deaths each year are children under five years of age. Of the children born in the year 1900 barely one-half are yet living.

Have we not, then, to reconsider our attitude toward children? Or perhaps I should say, Should we not accept in the fullest and frankest way the attitude which actually we were adopting when we entered upon the compulsory education? If we do that lavish logically, we shall see that children, after all, are primarily the children of the nation, and that it is the nation's first concern to secure their health and well-being, if possible through their parents, of course, but if not so, then by whatever other means seem most feasible.

There are opponents of free meals for hungry children, who say that this will lead to clothes and boots for ragged children, and so on until the State shall accept responsibility for the child. They are quite right. The development is inevitable, but it would be more satisfactory if the positions were faced now, and not arrived at through a dreary succession of scrubbles, manœuvres and petty compromises. We have been reiterating, until some seem ready to believe it, that the poverty and misery which come upon the home when unemployment, sickness, accident or death befalls the bread-winner, are things only due to the man's own improvidence, want of thrift, and so on. We have said this to such purpose that the prudent and thoughtful are every day now less inclined to marry or to have children. If that tendency increases I suppose we shall one day have a population mainly composed of the offspring of imprudent and selfish personal inquisition or anything in the nature of a demand. To keep up appearances their children must go short or food. The class which spends nothing on furniture or books, makes no attempt to save, cares nothing for "appearances," pays nothing to a trades union or a benefit society, and takes coals and blankets from every possible source, is just the class which will most readily plead and demonstrate poverty when there are forms to be filled in. It is the curse of the greater part of our voluntary charity, and in a considerable measure of our Poor Law system, that they tend to demoralize the less deserving, while withholding help from those to whom it is most valuable as a temporary aid.

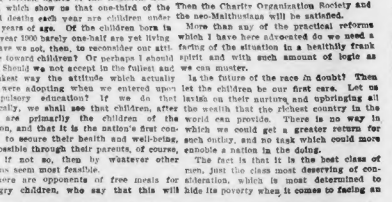
Then the Charity Organization Society and the neo-Malthusians will be satisfied.

More than any of the practical reforms which I have here advocated do we need a fairing of the situation in a healthily frank spirit and with such amount of logic as we can muster.

Is the future of the race in doubt? Then let the children be our first care. Let us which we could get a greater return for such outlay, and no task which could more ennoble a nation in the doing.

The fact is that it is the best class of men, just the class most deserving of consideration, which is most determined to hide its poverty when it comes to facing an



Those who are most glib in their phrases his children are fed from the common stock as to "parental responsibility" are invari- of wealth which he has helped to create, ably the greatest enemies of the spirit from which such a sense of responsibility springs. Those who would force young children to do class work on empty stomsachs rather than run the risk of "pauperising" their parents are at the same time vaunting the extent to which the "charity" of private patrons has rendered it unnecessary for men to claim the assistance of the nation which they have served by their labor! It is supposed to pauperise a disabled or unemployed man if man's spirit of independence is supposed to be shaken if his children receive help from the community, but somehow quite preserved if they only have it from individuals, whom possibly he hates or despises for the methods by which they have grown rich.

The attempt to put book-learning into ill-nourished children is positive cruelty. If the choice with such children is to lie between school on the one hand, or, on the other, idling and play in parks, waste grounds, or even the streets, then obviously it is the latter choice which gives them the best chance in life. But why should the matter be left to such a choice of evils as indicates that we are less concerned about the breeding of our children than about that of our horses, cattle or pigs?

Apart from actual underfeeding, there is the evil of improper feeding, which can only be met by some system which will insure that the children get daily at least one wholesome and properly served meal. One effect of this would be that the parents, through the children, would learn some invaluable lessons as to the selection and preparation of food in the home. Want of knowledge, want of skill, and want of means is the trinity of deadly evils that poisons the life of at least 25 to 30 per cent of our children. The particular curse of poverty is that every one is able to take advantage of it. Just as the rent, per cubic foot, of a slum garret is twice that of a Park lane palace, so the poor man's shilling brings him, alike in quantity and quality of food, a return pitifully inferior to that secured by the shilling of the well-to-do. "Whose hath not, from him shall be taken." The value of organization, large buying and skilful preparation is shown in Paris, where in 1904 eight million good meals were supplied to school children at a cost of 2¼d. per meal (4½ cents). Speaking in the House of Commons, June 1, 1905, Sir John Gorst recalled the striking fact that before the London School Board Committee commenced to organize the relief of their children, as much as £200 per head was being spent on wasteful and imperfect attempts to feed children by voluntary charity. Now £25 would both feed and clothe a child.

For widowers, widows, women separated from their husbands or with sick or crippled husbands, and for married women going to work, as often happens in the North of England, it would be an incalculable blessing for the children to have their mid-day meal at school, and it is the mid-day meal that is, on the whole, most important. Where the choice is actually to lie between a scant breakfast or a scant dinner, the former is probably the lesser evil. It is after the exhaustion of the morning's work and confinement, and just before the physical exertion of playtime, that a good meal has the greatest value.

In France, Italy, Belgium and Switzerland every stage of the feeding of school children may be seen, from that undertaken by voluntary agencies to the case of Vercelli, in Italy quoted by the Fabian Society in an excellent tract called "After Bread, Education." The Council of Vercelli not only supplies public meals to the school children, but makes attendance at the same compulsory, unless a medical certificate can be produced to show that feeding would be injurious to the child!

Against the demand for the adequate feeding of our children there is only one argument which is not based on abstract theories or false sentiment, and that is the question of expense. But this argument, if accepted, leads to the entire abandonment of our schools, for money spent on feeding alone, giving us thereby a race of healthy barbarians, would be bringing a better national return than money spent on teaching alone, from which we may expect a race of spectacled and anæmic degenerates. If the one expenditure is unjustified, the other is yet more unjustified, and had better be abandoned, leaving our children to the freedom of the lanes, streets and parks.

How She Won a Relentless Woman-Hater

MRS. SAMUEL SLOAN CHAUNCEY

"You mustn't expect him to be very polite," said Mrs. Adair to Mrs. Chauncey before the Durbar. "They say he hates pretty women."
"You make me quite anxious to have a peep at the monster," said Mrs. Chauncey.

IN all the British Empire and perhaps in all the world, there is no man who excites the interest and piques the vanity of so many beautiful women as General Lord Kitchener.

The reason is that he has all the qualities that usually command the admiration of women, and that he has always appeared absolutely impervious to their charms.

To bring such a man to one's feet—is not that a task to stimulate the natural ambitions of a normally constituted woman?

The news comes from London that at last a woman has achieved the world-stirring triumph of captivating the stony Kitchener.

It is not surprising that she is an American, for nearly all the greatest matrimonial prizes in English high society have been carried off by irresistible charmers from this side of the water.

She is no other than the lovely and beautiful Mrs. Chauncey, once of Louisville, Ky., and later of New York, who has dazzled with her charms and her brilliance nearly every part of the world, including London, the Riviera and Simla, that Indian settlement, where the Viceroy, the Commander-in-Chief (Lord Kitchener) and all the principal personages of the Anglo-Indian world repair in Summer. This society has been immortalized by Kipling in "Plain Tales from the Hills."

The Conquest of Kitchener.

According to the report published in London, Lord Kitchener has fallen deeply in love with beautiful Mrs. Chauncey, and their engagement will shortly be announced. The fierce, haughty soldier feels that he cannot command the British forces in India without her assistance. An astonishing change has taken place. He no longer scowls in the ferocious manner that used to make natives and children flee for their lives at the very sight of him, but he constantly smiles in the happiest manner.

So enormous knowledge that he has entirely changed his habits of life recently. Instead of sitting in an old wooden chair at a wooden table, he has furnished his house exquisitely with rare woods, hangings and porcelain and silver. He has used all his knowledge of the East and his unequalled opportunities to acquire the most beautiful material of this kind. His houses in Calcutta and Simla have both been fitted up in the most delightful manner.

The engagement of Kitchener has astounded British society. The astutest British mammas and the loveliest English girls had exhausted every conceivable expedient to capture the great warrior. They had failed and they had made up their minds that he was an absolutely incurable woman hater. He looked on the most beautiful women, doing their utmost to please him, as coldly as he looked at the slaughter of the dervishes at Khartoum or the construction of new wire entanglements for shutting in the Boers. Indeed, slaughter and barbed wire, although they left him cold, excited a keen professional interest in him, whereas the wiles of beauty left him not only cold but absolutely uninterested.

They tried all kinds of entanglements, but he proved even more elusive than General De Wet, when chased by Kitchener. They tried to corner him in the conservatory and lure him on to the stairs by various ruses de guerre, but his cold, calm strategy always enabled him to evade them.

Now, after all British womanhood has given him up as hopeless, he has been captured by an American girl, for Mrs. Chauncey, though a widow, is no more than a girl.

How did Mrs. Chauncey accomplish this colossal task, this stupendous triumph? How did she do what the most eligible girls in British society, unsurpassed in their beauty, had miserably failed to accomplish? How did she pierce the rhinoceros hide of coldness, cynicism, ambition, obstinacy and self-esteem that guarded the heart of the warrior? In other words, how should one go about it to convert a confirmed woman-hater to matrimony?

Surely the answer to these questions will reveal secrets of the deepest importance to all women, who are interested in the war for the winning of human hearts and the contents of society and the world?

Mrs. Chauncey had an enormous number of resources at her command. Of course, she is beautiful, vivacious, clever and full of vitality and magnetism. She has the independence of manner that only American girls enjoy. She has the breeding that comes from old Southern ancestry. She has the advantage of knowing New York society, which, in such matters as dress, dinners and personal smartness, is the most brilliant in the world. She has also had the benefit of a great international social experience which has been one long series of brilliant triumphs.

But it was undoubtedly Mrs. Chauncey's American way of treating Lord Kitchener as no more than an equal and laughing at him when she felt inclined that broke down his defences. She did not gaze at him with awe, or grovel at his feet or tremble at his frown or overwhelm him with admiration, as some of the English girls did.

Mrs. Chauncey first became friendly with the famous general on the occasion of the great Durbar, which Lord Curzon organized to proclaim King Edward's accession to the princes and peoples of India. One hundred elephants dressed in scarlet and gold took part in this affair, and it was a considerable undertaking for any man or woman to attempt to outshine them.

How the Romance Began.

Lord Kitchener had a large and splendid tent, where he lived and entertained during such time as he could spare from his duties as chief military participant in the various ceremonies. Among the American visitors to the Durbar was Mrs. Adair, a sprightly, white-haired matron, possessed of the wit, vivacity and slimness of figure which Americans preserve better than any other women. Mrs. Adair helped to organize the social festivities in Lord Kitchener's tent.

"You mustn't expect him to be very polite," said Mrs. Adair to Mrs. Chauncey before the Durbar. "They say he hates pretty women."

"You make me quite anxious to have a peep at the monster," said Mrs. Chauncey.

Mrs. Adair introduced Mrs. Chauncey to Lord Kitchener, and she was invited to dinners and luncheons in the tent.

She asked him questions about things which he considered above the comprehension of women, and insisted upon getting an answer. He found that she understood perfectly and made many useful suggestions.

When he assumed the terrible scowl that has struck terror into whole populations she told him not to look cross.

Although she was always beautiful and dainty looking, he found that she could ride horseback as well and as far as a man. That was a habit she had learned in Kentucky.

In fact, he found that he had met a beautiful woman, who was also a good companion, sensible, dignified, possessed of a keen sense of humor and apparently not in the least anxious "to catch" him. He now began to feel that after all a life which consisted of nothing but fighting, reviewing soldiers and writing military documents was rather barren. He explained some of these ideas to Mrs. Chauncey, but she told him that he was good for nothing but these things; that he was too cross and conceited for her, and, in fact, generally laughed at him. Then she had to go away.

The Chauncey house was impressed inefficiently on the General's heart. He wrote long and interesting letters to the beautiful widow and was overjoyed when he found that she liked India well enough to pay a second visit to it. As a result of this visit society hears that another Anglo-American marriage will take place, more interesting than any which has yet been celebrated.

There is good reason why women should feel an interest in Lord Kitchener. He is a rare combination of qualities. He is six feet two inches high, extremely handsome and as powerfully built as any prize fighter. At the same time he is a man of great intellect. No living general has had so much fighting as he.

He drove the Mahdi and his hordes from the borders of Egypt into the Soudan, following them up for 2,000 miles and finally catching them and slaughtering them almost to a man. After all British generals had made a mess of the Boer war, Kitchener was the one who finished it. He is now commander-in-chief in India and his next promotion will be to the supreme command in England. He is the only general whom the English regard as certain to succeed in anything he undertakes.

Why should such a man be a hater of women? For one thing, he considered it absolutely fatal to the highest military success to be tied to a woman or to be swayed by female influences in any way. As a horrible example, he had the venerable Lord Roberts, who has been made ridiculous by his wife's interference with his staff appointments and other military arrangements.

But now that Lord Kitchener has found the ideal woman of perfect sense and judgment, all his objections must vanish.

He has a great deal to offer a bride. He will certainly be raised higher in the peerage. As a bachelor he has saved most of his large pay and has received special grants from the Government. He owns a fine estate in England, Aspall Hall, and the island of Elephantine, in the Nile, which is laid out with exquisite Oriental gardens, and is probably the most delightful Winter residence that could be found. Mrs. Chauncey is the daughter of Colonel J. H. Carr, of Louisville. After her father's death she came East and married Samuel Sloan Chauncey, a New York millionaire. He died within a year or two, and his widow went to Europe, where she immediately made a splendid social success. Her engagement has successively been reported to James J. Van Alen, brother-in-law of Colonel John Jacob Astor; to James Henry Smith, the taciturn possessor of $50,000,000, and to the Earl of Rosebery, formerly Prime Minister of England. Probably they were only hopeless devotees.

How to Keep Your Husband's Love.

IT IS a rather curious fact that while no effort is thought to be too great when the retention of friendship is the object, we often neglect the easiest opportunities of holding the love of those who are nearest and dearest. You would not expect a man or woman to remain your friend if speech and manner toward him or her were cold and thoughtless whenever you met.

Woman affects to believe there is some great mystery in keeping a man in love with her. In reality it is simplicity itself. A woman has only to go on as she began. Every woman knows how she attracted her husband. To continue to win she has only to make the same play over and over again.

It is not sufficient that a wife should merely show her care for her husband by strictly attending to his creature comforts. Neither is it enough that she should be ready for every sacrifice should the hour of trial come. Great moments come seldom. Happiness and love live by little things, smiles, the ready words of interest and sympathy, and upon occasion the open acknowledgment of your affection for and your pride in the one you love.

Judging by the conduct of some wives, it would almost seem that they were ashamed of their love. Perhaps they imagine that, having settled down to married life, their husband no longer appreciates the "sweet nothings" which delight the hearts of courting couples. As a matter of fact, the happiness of married life depends to a certain extent upon a wife retaining, as far as possible, that bright youthfulness and winning manner which attracted her husband in the first place, and one of the surest ways of doing this is not to depart one iota from the custom of telling him at appropriate moments that he is the dearest fellow in the world still, or words to that effect.

A girl often marries a man just the opposite to herself. She is won by his reserve force, the strength of his character. Now comes the danger. She may worship the very ground he treads on, but may be almost shy of letting him know she loves him. He may be older than she, and intensely reserved.

Don't be afraid to let the man you love know you love him. The greater his reserve and strength, the deeper are the waters you have stirred. It is worth an effort to be the real helpmate of a man true to the name. Let him know your love, your sympathy and your desire to help him.

RICH AND FASHIONABLE WOMEN WHO ARE FRIENDS OF LABOR

And How These Modern Lady Bountifuls Desert Their Drawing Rooms for the Dives and the Tenements and Commingle Personally and Intimately With All the Sordid Life of the Slums, to Sweeten and Uplift It.

ALL over the world rich, fashionable and aristocratic women are giving evidence of a newly awakened interest in the lives of their poorer brothers and sisters.

Wives of American millionaires and even English duchesses, are leaving their luxurious surroundings and spending more or less time in an effort to brighten the lot of those who live in the slums amid misery and dirt on the border line of starvation. Others of them, instead of directing their efforts to the slums, feel that they can do more good by supporting the cause of the respectable working man, giving him just and generous treatment, reasonable hours and healthy surroundings.

As yet there are only a handful of these rich women in the highest social ranks who actually give their time, money and labor to help those who are less fortunate than themselves, but their number is growing and their example is evidently leading others in the same path.

When woman is engaged in the pursuits of fashionable and extravagant society, she has no time to think of the unfortunate, because her occupations are so exhausting and absorbing, but when her womanly sympathies are once aroused, no matter how high her station, she becomes an enthusiastic and charming friend of the poor and the workers.

A Duchess in Whitechapel.

In England the Dowager Duchess of Newcastle, who is the daughter of a millionaire and the widow of the chief of one of the oldest families in the British peerage, has given up a life of luxury to work among the poorest class of working girls in the East End of London. She was impelled to do this partly by religious motives—she is a fervent Catholic—and partly by the sight of wicked luxury in her own social set. Her second son, Lord Francis Hope, spent a fortune of $700,000 in foolish extravagance and married the American vaudeville actress, May Yohe. The Duchess is endeavoring to atone by her own sacrifice for the injury he has done to the community.

The Duchess conducts St. Anthony's Home, in Great Prescott street, Whitechapel. She lives here nearly all the year round, only running back to her West End friends long enough to collect subscriptions from them. She has a corps of assistants, most of them women in high social position, who pay $25 a month for the privilege of living in her settlement. Some of these have not entirely given up the fashionable world, but spend one week in Mayfair and the next in Whitechapel. Among these is a young woman of title, who is engaged to the Duchess' nephew.

The Duchess has announced her intention to spend the rest of her life in Whitechapel.

The Duchess maintains a mothers' club, a boys' club, a girls' club and several other institutions. She teaches the mothers how to keep their homes clean, and supplies them with food and medicine for their sick babies. She teaches the girls to be clean and well-behaved, and provides dancing classes and music lessons for them. There are gymnasiums and athletic clubs for the boys.

The Countess of Warwick, often described as the most beautiful woman in England, is a devoted friend of labor. One of her social reforms receives attention elsewhere in this paper. The Countess addresses meetings of workingmen, urges them to be faithful to their unions, and to compel the state to furnish every man with work and a living. She sold most of her jewels in order to support the Socialist Labor party at the last election.

Fraternizing with Peasants.

The Duchess of Sutherland, a half sister of Lady Warwick and a woman of equally attractive personal appearance, is another friend in high society of the workingman. Her husband is the largest land owner in Scotland, but the Duchess sends her children to the public schools in Sutherlandshire, where they are educated with the children of peasants. She goes about among the peasantry and shares their meals. She has induced her husband to give away Trentham Hall, one of the greatest houses in England, to be used as a school.

The Countess of Aberdeen, whose husband is now Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and was formerly Governor-General of Canada, dines with her servants once a week.

Mrs. Emmons Blaine is one of the most devoted philanthropists and friends of labor in this country. She is the widow of Emmons Blaine, favorite son of James G. Blaine; the daughter of Cyrus Hall McCormick, the millionaire reaper manufacturer, and a connection by marriage of John D. Rockefeller. Mrs. Blaine believes that the general principles of trades unionism represent only common justice and humanity, and that everybody ought to adhere to them as closely as possible. No one ever put her theories into more practical use than Mrs. Blaine. So thoroughly did she believe in the eight-hour rule that she put it in practice among her own servants and thereby won lasting fame as the first woman to do so. In her splendid mansion, at No. 344 Erie street, Chicago, every servant was asked to do only eight hours work a day. They went off duty at a fixed hour instead of remaining at the beck and call of their employers from the time they got up until they go to bed, as in many cases. In order to carry out this arrangement Mrs. Blaine had to divide her servants into shifts. The first started at 6 o'clock and was relieved at 2 in the afternoon, and the second worked from then until 10 o'clock. Work done after regular hours was paid for at extra rates, as under most union rules. Of course, this plan could only be followed exactly by persons of great wealth, but there are many of them. As for employers of smaller means, Mrs. Blaine thinks that they might adopt the essential feature of the system by being a little more methodical and industrious themselves.

Mrs. Blaine has done a vast amount of philanthropic and public-spirited work, and in all she has shown her desire to be a sister of the worker and not merely a rich woman doling out charity to her inferiors. She established a school for the training of teachers at a cost of $500,000, and spends $95,000 a year for its maintenance. In connection with the training college, there is a free school in one of the poorer parts of the city where the students of pedagogy can acquire practical experience. The object of this work is to improve the quality of the public schools.

Mrs. Blaine gave the rich classes of the United States a great shock when she insisted on paying taxation on the full amount of her property. Her action was by many regarded as subversive of social order. When called before the Board of Assessors of Chicago, she filed a complete schedule of her possessions showing personality alone amounting to $1,500,000. There are many richer persons than she in Chicago, including some of her own relatives, and they had not in some cases declared a tenth of this amount.

She is a warm supporter of Mayor Dunne, the municipal ownership Mayor, and was appointed by him a member of the Board of Education. She spends nearly all her time among the poor children, neglecting dinners and bridge parties, to the great annoyance of her friends.

Miss Helen Gould, elder daughter of the late Jay Gould, and one of the richest women in the world, can hardly be counted among those who live with the poor, but she gives up practically all the amusements of her class and devotes her whole time to her philanthropic enterprises. She is the most generous friend of the Young Men's Christian Association in America. She built the naval branch of this institution at a cost of $300,000 and maintains it. She dines with the sailors from time to time. She established a similar home for soldiers at Fortress Monroe. She has given away twenty libraries. She nursed the wounded soldiers after the Spanish war. It would require a volume to record her work.

"I have an easier life than women who belong to fashionable society," says Miss Gould.

Mme. Sorgue, better known as the Citoyenne Sorgue, is one of the most advanced socialists in France. She is a millionaire owning property of many kinds and great landed estates at Arzac, near the Mediterranean and in other parts of the South of France. She arranges the hours and wages of the laborers on her estates, so that there is only enough income left for her to clothe and feed herself in the simplest manner. No other rich person puts socialistic or altruistic ideas into practice to the same extreme degree. Mme. Sorgue is handsome and of imposing appearance. She wears the broad-brimmed slouch hat favored by French socialists. She harangues the people in a stirring manner and has several times come in contact with the police, who have ignominiously failed to extinguish her.

Living in New York's East Side.

Mrs. J. G. Phelps Stokes is even more remarkable than a rich woman who works among the poor, for she was a poor girl who, having married a rich man, did not take advantage of his wealth and social position, but induced him to live among her people. J. G. Phelps Stokes belongs to one of the best known millionaire families of New York. He was interested in East Side settlement work, and married Rose Pastor, a cigarmaker. They now live at the corner of Grand and Norfolk streets, in the heart of the crowded Hebrew quarter of New York's East Side. Mrs. Phelps Stokes does all her own housework and finds time to help her neighbors. Speaking of the duty of the rich to the poor recently, she said:

"The most valuable service that outsiders can render the people of the East Side lies in arousing public recognition of the unfairness and social waste which prevail when people of a section are compelled to work excessive hours and often for less than a living wage, while those in other sections work little if at all, and under better conditions, and for incomes vastly disproportionate to the value of the services they render. The outcome should be the equalizing of opportunity—not the lowering of a high standard over there, but the raising of a low standard to a high one here."

Miss Anna Strunsky, another settlement worker, has just married William English Walling, a young Chicago millionaire, who was interested in the same work. The case is very similar to that of the Phelps Stokeses, and was probably brought about by their example, for they were intimately acquainted with the newly married pair. The Wallings will continue to labor in the slums.

The example of Mrs. J. G. Phelps Stokes seems to be contagious, for her husband's sister, Miss Caroline Phelps Stokes married a philanthropic worker, Robert Hunter, and lives with him in a poorer part of the city. Several other members of the same family have shown a strong tendency to do work of the same kind.

These are a few conspicuous instances of earnest women who have given up the amusements of the rich and worldly for the sake of helping the poor, the unfortunate and the over-burdened. There are countless others of less prominence. If their example were followed by all who have the same means and the same powers, no one can doubt that the greatest evils afflicting humanity would be cured.

"I Wonder If They Will Hang Me?"

"In the gray sadness of the morning the girl could not resist the impulse so common to those who have guilty knowledge of such crime to creep back to the scene of it. And there she showed—bending over his dead body, her face pale and drawn, her eyes staring—almost the only weakness in her whole line of conduct, when she sobbed out huskily: 'I do not know this man!'"

Will This Strange Girl, in Jail Because She Insists She Was the Murderer of Her Own Betrothed, Though All the World About Her Knows She Is Innocent, Go to the Gallows Rather Than Involve the Man She Loves More Than Her Own Life?

PRETTY little Emma Stephany, although ill-taught and unused to the ways of the great world beyond her narrow environment, sits in her cell in the jail at Pottsville, Pa., a veritable sphinx.

By all the rules by which detectives' experience has taught them to weigh the probabilities of guilt or innocence, Emma Stephany is no murderess. Yet over and over again she has raised her hand and declared to them:

"I tell you that I killed him—I shot him with his own revolver."

"What did you do with the revolver after the shooting?"

"I threw it over the fence."

"You ought to know that James Frizzell never had a revolver. Why do you risk your neck by telling such a story?"

And then the girl, her bosom heaving with agitation, would declare again that it was she who had shot James Frizzell.

"Why did you do it? He was your lover. You were to be married to him." And then, in a frenzy of dread of something which is the great mystery of this strange case she would wail:

"No one else did it! Oh, I did it! I did it! It was an accident, but I, and no one else, killed James Frizzell!"

For weeks and weeks her jailers have kept a close watch upon her in the hope that some unguarded act, some uncontrollable access of emotion during her long nights in her dismal cell—which overlooks the jail yard in which six Molly Maguires of the coal regions were hanged in a single hour—would betray her and offer a solution of the mystery.

But all the enlightenment they gained for their pains was when one night last week she rose from her cot and walked to the grated window and, after gazing out into the jail yard with its grewsome memories, murmured:

"I wonder if they will hang me?"

This remark, made at such an hour, when she believed herself to be quite alone, was interpreted to be the expression of one who, knowing herself to be really innocent, wondered if it could actually be possible for the law to send to the gallows a guiltless person.

As none of the detectives engaged upon the case had given credence to her "confession," the scene just described seemed to add force to their theory that the girl had taken the crime upon herself in order to save the real murderer.

Then whom could the real criminal be? This is still a mystery. Is he a second lover who kept himself in the background so effectually that not even his name is known, who had won her from Frizzell? She is said to have made to a member of her family, who reported it to the police, one remark which hinted at such a condition of affairs.

"I must shield him, or he will not marry me."

But ever since her arrest upon her own confession she has steadfastly denied caring for any man except the one she declares she shot. If she is shielding the real murderer, she certainly is doing it thoroughly.

There is no doubt that, whatever her own part in the tragedy, Emma Stephany knows all about the murder of James Frizzell.

Early in the day of July 4, this year, the body of this young man was found in a Pottsville street, shot through the heart. Before the body was removed a crowd gathered about it. One of these curious persons was Emma Stephany. She leaned over the prostrate form, shaken, agitated.

"Do you recognize him?" a policeman asked her.

"I do not know this man," she sobbed, and walked away.

When the identity of the dead man was revealed to the police—that he had lately been the accepted lover of Emma Stephany—they immediately went to the girl's home and questioned her. The result showed her to be either a murderess or a woman phenomenally gifted with powers of subtle reasoning exerted with some mysterious object in view.

She sat in silence while her thoroughly alarmed mother declared that her daughter had retired at her usual hour—which was early—and had not left her room during all the night of the murder. The elder woman went, lamenting:

"He was such a fine young man. I am sure he would have made a good husband for my daughter."

"When you looked at the body in the street, why did you say that you did not recognize it?" demanded one of the policemen of the girl.

"I was frightened," she murmured.

"Who is this other young man you have been keeping company with lately?"

The shaft went straight home.

"It is false," said the girl, turning pale. "I have been keeping company with no other man."

The police were really nonplussed. They started to leave the house. Strangely enough, this seemed to alarm the girl more than ever. They did not then have any reason, suspicion that there had been rival lovers, so they were taken wholly by surprise when Emma Stephany suddenly rose and said, in her mother's presence.

"Take me with you. I was not home last night. My mother thought I was, but I was out. Take me with you. I killed James Frizzell."

Shielding the Real Slayer.

The policemen were dumfounded. The poor mother fell on her daughter's neck, half fainting.

"How did you do it?" demanded the officer.

"I shot him with his own revolver," she said. "It was an accident. Take me with you; I will explain later."

The officers had no alternative. They had to carry the girl off to jail, charged by her own confession with having killed her lover.

But she made no further explanation except to declare that she had thrown the revolver "over the fence." She became the Sphinx of the Pottsville jail, whose pale face still gives on answer to those who try to read it.

In jail the girl's cunning in her efforts to shield the real murderer—according to the accepted police theory—grew sharper. Knowing that any letter she wrote would be opened and read by the authorities, she penned and addressed to her mother a confession that she really had killed Frizzell, she had used Frizzell's own revolver, which she had hidden in her room.

"Be quick," she wrote; "take James's revolver and hide it. Then put in its place my father's revolver. When the police search my room they will find it, and this will clear me."

This was not very good logic, but it helped confuse the authorities. The letter was never delivered to the mother. The police searched the girl's room—and found no revolver of any description.

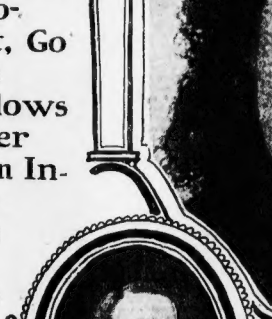
They also searched the vicinity of the murder, where there was a board fence inclosing a vacant lot. They searched every inch of ground beyond the fence, but found no revolver.

At length they learned on good authority that Frizzell, a most peaceably inclined young man, had never carried a revolver.

All these circumstances strengthened the growing theory in the minds of police and detectives that the girl was innocent of all except knowledge of the crime; that she had some powerful motive for shielding the real murderer.

But here they lost the trail, which they have not yet been able to recover. They were unable to find any one who had seen or heard of Emma Stephany in company with any man except James Frizzell.

They had to work upon only the framework of a mysterious romance dealing with a strange man, living, perhaps, in a neighboring city, who occasionally met Emma Stephany secretly; that it was him she really loved; that she still "kept company" with James Frizzell for the sake of appearances and to satisfy her parents, who wished her to marry him; that on the night of the tragedy, not expecting this mysterious lover, she had walked out with Frizzell; that the stranger, finding them together, flew into a rage, shot his rival dead and fled the city.



James Frizzell, the Murdered Youth.

THE SORROWFUL LITTLE EMMA STEPHANY

A Doctor a Few Doors Away.

As it was on the eve of Independence Day, with crackers of all sizes exploding in all directions, the report of the shot that killed Frizzell was not distinguished from numerous similar explosions. The shooting occurring in a street little frequented, the body of the murdered man was not discovered until the next morning.

There is still another reason for disbelieving Emma Stephany's "confession." She declared that she had shot Frizzell by accident. If this had been true, and she loved him, and him only, would she not immediately have sought assistance in case that his life might be saved, if possible?

In the same block, only a few doors away—as Emma Stephany must have known—lived the most famous surgeon in that part of the State. In five minutes she could have had him on the spot, for he was at home all the night.

If, as the authorities suspect, Frizzell was shot to death by his mysterious rival, who was the man really loved by this strange girl, it is natural to suppose that her first impulse would be to save the slayer. To call a doctor, to raise an alarm would have been fatal to this object.

Therefore Frizzell's body was left lying in that obscure street, and during the half dozen hours that intervened before its discovery the murderer was able to efface himself. So the police argue.

In the gray sadness of the morning the girl could not resist the impulse so common to those who have guilty knowledge of such crime to creep back to the scene of it; and there she showed, bending over the dead body, her face pale and drawn, her eyes staring, almost the only weakness in her whole line of conduct, when she sobbed out huskily: "I do not know this man."

Ever since her arrest Emma Stephany's manner has been truly Sphinx-like, except for her confession that she was the murderess. Even that confession, admitting that it is false, adds a resemblance to the Egyptian emblem of mystery, for it is the most baffling circumstance with which the detectives have to deal.

"I wonder if they will hang me?" she asks of herself.

"If I do not shield him, he will not marry me," she is reported to have said.

Will she go to the gallows rather than involve the man she loves? No one who has studied her ventures to say—she is such a strange girl.

Don't Love Your Husband to Death.

MEN in love are delighted to be told that they are never absent from the thoughts of their sweethearts, but the husband finds this consciousness a trifle wearing.

As bad as the clinging vine is the woman who makes her devotion too incessant.

The wife who never thinks of anything or anybody but her husband is apt to persecute him with her attentions at inopportune times.

She is never tactful, never conscious that he wants to be alone occasionally, is never capable of making herself and her affections a novelty to him.

Attractive girls have been known to lose admirers who would have been candidates for their hands had they not oppressed them with their attentions.

Each man—in his turn—made lovelike advances to her, and to each instance she gave her heart too rapidly—or, rather, she gave them to understand her surrender too easily.

She wrote two letters to one of theirs, she planned interviews, and she rebuked and scolded if they failed to meet her half way.

A wife often makes the same fatal error. Every hour of the day she asserts in some manner her complete devotion.

She has no plans, no hopes, no ambitions, no purposes, no pleasures that are not laid before her husband, and he is expected to devote every spare moment to her.

She surprises him frequently at his office at lunch hour. She meets him at the corner of the street when he comes home a trifle late, and she "goes a piece" with him, as the children say, in the morning.

In fact, she nearly drives the poor man into a retreat for the insane with her devotion.

No human being can love too deeply. An all-absorbing love glorifies the universe and ennobles the character of the one who loves and can transform the life and nature of the one so loved. But it is most unwise to always display that love in its fullness.

New Ways For Girls To Earn A

How the Independent Young Woman May Now Select E ployment to Suit Her Own Taste and Capacity and Make Herself Self-Supporting.

PERHAPS the most significant fact in the recent evolution of the conditions of labor is the enormous increase in the employment of women and in the forms of work open to her.

Woman to-day lives in a different world from that in which she moved a generation ago. Then it was regarded as settled that woman was by nature excluded from two classes of employment which include all the most desirable positions. These two classes were (1) Forms of employment requiring executive ability, initiative, originality and high mental capacity, and (2) forms of employment requiring physical strength and courage. It was said that she could only do routine work, and that of a kind not requiring much physical strength. The position of stenographer, and sometimes that of an inferior clerk, was the highest she could aspire to in the business world. The idea of a woman at the head of a bank or any important financial or wholesale business establishment would have been laughed at.

Now that is all changed. Women manage banks, direct all kinds of businesses, arrange commercial treaties with foreign Governments, discover gold mines and organize gold mining companies. In fact, they conduct all the loftiest and most dignified forms of business which it was supposed until recently required the mighty mind of a man for their discharge.

Another great change has happened in the woman's world. The old idea that she could not do any work that required physical strength or endurance is completely upset. Woman is now a policeman, a contractor, an explorer, a farmer, a skipper, a pilot, a surveyor, a blacksmith, a cowboy, a cabman, an expressman and a miner. She follows all the most strenuous occupations with eminent success. It is a core myth that she does not possess physical strength. If she is at all inferior to man in that respect, she makes up for it by superior ruse, tact and strategy.

Close observers of woman's progress say that she has all a man's qualifications for carrying on the world's work, and a great many more besides. She is more sober and even-tempered than man. She has a relentless energy and industry that are often lacking in some of the ablest men. She is never swayed by passion. She is not carried away by sentiment. She never forgets her own interests. She has a tenacious memory. She is not handicapped by a foolish and misplaced fondness for the other sex, which will often make the most astute male capitalist an easy victim of a petticoated financier.

The United States Census Bureau has made a special inquiry into the occupations of woman and has discovered some astonishing results. It finds that among 303 kinds of female employment that of baseball umpire occupies 75 women, and that of stenographer 178. There are 5,319,398 women engaged in working for pay, of whom 2,222,877 are in occupations other than domestic service.

Probably the strangest and most unfeminine occupation followed by any woman in the United States is that chosen by Miss Nettie Payne. She is a sergeant of police at Butler, Pa. At night she is in command of the police, directs the work of the patrolmen and has to deal with drunkards, highway robbers and other disorderly and criminal persons who are usually caught at night.

Miss Claire Ferguson is a deputy sheriff at Salt Lake City, and has won renown by her fearlessness in suppressing disorder.

A Sweet and Gentle Undertaker.

Mrs. Jennie W. Ragsdale is carrying on the business of licensed undertaker, embalmer and funeral director at Woodlawn, O. She conducts her delicate task with great tact and gentleness, which are especially valuable qualities at the sad ceremonies where her services are required. Mrs. Ragsdale is of such attractive and refined appearance that anyone would esteem it a pleasure to be embalmed by her, if he were conscious of it. She has already introduced some sensible reforms in the formation of funeral processions; she keeps the relatives of the deceased in the house until friends and acquaintances have entered the carriages, which is an improvement on the usual custom. Mrs. Ragsdale makes it her special business to care for the bodies of women and children, but she is willing to do any other work. She is a graduate of the Cincinnati College of Embalming.

Miss Susie J. Brayton is a veterinary surgeon and extremely skilful at performing operations on horses, dogs and all other animals.

At Savin Hill Beach, Mass., there is a life-saving crew composed of Miss Agnes Kerney (captain), Miss Georgiana Hine, Miss Margaret Will and Miss Eunice Slane. They are splendid swimmers and save the lives of bathers who get into difficulties without distinction of sex.

Miss Virginia Pope keeps a bird hospital in New York. Parrots are her most lucrative patients.

The most lifelike artificial flowers are made by Miss Susie Meyer, of New York, out of bread crumbs. They have the appearance of real flowers and are quite different from the ordinary manufactured kind.

The Hamburg American Steamship line has started a special staff of nurses to take care of seasick women. Miss Selma Henkensiefken, of New York, is the first to take up this work. She has gone to sea on the Amerika. Her help will enable a woman to regain her health by means of an ocean voyage.

No occupation requires a greater combination of physical vigor and business ability than general contracting and lighterage. Yet this is the business carried on with eminent success by Mrs. Theresa H. Shannon-Sheridan, of New York. Once she was devoted to literature and the higher learning, but when her husband died she realized that the best way of earning a good income was to carry on his business as a general contractor. She took it up manfully. She gained the contract to build the new pier at the foot of West Ninety-second street. It is a wonderful spectacle to see this refined and comely but sturdily-built woman, clad in immaculate overalls, directing with absolute mastery the noisy, troublesome horde of laborers and longshoremen, who work for her. The Czar of Russia would be happy if he could command such obedience as this American empress of labor.

One of the most successful and daring mining prospectors in Death Valley, Cal., is Miss Lillian Malcolm. She is handsome, graceful and refined, but possessed of enormous physical strength and endurance. She has had great success in finding deposits of gold and copper. Her largest interests are in the Funeral Range, in Death Valley, and she also has interests in the Tonopah and Bull Frog ranges. Many a narrow escape from death has Miss Malcolm experienced in the awful Death Valley. She has been in danger from sand storms, cloudbursts, wild beasts, snakes, robbers and sudden death in every form. Her trusted guide and companion is Bill Kees, an Indian half-breed of strong and original character.

"Bill Kees' once saved me when I was dying of thirst in the valley," she explained. "He is a half-breed, but an excellent guide. One day a story came out from the valley that a man almost dead from bullet wounds had been seen riding through the valley. Bill Kees was charged with the shooting. I was in the East and read the press accounts of the affair. I hurried to San Bernardino, where I had a pack outfit arranged for me. I felt that Bill was innocent, but was determined to find him under any circumstances. The sheriff begged me not to attempt the trip, saying it meant sure death. I started out with goodbys from strapping men who confessed they believed their goodbys would be the last. I kept on and finally found Bill. He was too delighted to answer my questions at first. I told him he was coming back with me, and he had no objections.

"'Would you come back with them?' I asked, nodding my head, meaning the officers of the law. Bill smiled, and with his face lit up with an Indian's savagery, patted his gun in answer. There would have been some shooting had the officers of the law come across Bill and attempted to put him under arrest. Everything was cleared up against him."

One of the richest gold mine owners in the Klondike is Miss Frances Frits, now of Council City, Alaska. She went to the Klondike as a typewriter, learned the science of gold mining thoroughly, and then became Deputy United States Recorder of Claims. In this position she learned the location of the best claims in the country and obtained possession of them when they were for sale. In a little while she became a millionaire, while the average miner went home no better off than when he came.

While some women are unearthing the raw gold in the Wild West, at least one is promoting gold mines in the East. Miss Maude de Haven Ogan, a brilliant society woman, of the oldest American ancestry, is president of the Maude de Haven Gold-field Mining Company. She has interests in other gold mines and is now planning a consolidation of them, which may prove a real gold trust. Miss Ogan divides her time generally between New York and Washington, and in spite of her great business cares she contrives to go out a great deal in society. Miss Ogan is a descendant of Mary Ball Washington, the mother of George Washington, and is therefore collaterally related to the first President of the United States. The Ogans claim the enormous unsettled estate of Joseph Ball. Another ancestor of Miss Ogan was Jacob de Haven, who lent money to the Government at the time of the Revolution.

A Beauty Who Negotiates Treaties.

Mrs. Ella Rawls Reader is a founder of international reputation. She planned the treaty with Bavaria, which made the United States responsible to Europe for that country's debts and subsidings. The treaty was defeated, but President Roosevelt thought it was a fine thing. Mrs. Reader did some work for the Peruvian Government, for which she obtained control of a mine worth $12,000,000. She has done several little things like that. Mrs. Reader was once a showgirl in Birmingham, Ala., her native place. She practised stenography in New York before she went into high finance. She is as beautiful as she is businesslike.

Mrs. J. Alden Gaylord conducts a bond brokerage business at 15 Broad street, New York. At No. 60, in the same street, Miss Kate Giles, a charming golden-haired girl, issues the Giles Cotton Crop Report, which is read with eager interest all over the world. Last year Miss Giles's estimate of the cotton crop proved correct and the Government estimate wrong. Miss Giles began work as a clerk for a man who collects crop statistics.

"There is a man in the cotton world," said Miss Giles—"you probably know him—who has 40,000 or 50,000 correspondents in the cotton belt. His facilities are very great, but they are used for his own benefit, not those of his subscribers. The same is true of every house which itself deals in cotton. It was even shown, as everybody knows, that some one in the Government was sending out incorrect information as to the cotton crop, knowing that it was incorrect, for speculative purposes.

"It is the pride of my life," said Miss Giles, "that I know how to collect cotton statistics and that my reports are known and acknowledged to be reliable. Those are the only two things in the world I am proud of, but I am very proud of them. No human being can tell just how many bales of cotton will be produced any year, or how much land will be planted to cotton, but a good estimate can be made, and it is my pride that my estimate has never been far out of the way. From long practice it has become almost an instinct with me to estimate."

Miss Amanda Clement, a student in Yankton College, S. D., umpires professional baseball games, an occupation that is commonly supposed to be the most perilous open to an American citizen. She has an eye like an eagle, a voice to command an army, gives her decisions like a flash and never permits them to be questioned. No one has ever been heard to yell "Kill the umpire" at this beautiful Hebe in the short blue skirts. She can throw a baseball 206 feet and is a splendid all-round athlete.

Mrs. Pallo Wilcox, of Lincoln, Neb., was qualified as a school teacher and a stenographer, but when she applied for work at these occupations she found the positions all held by men. Then she turned to blacksmithing, which most men find too hard, and has made a great success of it. She has educated two of her girls to be expert bicycle repairers and one of them runs a threshing machine. Mrs. Wilcox may therefore say that she is not only an accomplished blacksmith herself, but that she has raised a family of charming young lady blacksmiths.

Mrs. M. H. Holland, formerly of Chicago, has been appointed thumb print expert of the Secret Service at Washington. She began the study of thumb prints fifteen years ago at Scotland Yard, London, and has devoted almost her whole life to it. Once she has obtained a print of a man's thumb she can identify him by it, even if she had to pick him out of all the people in the United States.

Mrs. Ogden McClure, daughter of the late General A. C. McClurg, has obtained her certificate as pilot and master on the Great Lakes. She commands the steam yacht Sea Fox and is qualified to pilot any ship throughout the Lakes. She is the first woman to attain this position, in order to retain her certificate, and had not only to understand navigation and all the peculiarities of the Great Lakes, but she had to prove that she was physically able to endure the hardships of her calling.

Mrs. Rose E. Watkins has obtained her certificate from the United States Government to act as pilot on the Illinois rivers. Unlike Mrs. McClure, she does the work for a living. She pilots the steamship Illinois.

Guides have long been difficult to obtain in the Maine woods and the Adirondacks and several girls have now taken to this lucrative and exhilarating calling. Miss Cornelia T. Crosby, of Phillips, Me., is a Maine guide, who is famous for her skill as a fly fisher, rifle shot and canoeist. Mrs. Jennie Preese and Miss Ethel Harlow are also skilled guides. These women wear high boots, short leather skirts and clothing that will stand the hardest wear. Bears have no terror for them.

Mabel Eaton Farnum, divorced wife of William Farnum, actor, has opened a stock brokerage business in the Railway Building, Chicago.

"I've always been a lucky woman," said Miss Eaton, toying with a diamond shield on her ring finger. "At the races I always have been able to pick the winner, and I have known when to play a long shot safely. I intend to make money for my customers and I am putting my whole soul into the business."

Miss Virginia Pope, the Able Bird Doctor.

There is a boy at the blackboard. Women in automobile cloaks hover around the little instrument or lounge back in the mahogany chairs to watch the quotations.

"We are doing only a high-class brokerage business," she said, "and deal only in gilt-edged securities. No mining stocks or wildcat insurance stocks for us. We furnish a half-hour telephone service, keeping our customers posted on the market changes."

The various positions in a bank were at one time regarded as peculiarly sacred to men, like the character of angel in ecclesiastical sculpture. Now there are over 100 women in the United States occupying such positions as president, vice-president or cashier. Their names can be seen by anyone who searches as up-to-date banking directory.

A Hundred Women Bankers.

Then, there is Mrs. Hetty Green, who is said to control a majority of the stock of the Chemical National Bank, of New York, one of the largest in the country. Her business is that of money lender.

Perhaps the most romantic career among women bankers is that of Mrs. Anna Martin, president of the Commercial Bank of Mason, Tex. Her father was a wealthy manufacturer in Germany. Reverses compelled the family to emigrate to this country and they settled in Texas when that State was at its wildest, two years before the war. Their home was a log cabin. Battles with Indians who burnt the roof over their heads and fights with robbers and cattle stealers were of almost weekly occurrence. Then Mrs. Martin was left without resources through the death of her parents, and she set to work bravely to make a living for herself. She first kept a store, became a leading capitalist and finally became president of the chief bank of Mason.

Mrs. V. P. Church is the cashier and leading officer of the Bank of Joplin, at Joplin, Mo. She is regarded as responsible for the extraordinary success of this bank, which, with a capital stock of $5,000 has surplus funds of $250,000 and deposits of $476,579.

Mrs. W. E. Morgan is superintendent of the largest coal mine at Joplin, Mo. This flourishing little town comes very near to realizing, in a practical way, the female community which Tennyson foreshadowed in "The Princess." Its population has increased more rapidly than any town in the United States, chiefly by immigration.

Miss Catherine Williams has just been elected president of the La Grange National Bank, of La Grange, Ind. She is the first woman to occupy such a position in the State. Her father was formerly vice-president of the bank.

Miss Ella Demorest organized the State Bank of Pretty Prairie, Kan. She is its cashier and only paid officer. She employs only girl clerks as far as possible, and this financial institution has an exquisite air of feminine daintiness about it. Men are welcome to deposit their money there and are happy to avail themselves of the privilege.

The complicated social life of New York and the participation in it of many persons who were brought up under entirely different conditions have created a great many curious employments for women. For instance, there is a girl whose work consists of teaching others how to order luncheon artistically and how to eat it in a decorous manner.

Show girls have proved the most successful agents in selling automobiles. Among the warmest admirers of the drama there are a great many rich men who own automobiles and who invite their theatrical friends to ride in them. A pretty girl can often induce a man to try a new machine, and while she is riding with him she can do a great deal to persuade him that it is running beautifully. Her commission on the sale of a big machine will usually amount to $300 and sometimes to $1,000. Thus she can add greatly to her modest salary in a perfectly legitimate manner.

All the new and strange enterprises of women do not lead them into muscular, masculine and unesthetic ways. Indeed, some of the new jobs they are getting are more delightfully luxurious and epicurean than anything that was ever heard of before. For instance, there is the calling of the fashion girl. The best dressmakers, who charge $300 or $400 for a decent garment, employ handsome girls to travel about the world and visit the fashionable resorts, wearing the clothes supplied by their employers. All these girls are required to do is to wear fine clothes all day long and look nice. Those who have important social relations go to Newport, while others just show themselves in the prominent crowds at Saratoga or Long Branch, or exhibit themselves at the New York Horse Show, or parade through the corridors of the Waldorf-Astoria. As soon as a woman with money and social ambition sees another perfectly dressed she is sure to try to find who makes the stunning clothes, and in this case her curiosity will be gratified. Miss Blanche Maury, a girl belonging to a well-known New York family, who wished to be self-supporting and independent without going in for grubby masculine occupations, has made a splendid success of this work.

The fashion girls are paid to go to Europe to show themselves at the places where rich American tourists swarm, like Monte Carlo and the great restaurants of Paris and London, and also to pick up fashion hints from the European society women.

Enterprising Women Lawyers.

A Bureau of Ideas is a remarkably novel institution established by Mrs. Gabrielle Stewart Mulliner, a leading New York lawyer, at her office in Fifth avenue, New York, near the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. She has the assistance of other New York women lawyers and philanthropists. Mrs. Mulliner gives advice and suggestions to women who are in need of them without charge. Women go to her and ask about getting divorces from their husbands and, in the majority of cases she persuades them to make it up.

Mrs. R. A. Kidder is president of the Nevada County Narrow Gauge Railroad of California. She has raised it to a position of prosperity after personally superintending the reconstruction of the roadbed.

Mrs. Leonidas Hubbard, after her husband had died in the wilds of Labrador, took up his work and traveled 600 miles into the interior. She explored an utterly unknown region, traveling 300 miles in a canvas canoe up the George River.

Mrs. Mae Orn Russell operates oil wells producing 1,000 barrels a day in Wayne County, Ky.

The strenuous calling of a drummer is followed by Mrs. Alton Milliken, of Bangor, Me. She sells oil.

The United States Government has sent Miss Alice Thompson as oil expert to Hawaii to report on the possibilities of enlarging the agricultural products of the islands.

Many girls in various parts of the world are going in for farming of all kinds and are making a great success of it. Two New York bachelor girls, Miss Ada and Miss Mildred Fairfield, have started a farm at Terryville, Conn., a popular Summer resort, where as usual in such places all the fresh vegetables and fruit are brought from New York. The girls have ploughed and planted two acres, half of it to potatoes. They expect to raise 500 bushels of potatoes, to sell them for $1 a bushel and to clear $250 or $300 from that acre. They are now selling boiled radishes and lettuce, and have sold 1,000 tomato plants raised under cheesecloth from seeds planted in April.

The other acre will include a big vegetable garden, a strawberry bed and a scrap of pasture for the horse. They keep bees enough to supply their own table. They hired a man to do the ploughing and hoe the potatoes. They are enjoying liberty and a living.

Miss Grace M. Varree's business consists of bringing diamonds and other precious stones from Europe to the United States. In eight years she has brought over $30,000,000 worth.

Mrs. George McC. Reynolds and Miss Nina P. Howard, of Glencoe, Ill., are running a flourishing violet farm. They send 2,000 violets a week to the market.

Mrs. Vincent Butts and her beautiful daughter, Catharina, conduct a novel farm at Newton Upper Falls, near Boston. They call it the Oriental and European Vegetable Farm, because they raise all kinds of rare foreign vegetables, which are difficult to obtain in this country.

The Western Union Telegraph operator and local manager at Chester, Pa., is a pretty girl of nineteen, Miss Nannie G. Hall.

The Newest Greek Dance Craze

REGINA BADET, THE WONDER OF PARIS, SHOWING PHOTOGRAPHICALLY THE SUCCESSION OF CLASSIC MOVEMENTS IN THE NEW GREEK DANCES, IN "APHRODITE," THE NEW OPERA AT THE OPERA COMIQUE.

SOMEWHAT slowly, but surely, the stage dance as it is seen upon the stage is drifting back to the classic model of the ancient Greeks. Within the last few years, this movement has received great impetus through the vogue of Isadora Duncan, the American "Barefoot Dancer," who created a furore even in Athens, by the fidelity with which she revived the poems preserved in old Greek bas reliefs, attired in flowing white draperies and sandals of that time.

And now Paris seems to have gone mad over another priestess of the Greek dance —that madness being, perhaps, the more violent because the favorite character portrayed by the dancer is Aphrodite, the favorite feminine deity among the pleasure-loving Parisians.

Isadora Duncan's rival, or duplic, is an exquisitely formed young French actress, Mlle. Regina Badet, who plays an important part in "Aphrodite," now running at the Opera Comique in Paris. "Aphrodite" is an opera of which the play is Miss Mary Garden, that American soprano whom the Parisians have most distinguished since American singers began to make their debuts there.

The critics say that Miss Garden never had a better part, nor ever sang better. She is the central figure in the action, being, in fact, Venus; but when Mlle. Badet appears on the same stage in her voluptuous "invocation to Venus" the applause is not for the prima donna, but for the premiere danseuse, with her dark locks vine-wreathed and her graceful body white-draped to the sandals, which she wears as though born to them.

As in the case of Isadora Duncan, the postures of Mlle. Badet are copied from festive Greek sculpture. She brings to life a whole frieze in the space of one dance. Apparently the only criticism that can be made upon her performance is not to be directed at her, but to the powers of the Opera Comique, who selected the costume designs.

In this respect Miss Duncan remains the real priestess of the revived Greek dance, her draperies being faithful copies from authentic sculptures of the period represented. The modern French stage, it appears, demanded something more voluptuous, more sensational than this; so Mlle. Badet's fine form is displayed almost with the abandon which characterizes the dancers in "Streets of Cairo."

It is only fair to the dancer to add, however, that her poses are not Oriental, but truly Greek, and in keeping with the classically severe stage settings. Two of these in which she appears are the atelier of the sculptor Demetrion and the interior of the Temple of Aphrodite.

Of course, the Greek dance represented emotions in postures and slow, rhythmical movements of body and limbs, rather than the "twinkling toe" efforts of the ladies of the modern opera ballet. But in the intelligible expression of varying emotions it is undeniable that the ancients and the modern Orients in their dancing are not to be compared with the jigging and pirouetting now popularly understood as dancing. The former is an art on a par with that of acting, and infinitely more difficult to acquire than the art of modern stage dancing because of the higher order of intelligence demanded in the student.

The great vogue of Loie Fuller was a hint that the public was tiring of the kind of dancing which the Italian ballet spread throughout the world. Neither did Miss Fuller "dance" in the ordinary acceptance of the word. The management of voluminous draperies was the keynote of her success, and this meant posing rather than dancing. Here was the anathema of the so-called "skirt dance," the rhythmical movements of her body and limbs having the single object of displaying her draperies in the most beautiful and fantastic forms.

No thought, no idea, no definite emotion, no representation of character, emerged from any of these modern kinds of dancing. It was merely "keeping time to the music."

Perhaps the real reason why these animated copies of ancient Greek sculpture have such power to charm nowadays is because of the idea of perfect poise, perfect repose, which they convey to people whose life has come to be one continual fever of mental and physical effort without any sort of repose.

Modern costuming, precise and without grace, is undoubtedly an outgrowth of the tendency to move rapidly, to rush about with hardly any thought of bodily dignity. There is no rest for the body; emotions are not expressed, they are concealed. The difference between the moderns and the ancients is well conveyed by Isadora Duncan in giving her ideas of dancing:

"My idea of dancing is to leave my body free to the sunshine, to feel my sandled feet on the earth, to be near and to love the trees and all growing things. Two thousand years ago a people lived in Greece who had perfect sympathy and comprehension with the beautiful in nature, and this knowledge and sympathy were perfectly expressed in their own form of movement."

Evidently, in a more artificial way, purely for stage purposes, Mlle. Badet, in Paris at the Opera Comique, is realizing, in human flesh certain phases of the beautiful, frank and free life of ancient Greece. Perhaps her voluptuous attitudes expressive of what is comprehended in the worship of Aphrodite, may inspire other dancers to create Greek types more sedate in their beauty.

How to Live on Ten Cents a Day

THE scientists who tell you just what food elements best nourish the body, and explain to you all the processes of digestion—what to eat and how to eat it—have been joined by other scientists who tell you how to select the raw materials containing those elements in such a way that your outlay for sufficient nourishing and palatable food need not exceed ten cents per day.

The vegetarian "food faddists," who merely renounced all flesh foods in favor of indiscriminate use of vegetables, nuts and fruits, have been superseded by scientifically trained chemists of the kitchen who add flavor and digestive stimulus, as well as a certainty of requisite nourishment, to the fleshless diet, while reducing its cost to almost undreamed-of limit.

While it is settled that you can not live on ten cents per day and indulge in fresh meat at all, it is also proved that intelligent cookery, based upon exhaustive experiments with vegetable and dairy food products, is capable of pleasing the taste and satisfying the appetite while maintaining the best powers of body and mind.

The man who has carried these expert ments further and with more practical results than any one else is the Englishman, Horace Miles, amateur tennis champion of the world, and an all round athlete, who has not tasted fresh meat of any kind for ten years. The fact that Mr. Miles is a man of means, who won honors as a classical scholar at Cambridge University, and became a master at the famous Rugby School, gives him a position in England sparing him the charge of being merely a "food faddist."

Experimented to Cure Himself.

As in the case of Horace Fletcher, the great authority on how to eat, Mr. Miles's early experiments were made with the object of curing himself of indigestion. His first impulse was received in his country, where he studied Professor Atwater and Professor Chittenden on food values. He found, with Horace Fletcher, that most persons eat too much—that half of a third of what they customarily eat, better chosen and more carefully masticated, would bring about physical and mental improvement.

Mr. and Mrs Eustace Miles, the Promoter of the Pure-and-Cheap Living Scheme.

For some years past Mr Miles has conducted vegetarian restaurants in London, England, where fleshless foods are prepared with a view to the greatest palatability and nutritive value, and the smallest possible expense. Not only in his own, but in hundreds of other cases, he has demonstrated that in London the finest physical and mental condition can be maintained on a system of fleshless diet fortnightly cooked and flavored costing no more than six cents per day per person.

As he purchased his raw materials in quantities in one of London's notoriously cheap markets, it is estimated that the average cost of similar materials in the large cities of this country would make the cost of such a diet here about 10 cents per person per day. In his book on this subject, recently published, Mr. Miles says:

"I urge no readers to make a sudden change, to rush straight into the cheap diet, without finding out first what are the recipes most suitable for the individual palate and digestion, and other conditions. It is much better to make the trial gradually, here a meal and there a meal instead of the ordinary meal. For the new diet is not necessarily a pleasant one at the outset. Indeed, with all our experience behind us, we did not enjoy the first two or three days at all, whereas had we begun by substituting here a meal and there a meal during a period of a month or six weeks, we should have bought our results at the cost of very little unpleasantness.

Eat Little Before Midday.

"Yet since many readers demand a definite regime, I offer a sample day. Only it must be understood as by no means a good one. It may be a fairly good result likely to be carried for many months after a prolonged experimentation. It is offered just as a possibility of what certain people might in time come to prefer as an occasional menu.

"In the early morning there is a drink, which can be taken before or during breakfast. I have chosen here hot bran tea, with a little lemon flavoring.

"For breakfast there is a special treat. At least with which something else may follow, perhaps a little nut butter or grape jam. For my own part, I seldom eat anything before midday.

"Then a light yet sustaining midday meal of milk powder, mixed with hot water. It must be remembered that this meal both followed and preceded many hours of hard work, and therefore had to be light.

"Then an evening meal of thin vegetable soup, followed by a savory bean recipe and two or three special biscuits.

"Hitherto the personal experience of most people who have tried the fleshless diet has been limited to meals at "vegetarian" restaurants. I should like to say that my meals have no connection whatsoever with those meals as they are ordinarily served. For in too many "vegetarian" restaurants we have poor taste, poor consistency, and too much bulk considering the nourishment. In my meals I hope the tastes are fairly good, and the consistency fairly good; certainly in theory the nourishment is sufficient.

"I have taken as a basis a mean between the old fashioned idea that we should have about four ounces of body-building elements for protein daily, and the latest idea, substantiated by certain experiments of Professor Chittenden in America), that we should have about two ounces. Many prefer about three ounces a day, that is to say, about one ounce to a meal, if they have three meals a day.

"Dear foods are excluded. For example, fresh meat stands outside the six cents a day. A few cheap forms of fish are possible; but I cannot speak from experience as to their value, since I have not eaten fish for nearly ten years. Good eggs also are expensive. So are most of the patent cereal foods."

1. Separated Milk Powder, Dissolved in Hot Water.

Before my hardest games, and often before my hardest work, in 1905, I preferred to take some very simple form of midday meal, and especially separated milk powder, dissolved (it is very easily dissolved) in a tumbler of hot water. My chief prefers this, as a midday meal, to any other. It also agrees well with the porter of our flat, who has found my diet thoroughly satisfactory. The recipe is a simple one. You take, let us say, two ounces, or (if you like) three ounces of the separated milk powder, and you put it in a tumbler three-quarters full of hot water. You stir well, and then sip slowly. The taste is rather pleasant; the food is rich in body-building elements (proteid), and in the "salts" and sugar of milk.

2. Wheatmeal, Oatmeal, and Lentil Flour Bread.

½ lb. of Egyptian lentil flour.
8 oz. of separated milk powder.
2 tablespoonfuls of pure olive oil.
1 ½ tablespoonfuls of baking powder.

Mix all together to a medium consistency with cold water, and bake in a tin in slow oven for 2½ hours.

This bread is not only rich in body-building elements and (if there are such things) elements that nourish the brain; it also compels mastication, and so improves the teeth; it includes a certain amount of "fat;" it gives satisfaction; it helps the excretion.

3. Bean Savory Stew.

½ lb. dry haricot beans, soaked for 12 hours, then cooked in the same water, which they ought to absorb.
1 carrot.
1 tomato.
Pepper and salt if required.
A little sage or mixed herbs may improve the flavoring.

Cut up the onions, carrot, and turnip very small, and put them into a basin with the beans. Cut the tomato into thin slices, and lay these on the top. Add ¼ pint of water, and the pepper and salt, if required, and the herbs. Cover over with greased paper, and steam for 6 hours.

In this stew, the body-building elements are provided by the beans. If one ate some of my bread (or toast) or biscuits with it, one would get still more of those elements which cements henceforth I shall be able to call proteids or proteid without fear of misunderstanding.

5. Bran-tea.

Allow a handful of clean bran for a cup of bran-tea. Soak the bran with a few small pieces of lemon in water in a stew pan; then let this simmer for several hours. Afterward strain and sip while the tea is still warm.

This tea contains some of the most valuable "salts" of wheat, which ordinary people do not get in the form of bread, food, whether this be mixed with sugar or not; for such food is almost always gulped down without saliva; hence it generally ferments and creates a feeling, if not of indigestion at the time, at any rate of emptiness afterward. Porridge is the typical food of this sort. Ordinary porridge is not eaten, but swilled. By this silly way of swilling the porridge gets scarcely any saliva at all.

We must prepare foods in such a way that those which should be eaten slowly cannot by any possibility be eaten fast.

Why not divide foods into two classes, the wet and the dry? Let the wet foods, which are almost sure to be gobbled down, be such foods as will not hurt much if they are gobbled down; for example, there is the milk powder with hot water, and there is the soup; one might add the white of an egg. Such things are better eaten slowly, but they are not so disastrous eaten fast.

When foods need mastication and saliva, then let them be dry, and, if possible, crisp. For example, toast will be far better for most people than such bread or pastry as they will swallow almost without biting. The only requisite is that the crisp foods shall be also palatable.

"This is not a defence of gobbling, but it takes into account human nature as it is. People will eat far too fast. This being so, let them choose carefully what they eat fast, or let them take things which they cannot eat fast. No one can drink a hard-tack biscuit as he can (practically) drink a plateful of porridge. Take the hard-tack biscuit as the model, not of taste and pleasant consistency, but of compulsion. When things should be eaten slowly, let them be served in a form which compels mastication.

If mothers realized the importance of this principle for children, I believe that nearly nine-tenths of child-life would be saved. Let the undigested wet starchy foods be abandoned; let there be substituted dry crusts and rusks which the child must masticate, or else such foods as milk powder and water, which do very little harm when they are swilled down.

If, however, people decide to have wet starchy foods, then let them eat with them, in between the liquid mouthfuls, dry mouthfuls of biscuit or toast."

Among the many recipes given by Mr. Miles that come within the 10-cent per day schedule is the following:

Macaroni Cheese.

Half-ounce of butter.
Half-ounce of separated milk powder.
Four ounces of pipe macaroni.
Two ounces of grated cheese.
Salt and pepper if required.

Cook the macaroni in fast boiling salted water until tender; then add the following: Put one gill of water in a stewpan, add the butter and milk powder, and stir until the consistency is creamy; then add the grated cheese and the seasoning if required, and stir again till smooth. Pour the whole of this over the macaroni, brown in the oven, and serve hot.

The milk powder and macaroni and cheese together contain about one and three-tenths ounces of proteid, and plenty of fattening and heating elements.

Two Queer Lovers Looking For Wives

The Love-Lorn Crown Prince of Corea.

TWO young men princes both want to marry. One of them has sixty-three wives, but he is lonely and sad, and addresses to the moon pensive plaints for a sixty-fourth. He has sent a matrimonial ambassador to America to look over the assortment of marriageable maidens in the United States and send His Regal Highness photographs of the loveliest and most desirable of them. The Prince will decide which of the American maidens most pleases the royal eye, and will cable his ambassador to bring her to the Orient to share his throne.

The ambassador's task will then be to persuade the maiden, in fear of his royal displeasure if he is disappointed, that she must not go back without the future partner of Nos. 64. He has said with the pride of a follower of Buddha that he does not like wifeless or unwilling, no matter what international complications may ensue, even though this abduction of a modern Helen should precipitate a modern Trojan war.

But startling as is this proposal of one prince, the act of another is more astounding. Until this young man has found a wife to his liking, no girl in his kingdom may marry any one else. A thousand young women who had chosen their husbands and were preparing their trousseaux have been forced to suspend all prematrimonial activities until the prince has found a wife. A thousand engagements have been broken, or, at least, held in abeyance. A thousand honeymoons have been postponed. A thousand bridal gowns are wasting their finery on an irresponsive, unadmiring clothes closet. A thousand girls are awaiting the coming of the prince, either with trepidation or with hope, according to whether they are more faithful or more ambitious. And there are a few who are more ambitious than faithful, for there are more than a thousand young women in the kingdom, but there is only one crown prince.

The Prince who wants his loneliness with sixty-three wives relieved by a sixty-fourth who shall be an American is Prince Tatek, of Siam. Too other who is keeping a thousand young women single until he shall have sampled their charms and chosen the one who pleases him most, is Prince Low Geck, who some day will be the King of Siam.

Prince Low Geck, who is the ambassador of Prince Tatek to the court of love and beauty in the United States, said that he and Prince Tatek talked of beauty one starlit night in the gardens of the Prince's palace.

The Prince sighed and sighed and looked at the stars. "Although I have sixty-three wives there is a void in my life," he confessed. "I have not yet what the English call my affinity. Some of the sixty-three mates that have been provided for me are, an American visitor said three of them were, whom he caught peeping out of their casement windows, 'a bunch of comic valentines.' I have not called on them twice. I merely send my secretary with my card saying that I regret that I am indisposed. The others are pleasing, but they are so marvelously alike that one would do quite as well as sixty. A man has a harem. Why? Because he wishes variety. But Siamese maidens are as like as two peas minutes from the same tree. Tell me, Prince Low Geck, have you ever met a girl who was different from all the other girls in the world?

"I have visited the United States" replied Prince Low Geck with three sweeping salaams, the last of which bent his forehead upon the dew-kissed grass of the Prince's garden. At the Prince's eager request he told him of the women of America.

"Enough!" cried Prince Tatek, leaning forward, his eyes avid in the starlight. "I must have an American wife. I cannot leave the affairs of the kingdom to travel. Besides, it would be expensive and embarrassing to travel with sixty-three wives. You shall go to America and bring me a wife."

So Prince Low Geck received his commission, and in executing it he has visited California in discharge of his duty he will also visit Chicago, Boston, Washington and New York. He has asked the newspapers to assist him in his quest of a No. 64 Princess. He is a brave man, he says, but there is that in the bearing of the tall, athletic maidens he meets on the streets of American cities by day, that makes him afraid to accost them without accepted preliminaries, even with the offer of a title. Prince Low Geck has seen Miss Marguerite Clark and forwarded her photograph as that of a typical American girl to the Siamese Prince. He awaits the Prince's endorsement and instructions.

Should Prince Eul Wha, of Korea, visit this country he might be more successful. For Prince Eul Wha has no wife. Besides, for the picture of his wooing there is the background of one thousand waiting Korean maids, and no woman lives, American or otherwise, who does not few a thrill of delight at thought of bearing a big man away from other girls who would capture him, and when the number is a thousand, the girl feels her preening in prospection for the great reception guest. Beside the romantic Prince Eul Wha, heir apparent to the crown of the land of eternal peace has a tragic background.

His mother was a beauty of the time of her father, the king, Queen Min, his wife, was jealous of her. Her own child, who would have been the heir apparent had he been more favored, was half-witted. Queen Min brooded upon the fate's unkindness to her until she conceived a plot to murder her rival and kill the prince's children. Hired assassins entered the favorite's apartments and murdered her and her offspring. By a mere accident the heir-presumptive, whom the edict of Peking has declared the heir-apparent, was saved. Queen Min was afterward killed in the same fashion in which she had removed her rival. Prince Eul Wha came to this country eight years ago and for some time was a student of American customs at Roanoke College, Virginia. One of the customs which he mastered was that of admiring American women. That, perhaps is the reason the royal edict has decreed that he should have the privilege of looking upon the face of every maiden in Korea. His Lig does not desire an American daughter in law.

Yet, should the prince, after his inspection of the thousand waiting Korean girls, be still heart whole he may come to America and an American girl may yet sit on the throne of Korea, just as if Prince Low Geck's mission is successful an other may become some day an Empress of Siam.

Curious Discoveries About Lobsters--Nothing Personal

SCIENTIFIC investigation has just disclosed the amazing fact that the lobster is the swiftest of all the sea's inhabitants.

He travels at the rate of twenty-five feet in less than a second.

Marine architects and engineers are studying the lobster with a view of modeling future ocean leviathans on his lines. They hope thereby to build a boat which will cross the Atlantic in three days.

If an ocean steamship could travel in proportion to its length and else as fast as a lobster it would cross in a few hours.

Hence the question is seriously asked, is the lobster, the delectable American lobster, to give a new and amazing impetus to steam navigation?

Is the lobster to inaugurate an epoch in navigation in which all existing speed smashing records shall be forgotten?

It has taken many years for the Atlantic liner to make the five day trip.

The four-day trip has long been promised, but it still seems distant and uncertain.

Now there are marine architects who are seriously contemplating the building of a boat that will give us a three-day trip, without pausing to pass through the four day stage. And their hopes of attaining this marvelous result are built upon the lobster, the pair every day or every night lobster, rather, for this crustacean is nocturnal in his habits—the lobster as dear to the hearts of the show girl and her Johnnie.

But the men who are now giving days and nights to the study of the lobster are not considering him from a festive aspect. Their point of view is purely and strictly scientific. They are studying him to obtain hoped for revelations to the mechanism of speed.

Francis Hobart-Herrick, Ph. D., Professor of Biology in Adelbert College, of the Western Reserve University, who has given five years to study of the American lobster, has discovered that he can shoot through twenty-five feet of space in less than a second. The first boat floated was modelled on a fish.

Is it surprising that man should again go to a resident of the deep for hints in the arts of shipbuilding and navigation, but this time to a sea dweller of another order, to the King of the Crustacea, a title bestowed upon him by reason of his size and big strength, his abundance and his economic value?

Until within a few years but little was known of the lobster, nor even now is man's knowledge of him as complete as is desirable. For some reason unknown, he was neglected by the naturalists, possibly because of the difficulties that attended all efforts to become acquainted with his manners and customs, with his mode of life and the laws that regulated his birth and growth.

But now it is known that the adult lobster lives and feeds almost exclusively upon the sea bottom. When seen on land after capture the lobster may look awkward and ungainly, but in his own element he is both active and graceful.

When moving along the bottom of the sea, in his native home, he walks stiffly upon the tips of his slender legs, the large claws are extended forward in front of the head in a position which offers the least resistance to the water, while the two slender pairs of walking legs, which end in hard, spur like points, serve as picks to steady his motion.

Def ate swimmerets are attached vertically to the under surface of the "tail," each of them consisting of a short stalk and two very flexible blades, and these aid him greatly.

But by far the most powerful organs of propulsion the lobster possesses is its so-called "tail."

By the flexion of this "tail," aided by the swimmerets, all the lobster is enabled to make his wonderful backward flight through the water.

And it is the mechanism and operation of this tail of the lobster the men of science are now studying.

What they have fully solved the problem they have not themselves they are confident that they will have found the basis for a new form of propulsion that will give to the steamship a speed it can never attain by any conceivable modification of the improvement of the methods now in use.

It has taken more than a century of unremitting effort for the steamship to cut down the time required for the voyage across the Atlantic between New York and England to less than the six day limit.

When James Rumsey in 1787 sailed his steamboat in Virginian waters the highest speed he could obtain was four knots an hour. To propel it he employed jet propulsion, whereby a stream of water was discharged by a steam driven pump.

In 1790 John Fitch, using radial wheels as propellers for his steamboat, attained a speed of seven kn s.

John Stevens of Hoboken, in 1802, built a small screw propelled steamboat, twenty five feet long, which he used as a pleasure boat on the Hudson. But the art of steam engine building had not then advanced to a stage that would permit the introduction of a screw to basis of commercial service. So it was with paddle wheels that Robert Fulton's pioneer in Hudson River navigation, made her first trip to Albany on August 3, 1807.

Paddle wheels were used on all ocean and river steamboats until Ericsson came to this country in 1839 and superintended the placing of a screw propeller in the United States steamship Princeton, the first vessel that ever was equipped with one. Since for a new form of propulsion that would give to the steamship a speed it can never attain by any conceivable modification of the improvement of the methods now in use.

John Stevens of Hoboken, in 1802, built a small screw propelled steamboat, twenty five feet long, which he used as a pleasure boat on the Hudson. But the art of steam engine building had not then advanced to a stage that would permit the introduction of a screw to basis of commercial service. So it was with paddle wheels that Robert Fulton's pioneer in Hudson River navigation, made her first trip to Albany on August 3, 1807.

Paddle wheels were used on all ocean and river steamboats until Ericsson came to this country in 1839 and superintended the placing of a screw propeller in the United States steamship Princeton, the first vessel that ever was equipped with one. Since for a new form of propulsion that would give to the steamship a speed it can never attain by any conceivable modification of the improvement of the methods now in use.

It has taken more than a century of unremitting effort for the steamship to cut down the time required for the voyage across the Atlantic between New York and England to less than the six day limit.

When James Rumsey in 1787 sailed his steamboat in Virginian waters the highest speed he could obtain was four knots an hour. To propel it he employed jet propulsion, whereby a stream of water was discharged by a steam driven pump.

In 1790 John Fitch, using radial wheels as propellers for his steamboat, attained a speed of seven kn s.

What Mrs. Astor Could Not Get At Home.

YONKERS Mr. Waldorf Astor and his bride made a trip over to Bar Harbor, Me., the other day on the little steamer James T. Morse, which touches at Islesboro on her way from Rockland to Mount Desert. Mrs. Astor was the famous Southern beauty, Nannie Langhorne, and is a sister-in-law of Charles Dana Gibson, the artist. They have rented the Gibson cottage at Islesboro, on Penobscot Bay, for the Summer.

The Morse leaves Islesboro early in the morning and the young couple came on board without their breakfast. With some misgivings they sat down in the dining saloon and called Freeman Higgins, the steward.

"There probably wont be anything we can eat," said Mrs. Astor in a whisper.

"Well, if we order everything there is, we may discover something that isn't so bad, dear," said Mr. Astor, running his eye over the menu.

"Way, I never saw such blueberries."

Mrs. Astor exclaimed, when the order came. "And you are so far from the Boston market."

"Yes," said Steward Higgins, "we get them fresh picked every day at Brooklin, which is famous for blueberries."

"My dear, this cream is courteous; so thick and rich," said Mr. Astor, stirring his coffee. "What a splendid cup of coffee."

"It is pretty good," Mr. Higgins consented, "I buy the milk along the route and set it for cream in our cold room; then we know just what we are getting."

"Nice eggs, aren't they?" Mrs. Astor remarked. "We can't seem to get such eggs from Boston."

"Perhaps not," said the steward, "each day I buy forty dozen at Deer Isle from a farmer who raises them for me; we're paying twenty-one cents now."

"Good butter; where do you get it?"

"Well, there's an old lady near our Bargaintville landing that supplies me; it's home made and always fresh

"Just taste that fried cod-fish," Mr. Astor exclaimed. "How do you keep it so fresh and firm?"

"What a sweet, tender mackerel!" said Mrs. Astor, dropping a piece on her husband's plate.

"They ought to be good," said Mr. Higgins, pointing out of the window, "they were caught by those men you see fishing there. We will take on some more mackerel here at this landing we are just coming to."

"Well, Mr. Steward, we happened to order your local specialties, I see," said Mr. Astor.

"But not quite all of them," Mr. Higgins modestly replied, smiling. "I'm sorry you haven't tried our famous soft clams dug out there on Naskeag Point, which we are passing now, or our little broiled chicken raised over there at Sedgwick; and yesterday we had fresh bluefish caught in the morning off Northeast Harbor."

"Well, Mr. Higgins, I must say that I am not able to give Mr. Astor such a breakfast at home"—

"No," said Mr. Astor, interrupting his bride, "we would have to take a yacht and run over your route and gather up the fresh specialties which you seem to find

It is not every landing in order to compete with your bill of fare."

"It's a shame, Mr. Higgins, that you are not in charge of the cuisine of some of the great ocean liners; if you were I'm sure everybody would insist on traveling on your ship."

DOUBLOONS

A Thrilling Novel of Mystery, Tragedy and a Stolen Fortune.

By Eden Phillpotts and Arnold Bennett.

Synopsis of Previous Chapters.

Philip Masters, a gentleman in distress, is returning a night walk ... way London, when he sees a figure crawl out of a house and stop in a trench. The next morning the murdered body of Captain Pettifer, a retired sea captain, is found in the trench. The house is called the Corner House and is kept by Adrian Hilgay who furnishes lodging to distressed gentlefolk only at 12 cents a night. Philip meets an old friend, Sir Anthony Didring, from whom he wins two hundred and fifty pounds, which relieves his necessities.

He is then summoned to attend the inquest on the captain's body and falls under suspicion. A negro cook furnishes the important information that the dead captain had only two relatives—a brother with whom he quarreled and a daughter named Geralda on the stage. Mrs. Caroline Upottery, the captain's next neighbor at the Corner House, creates a sensation by deposing that she was ...

The Coroner expresses the opinion that the captain was murdered for the two thousand odd pounds that he had on his person. The evidence also shows that he had planned a search for hidden treasure and had incurred the enmity of a ... The jury returns a verdict of murder by some person unknown. Sir Anthony Didring takes Philip to his club to revive, a great ... Geralda, whom the baronet loves, has vanished.

"BUT what are they staring at?"

"They are a looking at it," the boy explained.

It dawned upon Philip's benighted intelligence that the crowd was staring at the Corner House, not in the expectation that it would fall down, or blow up, or give a display of fireworks, but merely because it was the Corner House and connected with a murder.

He elbowed himself into the mass, with difficulty, to the accompaniment of anathemas, edging along by the fenced trench where British workmen were still nonchalantly meandering through eternity. No policeman was in sight except one on the steps of the Corner House itself. Having reached a point opposite the front door, Philip struck bravely across Strange street. He had not achieved ten feet when some one spoke to him:

"If you're going into the house, I'll stick behind you."

It was a young man, slim and fair, dressed like a clerk, with a rather handsome face, quite spoiled by a terrible scar on the left cheek. What impressed Philip was the appealing and beautiful quality of the voice. He noticed that the man was extremely pale and breathing hard, the struggle to penetrate the pressing crowd was too much for his strength. Philip guessed that he might recently have come out of a hospital.

"Right you are," said Philip with cheerfulness.

In three minutes they had arrived at the policeman, who, after an explanation, let them in. The young man ran upstairs without another word to Philip, and, ignoring Mr. Hilgay, who stood in the door.

"Who is that?" Philip inquired of the landlord.

"Doesn't look very sharp," observed Philip.

"No, poor fellow!"

Philip also went upstairs slowly, and arrived at the summit of the first flight. He traversed still more slowly the passages, first to the left, and then to the right, to his room. There were indications in the passages that housepainters were sooner or later to begin their beneficent if deliberate ministrations; in fact, the essentials were present. He paused, as it were, in obedience to an instinctive impulse, before Mrs. Upottery's door. It was unlatched, as he could hear a movement and a slight, genteel cough. Then, ashamed of this impolite pause at a lady's portal, he passed into his own room, shut himself in and looked around. It was the first moment of daylight leisure he had had in his room.

He opened the window, being a healthy Briton, and glanced out into Little Girdler's Alley. He noticed now that the window was newly fastened in the wall. He perceived that the subdivision of the old large rooms of the house into cubicles had been attended by problems of lighting, and that in this instance the problem had been solved by making a new window, comparatively small, and nearly square, on the casement principle, but with four large panes. He leaned forward his body, and scanned Mrs. Upottery's window, and he discerned that the partition between Mrs. Upottery's cubicle and the next further on occurred exactly in the centre of one of the old window spaces, cutting it in two; here, the architect had left the outer frame of the window while altering the arrangement of the panes. The architect had certainly been very ingenious, and Philip, examining the partition between his own room and Mrs. Upottery's, saw that it was of exceptional solidity, and probably justified Mr. Hilgay's proud epithet of sound proof. He resumed his study of his window. Yes, a body might easily have been insinuated through it; the drop to the alley was thirteen or fourteen feet. There was no sign of wear and tear on the sill—no tell-tale smear of blood, no significant tuft of hair lodged in an interstice, no alluring scrap of blue cloth to match the dead captain's reefer jacket. In short, nothing on which to fasten suspicion. The innocence of that window and window sill was most discouraging to an amateur detective, and Philip could only say to himself with an air of deductive logic. "The captain was carried down the back stairs." Yet, on his way to Strange street, he had quite decided that the captain had been put through the window.

Nearly facing his own, on the opposite side of the alley, was another window, a dirty and sinister window, and the distance between the two was not more than eight feet. Instantly his mind began to run on collusions and corporations in crime, engineered by conspirators in different houses. Perhaps the clew to the mystery lay in the house on the opposite side of Little Girdler's Alley. He fixed his honest eyes on the sinister window, and, indeed, he could dimly perceive remarkable movements proceeding behind its vile glass—regular movements of a sweeping nature, and he stared with as much intensity as people were staring outside at the Corner House itself. The window seemed to conceal important and terrifying mysteries. Then he made out a long white object that shifted to and fro, and was soon afterward pained and shocked to discover in it nothing but a woman's arm. The woman was evidently brushing her hair.

The myteries appeared to be evaporating. Nevertheless he continued to gaze. And the movement stopped brusquely. A vague human form approached the window and opened it, and it proved to be that of a youngish woman with a hard and handsome face. She held a comb in one hand, and she leaned her elbows on her sill. She was not precisely dressed for church. She set about indicating to Philip by means of a stare compared to which his stare had been the timid wavering glance of a child, that she resented his curiosity. She succeeded perfectly in conveying to him this idea. He reddened, retired and shut his window. He withdrew from his window and sat down on the bed, but such was the crystal purity of Mr. Hilgay's glass that the woman still held him with her relentless eyes. She had defeated him; she meant to rout him. He rose and pulled down the blind. Thus abruptly ended the first series of his investigations into the circumstances surrounding the Captain's death.

Dusk was already falling. His eye caught a card of "Regulations of the Corner House" hung behind the door, and in order to read it he turned the electric switch, but light did not flash responsively forth, because the hour for electricity was not yet. He struck a match, lit a cigarette, and utilized the last flickers of the match to read the regulations. There was one relating to dinner. "Boarders are respectfully impressed that meals are served promptly in the dining-room. Breakfast 8:30 a. m., 4d. Table d'hote. Lunch 1 p. m., 8d. Table d'hote. Dinner 6.30 p. m., 10d. Clients wishing to join the table d'hotes should give notice at least one hour in advance. Otherwise an extra fee of twopence will be charged. Boarders are respectfully informed that payment must be made at the time of giving such notice." The words "respectfully informed" occurred seventeen times on the card, proving that Mr. Hilgay's attitude toward his customers was irreproachably correct.

Philip decided to dine in the house. With two hundred and fifty pounds in his pocket, he was conscious of a powerful desire to postpone the real commencement of the reign of economy until the morrow, and to fare very well, just that night, at the Cafe Royal. But native force of character, aided by his wish to acquaint himself with the inmates of the house, enabled him to resist the horrid temptation. After all, life was earnest. Moreover, he had a career to carve, and instead of dwelling on the Captain's murder, which did not in the least concern him, he must concern himself with the process of carving. He descended to the office and ordered his dinner from Mr. Hilgay, who ticked off his name in one of the ledgers on the desk in the office, and gave him a little receipt for tenpence.

A gentleman with an adventurous nose and an appearance of prosperity and self-possession was in the office with Mr. Hilgay, and this individual turned at once to Philip.

"Mr. Masters, I believe?"

"Yes," said Philip, gruffly, objecting to the voice.

"I am the special commissioner of the Evening Record. We are making a special inquiry into this-er-affair. I had the pleasure of seeing you in court this morning, and"—

"So glad it pleased you," said Philip. "If I had only been in the dock no doubt your pleasure also would have been special."

The special commissioner laughed easily. "I shall be very much obliged," he continued, "if you will give me a few moments."

"I will give you all the time there is," said Philip; "that is to say, twenty-four hours in every day. Take it every bit. I don't even ask to share it with you."

And he left the office and the special commissioner.

It is difficult to justify his behavior toward this representative of an august profession. The fact was, however, that the Evening Record had printed a special column in its best, facetious style on the ducal episode of the jiu-jitsu school, and Philip had not been enthusiastic about the tone of the references to himself.

He was just a little late for dinner through having dropped off into a doze during the process of excogitating upon his future; he had not yet recovered all the sleep lost on the night of the murder. He descended to the front basement, where Mr. Adrian Hilgay's paying guests refreshed themselves in unchallengeable respectability, with a certain nervousness. In the first place, he had prominently figured at the inquest, and the talk would certainly bear upon the inquest; he might be questioned; he might even be regarded with suspicion. And, in the second place he was really rather too well dressed for such an assemblage. To eat a ten-penny dinner in a frock coat that had cost five guineas only a couple of days before seemed to border upon imperfect taste. But what was he to do? He could not be changing his suits all day. And if he had changed at all at that hour he might, through sheer absent-mindedness, have changed into evening dress, which would have been to create a sensation.

He found some thirty out of the sixty clients of Mr. Hilgay seated at their long tables in the refectory. The boys were securing a brown stock soup; a few of the guests were absorbing the soup noiselessly, and a few were not. The place and the people looked extremely mournful. Philip at once perceived that nothing can be more tragic than gentility divorced from riches. There were far more gentlemen than ladies, and far more aged than youth; not one woman was young, or had been young recently, and Philip was decidedly the only man under forty. Clothes were sombre, vague, either too loose or too tight; linen was like snow long fallen. Conversation scarcely existed, and such talk as struggled into being was stupid and banal. He had expected to be greeted by a buzz of chatter about the inquest, to hear a vivacious conflict of theories concerning the identity of the murderer. But nothing of the kind. Misfortune, disappointment, failure and solitary life had found Mr. Hilgay's guests egotists of the most ferocious sort. They were swathed in innumerable thicknesses of their wrongs and their exasperated desires and their foiled hopes. The murder of all the captains of the mercantile marine would scarcely have disturbed them from their fakir-like contemplation of themselves which is the characteristic of genteel and lonely poverty.

They addressed themselves to their tenpenny meal withanearnestness of purpose that was almost sublime. Philip had taken a place at the end of the table nearest the door; half a dozen empty covers separated him from his next neighbor,a man in a dark gray suit and a red necktie; not a soul showed more than a passing, faintly hostile interest in him.

TWO BEAUTIFUL PICTURES FOR YOU

ROCK OF AGES represents one of the most beautiful themes of the Christian religion. The picture is beautifully done in many colors and is by far the most popular work of art we have ever handled.

ROCK OF AGES.

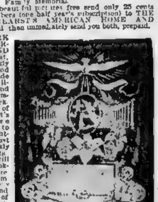
THE FAMILY MEMORIAL is a record-picture for keeping alive the memories of departed ones. Places are provided on each picture for names, dates, etc., of those who have gone before. Never in the history of the picture business has there been such demand for any single work of art as there has for the Family Memorial.

To secure both beautiful pictures free send only 25 cents for 26 weekly numbers (one half year's subscription) to THE NEW YORK HEARST'S AMERICAN HOME AND FARM, and we will then immediately send you both, prepaid.

THE NEW YORK HEARST'S AMERICAN HOME AND FARM is the great, new national weekly for the Home and Farm. It is made up of 32 highly illustrated pages and is published Thursday of each week. All the resources of the great Hearst's organization have been drawn upon to make this the brightest, cleverest, most interesting weekly publication of its kind. Here you will see all the provokingly funny picture stories the screamingly funny Happy Hooligan, Buster Brown, and Her Name Was Maud—and the dozen and one other creations of those master minds of mirth and fun, Opper, Dirks, Bunny Outcault and all the rest.



FAMILY MEMORIAL.

But the staff of the new weekly is too large and detailed to name it all here. We will, in passing, name only a few of the great "headliners" that will distinguish the new publication.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, the most brilliant woman in contemporary American Life.

"DINKELSPIEL," the inimitable, the man who has set all the world a-laughing.

MAURICE MAETERLINCK, Belgium's foremost living philosopher and litterateur.

CLARA MORRIS, the noted actress, who will write of life on the stage and of the busy world.

F. OPPER, universally acknowledged the world's greatest cartoonist, will offer his side-splitting stories in picture of "Happy Hooligan," "And Her Name Was Maud," and his dozen and one other marvellous creations.

PROFESSOR GARRETT P. SERVISS, who has magically transformed the mysteries of science into tales of marvellous romance, and—

DOROTHY DIX, the cleverest woman who has ever written on love, romance, and the things of the heart—these are but a few of those who will contribute regularly to Mr. Hearst's great weekly.

For the strange—the bizarre—the unlike—the fascinating, read THE NEW YORK HEARST'S AMERICAN HOME AND FARM.

The regular price of the weekly is $1.00 a year, but in order to introduce it into new homes we will send the magazine for 26 weeks (one full half year) for only 25 cents, and add as a present, in addition, the two beautiful pictures described above. Wrap up a quarter and mail it to-day—both the six months' price and the free picture offer are not permanent but will soon be withdrawn. SOCIETY'S NEW FAD FOR ITS PET BIRDS

The Fashionable Little Bird Circuses

AFTER the monkey party and the donkey party comes the bird circus as amusement for the jaded tastes of satiated society. Harry Lehr it was who gave a dinner at which his friends were introduced to a grinning, unclad guest of honor, a Simian straight from Africa. T. Suffern Tailer gave a lawn party in honor of the recovery to health of his little son's pet, a white Mexican donkey, with gold feet. Both of these unusual entertainments were given at Newport, but the bird circus has appeared in Newport and New York simultaneously.

Mrs. Lewis Rutherford Morris, daughter of Senator William A. Clark, and Mrs. James Lawton, of New York, are among those who are particularly fostering the fad, which is almost exclusively a feminine one. To receive a card to a bird circus is proof that you are in touch with the smart-set people.

Arriving at the Fifth avenue the Madison avenue or the Riverside Drive mansion in New York in season, or on the cliff at Newport now, you are received by the butler, and above stairs by the maid, and if you are warm or cold, according to the season, she says, "Permit me, madame," and dabs some powder on your nose, gives you a sweeping, careful, final survey and you sweep down stairs and into the drawing room. At one end of the room sit fashionable women, their silks rustling, their fans stirring the perfumed air, their eyes fastened upon a silk curtain that screens the other portion of the room. The curtain is always of white silk for a reason that will presently be apparent. The tinkle of a silver bell is heard, the white silk curtains are drawn back and a pretty girl appears. She announces the different numbers on the programme.

"Ladies," she says, "the opening number of the programme to-day will be a solo by Mrs. Schuyler's bullfinch."

The owner of the bullfinch comes forward carrying a large gilt cage containing an expensive bullfinch guaranteed to be worth his weight in gold. She leans above the cage and coaxes him to sing.

"Now, Bully, dear, sing sweetly for your mamma," she beseeches. Usually Bully complies. Sometimes he doesn't. In any event, he is a most picturesque creature, his many hued feathers, with their gilt cage setting, flashing against the white silk draped walls, hung especially as a fitting background for such a picture.

After Bully's solo, which is always surpassingly sweet, the announcer says: "We will next be favored by Mrs. Van Rensselaer's Andreas roller balancing a rubber ball in his claws."

The Andreas roller, which is one of the cleverest of the canary family, performs his feat gracefully. After some shifting, tilting and balancing on the rim of a gold stand two feet high, he turns and lies upon his back extending his outspread claws high in air to receive an expected missile. If the missile does not arrive he raises and lowers his claws to keep his muscles fit, and no baseball enthusiast ever made feint of catching a ball with more interest. The mistress of the Andreas roller appears at the back of the stage, says distinctly "One, two, three," at which signal the bird lying on his back listens attentively. At the last count he raises his claws and stretches them far apart. The rubber ball whizzes through the air on his left. His left claw shoots out to an astonishing length. His prehensile nails close over the ball. He shifts his body and the other claw grasps the ball. He grasps it firmly at last in both claws, and, with beady black eyes searching the house, waits for applause. It comes in a gale, with a chorus of feminine sighs of admiration and of exclamations, "Isn't he the dearest little thing?" Sometimes the Andreas roller receives an encore. He has even been known to come before the curtain on his mistress' shoulder and bow.

The announcer, smiling at the already assured success of the function, comes forward and says: Mrs. Livingston's English canary will now give its famous imitation of the bell ringer in the tower." A small golden canary hops solemnly up one rung after another of the white ladder leaning against his mistress's knee. Arrived at the top he grasps the white ribbon dangling from the top of the ladder and rings lustily the small bell attached.

His appearance is followed by that of a mocking bird, Beppo, a favorite in the best society, who, harnessed by white ribbons, draws a small wagon especially built for him, and driven by two canaries, holding the end of the ribbon reins in their beaks.

"We will now see a performance by the celebrated clown Siskin the great."

Siskin the great is as celebrated in the bird, as Silvers in the human, world. He appears in a white paper ruff and a white dunce cap, made of paper, and disports himself with all the gyrations and grimaces of a Silvers. He imitates the two canaries who play seesaw with the ladder on the back of a chair, and follows about the legitimate performers in the circus minimizing and ridiculing their efforts precisely as human clowns do.

Hartz Mountain canaries and Andreas rollers vault and turn somersaults on a white ladder trapeze. The hit of the afternoon is nearly always the feat of Beppo, the mocking bird, the only professional in this company of amateurs, who before the white silk curtains are drawn for the last time flies out into the audience and poising in air before each guest proffers her a bonbon in a tiny basket carried in his beak. Beppo performs the feat gravely and with much dignity, flying back to the stage for more bonbons when his basket is empty, and with his disappearance, to a last flutter of wings, to an obligato chorus by the other performers, the circus closes.

After the circus, while tea is poured, there is a conversazione about the nurture and care of birds.

"I sent my bird to school last year. He has the most exquisitely modulated voice, since his course at the Sixth Avenue College for Birds," says one of the women in the audience.

"My golden Molly was a classmate of your Russo's," answered another. "She learned a dozen tricks at the school. She can play dead for a quarter of an hour. Once she frightened me."

"What is the first symptom when a bird is ill? I am anxious about Peter Pan. He is the dearest little gray bird—"

"My bird doctor says it is when they stop singing. When a bird stops singing it is time to send for the doctor, he says."

"When mine are ailing I always send them to a bird hospital. There they always have the best care and the prices are really very moderate."

"I am very careful about my bird's diet. Canaries, for instance, should have mixed seed. The best combination is, say, four parts of the best quality of Sicily canary seed, carefully cleaned, and three parts sweet German Summer rape, two parts of India millet and one part Turkish seed. I never give my birds hemp seed. It makes them too fat, spoils their voices and causes them to moult out of season. It is a sin to give birds sugar or cake. For a change of diet I give them a bit of apple, twice a week, and sometimes the yolk of an egg with cayenne pepper. In season I give them plenty of dandelions or water cress, or lettuce."

"If your bird is anaemic give him red gravel to add iron to his system. Every bird is entitled to clean silver or red gravel at least three times a week. It is his inalienable right."

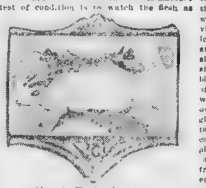
It's a Wise Woman Who Knows How to Choose Fish.

IT is now generally conceded that although fish contains less nourishment than meat, with but few exceptions it is more easily digested. On this account fish might advantageously replace meat to a great extent during hot weather, when diminished appetites point to lower powers of digestion. It is, however, in the Summer, when fish might be more largely employed, that there are greater risks of it proving an unwholesome diet, for fish is more perishable than flesh, and unless it is eaten in prime condition and perfectly fresh, it may give rise to unpleasant symptoms. Easy modes of transit make fresh fish a possibility in inland towns, but there is always the risk that if the demand does not equal the supply the surplus will be kept on ice, which will have the effect of arresting decomposition, which will proceed at a very rapid rate as soon as the fish is taken away from the ice, and becomes evident by its unpleasant smell.



How to Test a Lobster.

The quality of fish varies with the period of its life history. When very young the flesh lacks firmness and flavor, but when maturity is reached, and the milt and roe begin to form, the fish is in primest condition. The flesh is then flaky and opaque, and when it is cooked masses of curd appear between the flakes. When the spawn is cast, the flesh becomes thin and watery, and has a bluish tinge when cut instead of showing iridescent shades, and no curdy matter appears between the flakes. Another test of condition is to watch the flesh as it is being cut. If it is in good condition it bulges out as the knife passes over it and protrudes somewhat beyond the level of the surrounding skin. Before the fish is cooked its condition may also be ascertained by pressure of the fingers. If fresh the pits thus produced will immediately disappear.

The freshness of the fish is indicated by its general appearance. The body is stiff and the fins stand stiffly forward. The flesh is elastic to the touch and the skin appears bright, shiny, and generally well covered with scales. The eyes are particularly bright and stand prominently forward. The smell also is a good guide, provided that the flesh has not been kept on ice. The best of all tests is the appearance of the gills. Behind the flap on either side of the head, just where it joins the shoulders, are situated the gills, where the blood is purified by the dissolved oxygen of the water. When first taken from the water the gills are of a bright red color, owing to the oxygenated blood in the gills. The gradual loss of oxygen which takes place when the fish leaves the water causes the gills to change through dull pink to a dingy brown. If only the gills can be examined, there is no better test of freshness, and a little experience will soon enable the purchaser to be guided by this test.

There are certain fish which are more dangerous than others unless they are eaten perfectly fresh, and this applies especially to all shell fish. Oysters and clams should have the shells firmly closed, and those with the shells apart should be rejected, as the contained fish is dead and may have been dead a long time. It goes without saying that lobsters and crabs should always be bought alive and cooked in one's own kitchen.

Scallops should show a firm white flesh and the roe should be of a bright orange color.

In choosing live lobsters, press the finger against an eye, and if the claws move the creature has not been long out of the water. The freshness of boiled lobster is tested by pulling out the tail to make it in a line with the body and allowing it to spring back. If the tail has lost its springiness the fish is stale. Crabs should be chosen by weight rather than size, for often the shells are partially filled with water.

Eels should be alive, although they are not unwholesome after they have lost their vitality, provided that they are not kept too long. The color of the skin shows the quality. The best are found in clear water, and have a silver skin; those with dingy yellow and deep yellowish green skins are least highly esteemed.

Testing if Fish is Fresh.

Flat fish, such as flounders and halibut, should be chosen by its compactness or the thickness of the flesh in the neighborhood of the shoulders. The eyes should stand well beyond the level of the head, and the pale under side should be of a cream color, slightly tinged with pink and perfectly free from wrinkles.

HOW TO SET AND SERVE A DAINTY SEPTEMBER DINNER

MENU

Iced Melon. Consomme a la Sevigne.
Halibut. Broiled Chicken.
Snow Potatoes. Peas. Salad.
DESSERT.
Strawberry Ice. Coffee.

THE essentials of a perfectly arranged table are that the tablecloth be well laundered and well put on, and the glass and silver and other appointments be bright and shining. Let it be borne in mind at the outset that daintiness does not necessarily mean extravagant expense. Care and thought and good taste will accomplish much in table decoration as in other things, and the woman who does not feel justified in spending much money over the decoration of her table should make up her mind exactly what she wants to spend and see to it that she gets the very best value for her money. Reject everything second rate and then the result will prove satisfactory.

Having put on the tablecloth quite straight and without creases, a pretty idea is to use for the table centre some Liberty silk of a pale soft rose color. Arrange this lightly, so that it falls in billowy folds and wrinkles, and for decoration use roses in all shades, from pale pink to dark glowing red. Have them in a cut glass bowl in the middle of the centre, and let [illegible] and leaves peep out of the folds of the silk, and some lying on the white tablecloth. These, of course, must be arranged the last thing, in order that they may not fade.

Next see that the necessary knives, forks and spoons are all set straight, the glasses in perfect condition, and a well laundered napkin for each guest, folded plain, and on the top of each put a dinner roll tied with rose colored ribbon. The menu cards should be in rose holders and the candle shades of rose colored silk to match the table centre. At intervals place small [illegible] dishes containing olives, salted almonds, radishes cut into rose shape, and crystallized rose leaves, remembering when making all these arrangements that it is not the length of the dinner, but the dainty way it is served that tells.

The melon must first be served, cut in halves and iced. The essential thing in serving soup is that it be perfectly hot, and in this particular consomme [illegible] up some cooked asparagus tips [illegible] leaves of parsley. The halibut should be served with slices of hard boiled egg placed on top, while round the dish lemons should be put, cut into the shape of baskets, and the whole must be garnished with parsley. Have the Hollandaise sauce handed round with this. The broiled chicken [illegible] bed with watercress, with or without sauce, as preferred. The potatoes, snowed, make a simple and attractive dish, and lettuce and tomato salad will prove to be the best one to serve with broiled chicken. Have the thin slices of tomato placed on the top of the salad, and garnish the whole with the small hearts of the lettuce. The prettiest way of serving the strawberry ice would be in small rose shells; failing these use other glasses or small paper cases.

For Freckles, Mosquito Bites, Tan and Tender Skins.

OUR great grandmothers, who would hardly venture out of doors without a sunshade, would be horrified at the apparent indifference of the young women of the present day to their complexions. But the girl of to-day has mastered sufficient of scientific principles to realize that to a [illegible] good health and complete vitality is the [illegible] best method of obtaining a good complexion. What is more attractive than the healthy glow which sea breezes and motoring in wind and sunshine bring to the cheeks of the Summer girl? To enjoy her games, her tennis and golf and cycling to the full is the best advice anyone can give her. A little extra care is all that is necessary, a little attention after exposure to a hot sun, or when cycling or motoring in the dust, are all that is required to keep the skin smooth and clear and cool in the most trying weather.

An excellent Summer lotion, which will cool the skin when it is dry and smarting after exposure to sun or dust, may be obtained from any chemist from the following prescription.

Pulv. boracis one dram;
Sodii sulphit s, two drams;
Glycerin half an ounce;
Aq. destill., five ounces;
Aq. rosae trip. to ten ounces.

For Tender Skins.—A good face cream is almost necessary in Summer, especially for those girls who go in much for exercise and are exposed to the direct sun's rays. Cucumber cream of good quality or any well-tried face cream are simple and yet all that is required. The cream should be gently rubbed into the skin at night, after washing the face in tepid water to remove all dust from the pores. Girls with very sensitive skins, who find it necessary to use a face cream during the day, should apply the cream to the skin and in ten minutes wash off with tepid water and soap. A layer of cream remains on the skin and preserves it, removing any tendency to dryness and wrinkling.

A Hint—Never apply vaseline to the face before going out into the sun, as it will cause blistering. Use vaseline only at night, when it is valuable to sooth and cool the skin; and cucumber cream, lanoline, or glycerine during the day.

Sunburn—Unless sunburn is very excessive, it is rather becoming, but dark girls are often unbecomingly browned by the sun, and the very fair skin tends to become red and rough after long exposure to sun and wind. On coming indoors the following sunburn wash may be recommended, which should be applied with cotton wool to the face a few minutes before washing.—

Cocaine hydrochlor., ten grains;
Glycerin, half an ounce;
Spt. rectificat, one ounce and a half;
Ess. rosae, alb., one dram;
Aq. destill., four ounces,
Aq. rosae ad eight ounces.

Freckles are due to the decomposition of the oily secretion of the skin glands, which stain the skin in the little brownish patches with which we are all familiar. Buttermilk is an excellent application for freckles, and it can be used twice daily. If the following ointment is applied at night, the little [illegible] spots will soon be satisfactorily disposed of.—

Glycerin, half an ounce;
Otto of roses, two minims;
Lanolin, three ounces;
Bismuth subnitrate, four drams.

Mosquitoes.—The Summer girl is generally out of doors when the pests are about. As prevention is better than cure, here's a lotion which, if applied to the neck, hands, wrists and forehead will act as a danger signal to the beasts and warn them off.—

Glycerin one dram;
Tr. absinthii, three drams;
Aq. Coloniensis ad two ounces.

To Soothe Mosquito Bites.—Once they have managed to attack, the best mixture, which is also antiseptic, and will also prevent the troublesome inflammation which often follows upon insect bites, is made from—

Acid carbol............15 grains
Iodi ....½ dram
Pot. iod ....1 dram
Aq. destill ....3 ounces

LABLACHE FACE POWDER

makes the skin clear and velvety. It prevents and cures sunburn and insures a beautiful complexion. Cool and refreshing on a warm day.

Refuse substitutes. They may be dangerous. Flesh, White, Pink, or Cream, 50c. a box, of druggists or by mail. Send 10c. for sample.

CHAPTER XXV

OVER across the bay, a distance of seven miles, is Fire Island, and there is where the lighthouse is situated. Besides the lighthouse there is an old hotel and a Government life saving station, at least there was at the time when the incident happened that I am going to tell you about. Tige and I went sailing over there one day with our old friend Captain Smith. We walked down to the life saving station. Very close by is where the Atlantic cable comes ashore, and there stood our friend the cheerful lunatic that I told you about before.

"What are you doing?" I asked him.

"I am watching to see if there are any cablegrams coming in from Europe," he replied.

We persuaded him to stroll along the beach with us. We hadn't gone far when we noticed two of the men from the station running excitedly along the beach, and when we looked we saw the cause of their excitement. A shark was floundering around in the surf. He had run in too close to shore and had gotten beached. He was flopping about wildly, trying to get back into deep water again. The life savers had seen him and were trying to capture him. They had waded out waist deep and were prodding him with hooks and dealing him some heavy blows. Each time he would raise his head and tail and plunge about frantically. At length he managed to get out a little farther from the shore, and it looked as though he would escape, but he had lost his compass and finally came dashing back again.

They closed in on him and attempted to harpoon him. The first attempt was a failure. Then one of them got quite close to him and dealt him an awful blow. The shark was pretty badly hurt, and he gave a savage slap with his tail that struck the man knocking him into the air.

This fight lasted for half an hour, and the shark seemed as lively as ever. But at length they managed to lassoo him, and the more he struggled the tighter the lassoo became fastened around his huge black body. He began to make his final and fiercest fight, which attracted the attention of some other men who joined in. Soon the poor shark was dead. Being kept out of the water so much during the struggle was really what killed him. They dragged him ashore, he was hauled to the dock and shipped across to the mainland, where it was found he weighed eleven hundred and forty pounds.

"HE WAS FLOPPING ABOUT WILDLY, TRYING TO GET BACK INTO DEEP WATER AGAIN."

But our friend the cheerful lunatic was much impressed.

"Now, if that had been a land shark," said he, "one of those you see around the streets looking for some poor victim whom he can fleece of his money! But these sharks are honest."

"What kind of a shark was he?" asked Tige.

"He was what is called a bonnet-headed shark. There are many varieties of sharks. The encyclopedia will tell you all about them, but so will the fishermen around here. They are a nuisance, and there is a natural hatred among seafaring men for a shark."

And so we strolled along the wild beach, picking up shells or pieces of sea moss and listening to the lunatic. At last we came across one of the most pathetic things I ever saw. It was the corpse of a doll baby lashed to a spar. Some poor little girl who had been in a disabled ship had heard every one talking shipwreck and peril, and to save her dolly had lashed her to a spar and consigned her to the waves in the vain hope she might be saved. Poor dolly! What must have been her feelings on that terrible night when the captain shouted, "We are lost!" Think of the poor thing in the waves fighting off the savage jellyfish. We dug a grave in the sand and buried her with very little ceremony, because the lunatic doesn't believe in ceremony. He says ceremony is just for empty-headed and empty-hearted people who only can understand the pagan tum tum, glitter, noise, circus business, etc. So we put poor dolly under with no ceremony, simply a prayer for all shipwrecked dollies.

LABOR DAY

Copyright, 1906, by A[illegible] Examiner

THE man who works with both muscle and brain is about to celebrate once more the day set apart in his honor.

It is a good idea to have the Fourth of July holiday, that reminds us of the value of patriotism as a force in this world.

More beautiful is the celebration of Christmas, which recalls the fact that the humblest, meekest and kindest of men has proved Himself, through the ages, also the most powerful.

The day devoted to labor is a good day. It reminds the world that the man who works is now recognized as a thinking man—a man of rights, AND ONE SOON TO BE WHAT HE SHOULD BE, THE MOST POWERFUL FACTOR IN ALL THE HUMAN ELEMENTS THAT MAKE UP A NATION.

Labor is at the foundation of all good things in this world. And being the FOUNDATION, labor has been raised most slowly.

Labor has fought the wars and won them, without the glory.

Labor has built the palaces without inhabiting them, it has produced the fine clothes for others to wear, it has cut down the forests, tilled the new fields. The world as it stands IS A WORK OF LABOR GUIDED BY INTELLIGENCE.

And now that the labor and the intelligence are united in the same men, it is well that a day should be set apart to labor's especial honor and glory.

The people of the world do not yet understand the part that is played by labor organized—by the labor that insists upon treatment of workers as human beings important to the future as well as to the present.

A newspaper that writes PRINCIPALLY for Wall Street, and ESPECIALLY for Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, examines the census and discovers that twenty-nine million people in this country are making a living—working for pay in some way or other.

The same newspaper discovers that the labor unions contain only two millions of citizens—therefore, says this newspaper, the labor unions are a VERY small thing in this nation, and should not make so much fuss.

This conclusion will bear looking into more closely.

There are engaged in work three millions of people more than in 1900, when the census was taken. Therefore, we have working in the United States "in gainful occupation" some thirty-two millions of people out of eighty-odd millions of people.

What does that mean, in the first place? It means that half the population, excepting babies, is actually working. If this country were run on a sensible basis, utilizing machinery whenever possible, instead of men, PAYING WELL THE MEN AT WORK, one entire half of the population would be withdrawn from working for pay at once—namely, the women.

Is it not clear that a self-respecting nation should be able with modern methods, UNLIMITED NATURAL RESOURCES, to provide for itself without putting women, mothers, wives and daughters at work?

Among the thirty-two millions of people at work there are many millions of children.

A DECENT system of industry, managed in the interests of future generations as well as of the present, WOULD TAKE ALL YOUNG CHILDREN OUT OF CONFINING WORK. Does not every man who respects himself, AND WHO CAN POSSIBLY MANAGE IT, keep his children out of work and keep them in school?

SHOULD NOT THE GREATEST AND RICHEST NATION IN THE WORLD BE ABLE TO DO FOR ALL OF ITS CHILDREN what the able man always does for HIS children?

Now, let us see about the two millions of union workingmen that are "SO UNIMPORTANT BECAUSE OF THEIR SMALL NUMBER," in the opinion of the Wall Street newspaper.

Those union workmen represent THE REAL AMERICAN SPIRIT IN LABOR. They represent all the labor progress that has been made.

They have not only increased their own pay, and shortened their hours, BUT THEY HAVE HELPED EVERYBODY ELSE WORKING IN THIS COUNTRY, OUTSIDE AS WELL AS INSIDE OF THE UNIONS.

For instance, the wives of these two millions of men ARE NOT WORKING, NOT COMPETING WITH THE POOR WOMAN AT WORK.

That helps the women that must work to get better pay; the demand is greater; competition, bad as it is, is lessened by union labor.

The daughters of these union workmen ARE NOT HIRING OUT AS SERVANT GIRLS. That accounts for the better pay of servant girls in this country as compared with the past—when you might have a carpenter working on your barn and his daughter working in your kitchen — BECAUSE BETWEEN THEM THEY COULD JUST BARELY EARN ENOUGH TO FEED THEMSELVES.

The mechanic in the union to-day and all workers in unions KEEP THEIR CHILDREN IN SCHOOL AS LONG AS THEY CAN. Their prosperity means less child labor, better men in future.

Those two millions of American mechanics have leisure to think, and to read, AND THEY DO THINK AND READ. And they are, in addition, the most sober working element in this country, as every employer will admit, EVEN IF HE DOESN'T LIKE UNION LABOR.

Union labor has helped increase the pay of every kind of workman in the country; it has saved millions of women from toil; it has kept millions of children in school.

And, better than all, it has formed, AND WILL FORM IN THE FUTURE, the basis of political action in the interest of the majority.

The two millions of labor union men have also vastly increased the prosperity of MERCHANTS, DOCTORS, DENTISTS, THEATRE OWNERS AND ALL SIMILAR CLASSES. The man who earns three, four or five dollars a day HAS MONEY TO SPEND. The man who earns one dollar a day HASN'T the money to spend. A Wall Street newspaper would cheerfully admit that eleven hundred stock brokers—all engaged in gambling and in producing nothing—are a highly important body of men. The same newspaper would admit that ONE J. Pierpont Morgan, ONE Rockefeller, ONE Harriman, ONE Vanderbilt and ONE Astor, making five in all, HAVE A RIGHT TO SAY A GREAT DEAL IN THIS COUNTRY, and the same newspaper thinks that two millions of union workmen are such a small number that they ought not to make such a noise.

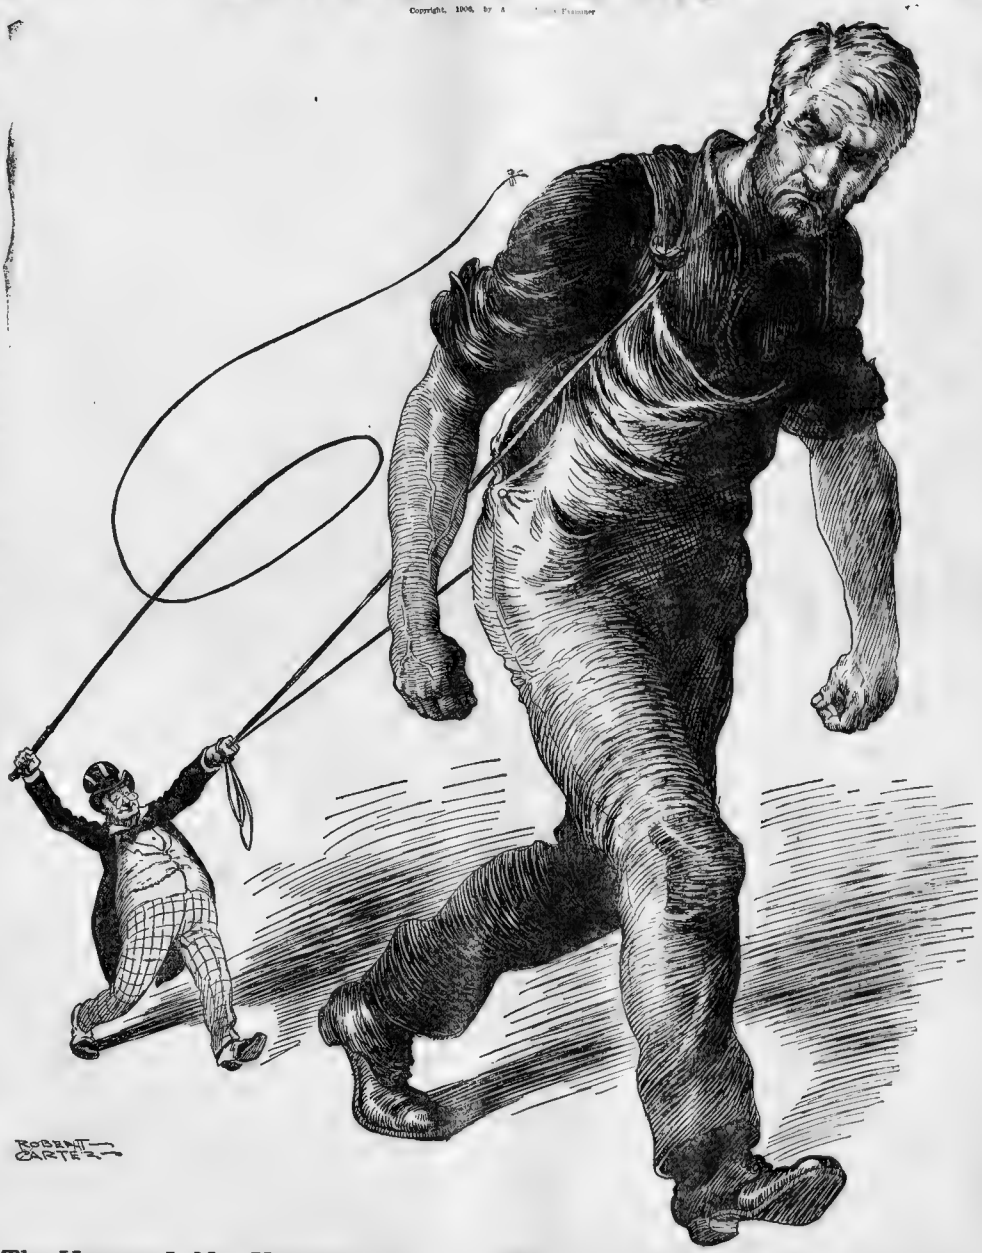
Fortunately the union workmen don't agree with this idea. They know that two millions of united human beings ARE A VAST, ALMOST INCONCEIVABLE FORCE. They know that they work not only for themselves and for their own families, but for other men and other men's families.

They know that in time they will root out child labor, forcing capital to use up machines instead of using up the bodies of young children.

They realize that they have their weaknesses, they make their mistakes. Proper government may make such unions unnecessary in the far future; but they are going to stick at their work in the present, with better pay, better people, more education and better government for their motto.



The Harness Is Not Very Strong. The Big Man Is Getting a Little Tired of the Small Man's Horseplay. The Workmen Are to Have THEIR Say.

The Roses of Holland. By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal Examiner

WHAT the walls and ceilings of a room are to the effectiveness of its furniture, the complexion of a woman is to the effect of her features.

The women of Holland possess this beautiful tone of complexion almost universally, irrespective of class, condition or age. Such astonishing splendor of bloom I have never seen elsewhere. The tints range from pinks and roses to peonies, with all the delicate shadings of color between.

There is a pretty habit here of setting boxes of flowers along all the upper balconies, so that one who walks the streets lifts his eye to behold rows of blossoms as far like as he can see

But just as wonderful a sight is spread for his level vision in the cheeks of the girls and the women, young and middle-aged, who promenade the sidewalks, ride in the trams or drive in carriages.

Every where we look there is a rose growing on a woman's cheek. And not only on the woman a cheek, but on the cheeks of boys and young men. Nor is it the common bloom that can be slightingly termed "a red face" by any pallid visitor, masking every under the name of "criticism"

It is a color so exquisitely applied by Nature's brush as to look at first g[lance] like [illegible] and the nose the lobes of the ears, and the mouth, the pretty deeps on the ear, and milk-white only the cheek, the tip of the ear and sometimes the tip of the chin glow with color. Mothers of [illegible] children are rosier than their babies, and the grandmothers are only a shade less blooming

I have seen three generations sitting side by side looking like a bud, a full-blown rose and a rose whose outer leaves were just touched with decay.

The only place passengers on the tram cars are allowed to stand in Holland is on the outer platform. During the busy hours of the day the trolley the platform of every car look like a window box with its flower faces of young women and young men banked together.

But with complexion their beauty often begins and ends. The features of the women are rarely beautiful. The lips are inclined to thinness, and lack curves. I have [illegible] one Cupid's bow mouth on a Holland girl's face.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

But with exception of [illegible] hair and eyes is found among them. Golden, auburn, "strawberry" and "carrot" shades are here, and there are all shades of brown hair, down to the coal black.

There are blue, gray, brown and black and permanent bloom.

But return to that wonderful, dazzling What can be the cause of it? That is the question I have asked myself day after day. In Rotterdam, in The Hague, in Leeuwarden, in Amsterdam

It is not because these people are all blonde, as I have not. Every shade of color of every ten flaunt the glorious and on their cheeks. It is most [illegible] severe blow to the food fad[dist] h I am one.

It is contended that complexion, [illegible]outh at least, was greatly a matter of food.

[illegible] and alas! for the theories I brought across the seas! They all eat fried things, heavy with grease. They devour sweets. They consume starchy stuffs enough to run a laundry. They drink tea and coffee strong enough to float a fleet. And they indulge in beer and German wines.

I saw a walking rose, wearing a gown, at dawn to a breakfast of bologn sausages, cheese and strong black tea! I would have given her three years to sink into attenuation and pallor, or fat sallowness, had not her mother sat beside her, who had no doubt breakfasted on a similar food twenty years longer, and still exalted any New York debutante in complexion.

The climate is said by many people to be the cause of this color. It is damp and cool But I have been in other places where there was dampness and freshness of atmosphere and never have seen such uniformity of lasting radiance of complexion as here in Holland

So we must look deeper than mere climate for the explanation. We will give that its due and pass on.

The waists of the girls and women have not been restrained. The natural tendency of the Dutch is not to curves, but to squareness. It can not be called pretty; but no Inducement has been offered to force its compliance with fashion's laws.

Again, the Dutch woman is, without question, utterly devoid of that subtle quality known as temperament. She is not emotional.

I have yet to see one evidence of coquettishness, even on her part. She does not use her complexion. She simply accepts it. She does not appreciate it because everybody has it, perhaps.

But if she were less phlegmatic, she would learn early how beautiful it is, and this knowledge would eventually lead to its loss. She would live, but her bloom would die. As it is, her bloom lives on, and she leads a gentle and phlegmatic residence.

And there is still another reason why the Dutch dame needs no rogue, even when the mother merges into the grandmother. Despite her alarmingly unhygienic diet, she does not indulge in alcoholic drinks.

I have never seen a cocktail, a highball or any form of spirits, other than beer or Rhine wine, served to a woman in Holland. Even the wines are most moderately taken.

Therefore, it would seem as if all these causes must be summed into the one great result. First, climate; then natural habites; then lack of keen emotions; then absence of vitality-destroying drinks.

Long life to the roses of Holland! May the dews of kisses ever fall upon them, and the sun of happiness smile over them!

Copyright, 1906, by American Journal Examiner

WE are now in a region of space where not only a new system of worlds, with its governing sun, is coming, by age-long steps, into existence, but also where many of those most surprising phenomena, "new stars," have been seen by human eyes springing into being with the suddenness of the illumination of a match struck in the night.

All readers of the newspapers remember the extraordinary star that blazed out in the constellation Perseus, adjoining Andromeda, at the opening of the twentieth century, while those who peruse more technical journals must recall an earlier "new star," which, viewed from the earth, appeared to be projected against the Andromeda nebula like an arc light in front of a curtain of enthralling gauze. And several other similar phenomena in this same part of the heavens are recorded in astronomical literature.

As our course is once more changed and the immense nebula glimmers in our wake the Captain calls our attention to certain very interesting phenomena exhibited by the apparatus intended to detect the slightest variations in the play of the cosmic forces by which we are surrounded.

This apparatus now shows by the significant shiftings of its delicate needles that there are invisible bodies in our neighborhood. The word "neighborhood" in this case is intended to cover a region of space millions of miles in extent. The conduct of the needles indicates unmistakably that the unseen masses, whatever they may be, occupy a vast space throughout which they are distributed with approximate uniformity. Their number is evidently immense; indeed, beyond computation.

But there is something else in the movements of the tell-tale needles which compounds the problem for us. Certain shiverings and shiftings point to another source of disturbance. For awhile the Captain and the Professor, who have been working out the calculations, are unable to tell whether we have started into the midst of some vast congregation of non-luminous bodies or have found our way, by chance, to a point situated between two such assemblages. At length the Professor says, with decision:

"Neither of these solutions satisfies the data, but here is another which does. We have before us two

But sudden amazement breaks off, at the same time, the Professor's sentence and our attention to him. Before us the depths of space have some filled with leaping fires. Millions of flaming meteors seem to have sprung into existence out of the blackness. At each instant their number and their splendor increase and the boundaries of the display expand.

In a short time an unbroken blaze occupies an immense space on the background of the heavens, the individual meteors being lost in a universal glare. But far ahead of the pitched conflagration we behold the racing brands beginning to light up new regions, like the sparks and flaming leaves that precede the swift advance of a prairie fire.

"It is the birth of a new star!" shouts a member of the party, the truth suddenly bursting upon his mind

"That is what I was when the sudden dis[illegible] me," responds the P[illegible] going to say that [illegible] two great swarms of [illegible] which, having run [illegible] other in space, were [illegible] to say [illegible] rupted [illegible] I was [illegible] cut us bod[illegible] [illegible] into collision under the impulse of their mutual attraction. That I have always believed to be the most probable explanation of the origin of what we call new stars.

"Such a star might originate [illegible] come through the collision of two great swarms, single bodies, but the probability of a collision of that kind is far less than that of a collision of meteoric swarms, which, being spread over immense areas, are far more likely to collide than are two single, massive bodies.

"Then, too, the observed phenomena of new stars always seemed to me to accord more closely with what we should expect to follow a meteoric collision than with the probable consequences of the violent shock of two huge masses. The swiftness of the changes, and the brief lapse of time within which the alteration in the character of the light shows that the "new star" has become nebulous in its constitution, are also such as can most readily be accounted for by the hypothesis of a collision of meteors. But now we need no longer speculate, for we see the thing itself before us"

Entranced, we continue to watch the wonderful spectacle. Every minute it becomes more brilliant. The minutes extend to hours, and yet there is no diminution of the display. Each second fresh millions plunge forward to the encounter, and become changed into blazing gases, while other myriads continue to follow them in the centre of the conflagration the intensity of the light is like that of a sun. And, looking upon it with clasped hands, the Only Woman exclaims:

"Think of the astronomers on the earth now! If this light has not yet reached them it will soon do so, and I wonder what will be the first to see it, and to add his name to the list of discovers of sun stars. How eagerly they will observe it. How the spectroscope will be applied to study its 'lines' and 'bands,' to learn from them if possible the story of what is going on here. How the newspapers will speak of the marvellous new member of the starry host blazing in the northern heavens—for I suppose it will appear to be situated in or near the constellation Andromeda—and then what learned papers and treatises will be published concerning it!"

"Look!" says the captain smiling at our fair companion's enthusiasm, "already you can see the beginning of the end of this new star. In the central fire, where the meteors are thickest and the collisions incessant, the nebulous gases are collecting in vast clouds, and the temperature has attained an intensity which admits of the existence of no element in either the solid or the liquid state. Everything is completely vaporized.

"This will continue for days, perhaps for weeks, and then the supply of meteors for the conflagration being exhausted, the two encountering swarms having, so to speak, devoured one another, the whole mass will begin to cool and condense again, losing its brilliance, fading from the view of our fellow-beings on the earth, to become perhaps once more a swarm of meteoric particles, or possibly a single body, or a system of revolving bodies.

"But we must not forget to thank our good fortune for having placed us here at the moment when so rare a spectacle was in preparation. Now, once more, let us be off for other scenes."

A Contented Old Maid By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal Examiner

COMES reverberating through the ambient air the news from New York that a bell girl at the Martha Washington Hotel was married the other day. Just because she had been around with old maids so much at the hotel that she couldn't stand the thought of being one a minute longer.

I told a friend of mine who has never found time to get married about this impulsive young person this morning.

She was deeply interested. "Quite possible," she said, "quite possible. The rule of attraction of the opposite, you know. Now once in a while—it's only once in a while, mind—I get tired of my boarding house, and my cat, and my lonesome evenings, and not having any one to take me to places or to boss me, and I get to wishing that I had married the first man who asked me, just for company

"Whenever I get one of those streaks I just pack my trunk and go and visit my married friends for a week. Before I have been there three days I'm so glad I'm an old maid I don't know what to do.

"Talk about lone one old maids, why, we have more fun in a minute than most married women, poor things, have in a year.

"We save up our money, or spend it, just as we please. When I want a new hat I buy it, and nobody dares to ask me what it cost or if I couldn't make the old one do.

"If I want to go to the theatre I ask one of the other O. M.'s at the house when I live what she thinks of a theatre party, and by 8 o'clock the car that goes past our house is hailed by six or seven joyous beings, and for a good time, without a man to bother us.

"When we come home we have an O. M. supper, eaten in our wrappers, talk the play over, and that's all there is to it.

"When one of our married friends wants to go to the theatre she has to think first whether it is the right night out or not, and then whether her husband likes the particular kind of play she wants to see or not. If she wants to go Wednesday night she has to begin Monday telling him what a dear, good, sweet thing he is, so unselfish and so devoted—right before me so as to get him worked up to the pitch of taking us, or going back on the reputation she's building up for him.

"Then she has to tell the children she's going and explain why they can't go, order breakfast for next morning, lay out husband's best suit, have the hot water to wear handy, and never hear him when he says he has a headache and hints about the delightful habits of the theatre.

"Heavens, I'd never go to the theatre at all if I had to go through the awful agony of preparation the average married woman, poor thing, has to go through for one little evening of simple enjoyment

"It is the same about everything. We O. M.'s let married friends use up more nerve force trying to get the man of the house to move a trunk than it would take for me to earn the money to pay ten men to move ten trunks ten times a day

"When you are an O. M. life is such a simple proposition. You either save your money and go for a vacation trip to Europe, or you spend it and have the fun of it as you go along. You don't always have to wait for somebody else to decide what to do with that money, and whether you really can afford a vacation or not

"I'm a school teacher, and I have a sister who's a stenographer We both think we work pretty hard and earn every cent we get, but our married sister, whose husband is a well-to-do, rising young business man, works about five times as hard as we do, and never gets a cent or a day's vacation."

"Does she go to the country in the Summer?"

"The children go with her, and she never has one single instant to herself in the twenty-four hours.

"One of the children sleeps in the room with her, and the other two are always getting dirty or scared or something in the middle of the night.

"She can't move a step without dressing three children before she goes, and dragging one of them along with her

"Her husband is a good man, devoted to her and to her children, and she thinks she's happy, poor thing. My sister and I believe that she and her husband talk about us when we are visiting them after we've gone to bed, and tell each other how sorry they are for those two, poor, forlorn, lonesome things, and every time sister and I go upstairs, after a day in the ceaseless turmoil, noise, confusion and discreeable bother of life in a happy home, we grab each other round the waist and waltz round and round the room in our nice comfy kimonos and sing to each other, 'How glad we are.'

"Nobody knows how glad we are to think that we are free to live our own lives in our own way.

"It must have been beastly to be an O. M. in the days when an unmarried woman had to be somebody's auntie, or go away somewhere and die of neglect.

"Poor old aunties, she always slept in the worst room in the house and did all the work nobody else could be hired to do.

"But now auntie has the time of her life when she gets past being a belle, and turns into a nice, comfy, independent, do-as-you-please O. M., with her own money, her own time, her own friends and her own latchkey.

"Do you know that young person who has just committed matrimony to get away from the O. M.'s?"

"If you do, just give me her address.

"I'd like to go and see her a couple of years from this day. I wonder—but, no, of course, she won't confess—you married women are all in a conspiracy together. You are caught in the trap and you won't tell the truth about it for fear some of the rest of us will escape.

"But all the same I'll warrant that our friend the bell girl won't have quite the same expression or quite the same clothes or quite the same little account at the bank in two years from now that she has just now"

Now, what do you think of that, brothers and sisters, for an outrageous, up-and-down, take-it-or-leave-it declaration of independence, flaunted in our very faces?

I wonder if there is a syllable of truth in it at all!

Mirandy on Art By Dorothy Dix

"For some folks said dat hit was an outrage an' dat Mr. Cornstalk was a-squashin' genius, an' endeed dat de way some ladies does a-puttin' down ondecency, an' I kinder wanted to see how de land lay myself, an' so de odder mawnin', des as soon as I got through washin' up de dishes, I put on my bunnit an' lit out

"'What is you gwine?' axes Ike

"'I'se a-gwine up to dat Museum place on de avenue,' says I. 'Whar I see a lot of statutory things through de winders to look at dem pictures an' monument men dat they calls Art.'

"'Don't you go near hit, Mirandy,' 'spons Ike, 'hit ain't no place for a Christian wife an' mother what is a church member in good an' reglar standin', an' de President of de Daughters of Zion, an' leader of de female I'm a' meetin'.'

"'Oh, pan!' nuthins Ma'y Jane, 'what is one of dese heah new gals wid de hair cutchah an' no blushes, dat kin look right things without turnin' red, an' wears one kinder pale roun' de gills, an' not no cold chills rannin' up an' down my ba[illegible] says she, 'only a few art [illegible] I kin see any harm in Art. Hit is [illegible]

"'Maybe, so,' 'spons Ike, 'dough I [illegible] out bit is a mighty good thing if a man one-dressed figgers an pictures don't try to walk down de street lak dey is, for ef dey did dey would be chased into de station house befo' you could say Jack Robinson.'

"But at dat Ma'y Jane fotched a sigh, an' said dat as she always enjoyed havin' her mind elevated by Art, dat she would go long wid me, an' we started [illegible] Museum, an on de way she sp[illegible]ed to me dat she had forgive dat Mr. Cornstalk, an' dat what she was full of pictures of folks widout no clothes on 'em but dat dey was all right because dey was Art.

"'Dem Illustrations,' says she, 'was drawed from models paint in de altogether.'

"'Well 'spons I 'fit looks mo' to me lak dey was postin' in de not-at-all [illegible] all dat,' says I, 'maybe dey's Art in dem artists what is got strong stomicks, my way, but what about plain, ordinary folks dat turns deir eyes de odder way when a lady hists her dress passin' a muddy crossin', an' men dat is so partickler dat dey wont pull off deir coats in public? Maybe [illegible] 'a all right for you, but consider de feelin' of Thomas Jefferson an' little Teddy Roosterfeldt of dat kind of catalogues was to come unbeknonst in de house? Dey'd take 'em up wid de tongs—specially of dey caught my eye on 'em'

"'De art students is got to learn to draw from de nude,' says Ma'y Jane

"'What for?' I axes; 'what for dey got to draw folks wid no clothes on to learn how to draw folks wid clothes on? I hy dere'd be a mighty fine fuss' time dey undertook to enlarge de fotograff of a woman what had been a mother in Israel an' when dey painted a portrait of her dey let her have best stick dress and gold breastpin, an' made a picture of her dat her bereaved husband an' children would have to look at through deir fingers.'

"But Ma'y Jane said I didn't grasp de wharforeness of de subject an' dat we got to de Museum, an' she show me roun' an' pinted out de statuto dat she calls de Pollins Belvedac, an' a lady name Venus Affry—Affry something—dough she looked lak a white lady.

"'Look at dem,' says she; 'dat's Art'

"'Ma'y Jane,' says I, 'I dassent do it outell my dresses 'em up

"Den we come away, an' I'se still mixed up in my mind about Art, because I don't know why a thing being called Art makes it right and proper, when it would call for de police in real, ev'y day life.

"Yassuh, dere's something mighty strange 'bout Art, an' I reckon hit's a kinder thing to conjure wid, case de ef a man an' anybody calls deyself a artist dey can do des lak dey pleases widout gettin' hatted over de head for it, an' locked up in de calthoose as dey would of dey was jest plain folks.

"Dey's Bingle Jones, dat calls hisself Michael Angelo Montmorenci sence he quit paintin' houses an' took to takin' tin types, an' dere's Alinyey Smithers, what spends her time a-daubbin' up good sections of stove pipe wid pictures of flowers dat you wouldn't know what dey was lessen she told you Dey's pof of 'em dat dirty an' ragged an' frowsy dat you wouldn't let two cents' worth of 'em come into yo' house 'cept dat dey calls demselves artists. Yassuh, odder folks has got to keep deyself clean an' tidy ef dey wants to be axed out to eat chicken dinner once in a while, but ef anybody kin get a rag wid artist on hit pinned on 'em dey kin let dair hair grow, and dair collars get as black as a pot, an' still have folks make a fuss over 'em.

"An' dere's Bill Spriggs, what sings in de minstrels, an' dat runs off an' lef a sick wife an' fo' babies, an' dat spends what he makes gallivantin' aroun' wid de spryest gals in town. De way dat I sizes dat up is dat plain meanness an' onery[illegible], but folks tells me dat I is too hard on him, an' dat he can't help hisself, because he is got de artistic temperament.

"You can't expect dem what is got dat, to live quiet an' decent, an' respectable lak we is why I took a day off to try to find out what dis Art is. But I don't know no more dan I did to start wid, 'cep'n dat bit o' mighty handy excuse of you wants to break over de rope.

"De good Book say dat charity kivers a multitude of sins, but, my Lord, when it comes to kiverin' things, Art is got it beat a block."

LATE SUMMER PROGRAMME FOR SOCIETY IS ALLURING

BY A SOCIETY WOMAN

The social mood is a merry one just now, and the late Summer's festivities are taking on the life and color of the most brilliant of seasons.

With the advent of cool weather the fashionables again plunged into the deepest of the swirl of things, and the past week with its bracing air gave new impetus to the merry round of tournaments, teas, receptions and dances. The weeks to come are teeming with interesting events, and fashion's devotees are jubilant over the prospect of so alluring a social program.

Later than ever the smart ones will linger at their seaside villas and secluded haunts, and later than ever return to the brick and mortar habitations of the town. Even at Newport, where the restless and change-loving ultras have never remained after the horse show, they have agreed among themselves to remain for the Autumn. Prominent among them are the Elbridge T. Gerrys, who are to postpone their departure at least two weeks later than has been their custom; the Oliver H. P. Belmonts, who have always hurried off to Hempstead early in September; Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills and the Misses Mills, Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish and the George Henry Warrens. These members of the villa set are trying to induce others to prolong their season, and in many instances have sent out invitations for large affairs to be given on dates ranging from the first to the last week in September.

Summer Play Big South Shore Event

The younger element of South Shore society is in the throes of the most important of the season's events, in the attractive Summer play which they are arranging to give in Cohasset and Hingham on the evenings of September 7 and 8. It will be the most fashionable of the Summer's diversions, and will be attended by all the representative people in the vicinity.

The Hingham Players' Club, which has existed for some twelve years, giving an annual performance, and to which the very smartest of the South Shore coterie belong, including members of the Vincent Club and of the Footlight Club of Jamaica Plain, will present the English drama, "Liberty Hall."

Beautiful Leslie Knowles, daughter of Mrs. Henry M. Knowles of Beacon street and Cohasset, who has won renown in Vincent Club theatricals, and Helen McKay will play the parts of Blanche and Amy Chilworth, daughters of the late Sir Norman Chilworth. Elizabeth Ware, Harry H. Gay, William Stanley Parker, MacGregor Jenkins, Archibald R. Tisdale, Leslie Spooner, J. Winthrop Spooner, Arthur Wallace Rice, Mrs. William Barnard and Reginald L. Robbins are others of the caste who are at present busy with rehearsals.

The proceeds from the Hingham performance will be contributed to the fund for remodellling Loring Hall, and the proceeds from the Cohasset performance will go to the Episcopal and Unitarian Churches.

Miss Pierce Leads October Brides

Leading this year's unusually long and lovely procession of October brides will be the youngest and prettiest of the whole lot of them, dainty Rosamond Pierce, who has chosen the very first day of the golden month for her marriage to "Tom" Barbour, of New York.

It will be a chrysanthemum wedding and will take place in St. Paul's Church, Brookline, at noon. The Rev. Leonard Kipp Storrs, pastor of the church, will officiate, and a large reception and breakfast at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dean Pierce, on Fisher avenue, will follow the ceremony.

Among the bride's attendants will be her three sisters, the Misses Dorothy, Mary and Sarah Pierce, and four of her fellow members of the Vincent Club.

The prospective groom is almost as young as his fair bride, and only graduated from college last June. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Barbour, of New York, and his affiliations are quite as large and fashionable as those of his fiancee.

Miss Pierce bears the distinction of being the youngest member of the Vincent Club, or of society even, to become engaged, her engagement having been announced just prior to her debut, when she was scarcely eighteen.

Bostonians to Witness Boat Race

Interest in the international races between the Harvard and Cambridge crews mounts high among Bostonians as the time for the contest approaches, and among the more recent to sail in order to be present were Francis Peabody, Jr., and Miss Martha Peabody, who left New York Tuesday on the Carmania; Mr. and Mrs. Gardner M. Lane, Mr. and Mrs. John Mason Little, with the Misses Julia and Helen Little; George Mixter, 2d., a son of Dr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Mixter, of Marlboro street; Mr. and Mrs. William Q. Wales and daughter Charlotte, and Robert Williams.

The Bostonians already on the other side who will be on hand for the occasion are the Francis B. Crowninshields, of Marlboro street; Julian Codman, Harvard '92; Mr. and Mrs. Francis Higginson (Hetty Sargent) who was one of the American hostesses at the garden party given last week at headquarters; Mrs. Rudolph Lehman, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Winsor of Brookline, Miss Ruth Winsor, Miss Mary Bowditch, daughter of the Alfred Bowditchs; Miss Margaret Warren and Charles Gibson Winslow, Harvard '93.

Lenox Opens Arms for the Meyers

Lenox is preparing a notable welcome for Mrs. George von L. Meyer, wife of the American Ambassador at St. Petersburg, and her two charming daughters, who arrived from Liverpool last week, and who go to Lenox the coming week to be the guests of the Ambassador's sisters, Mrs. Samuel Frothingham and Miss Heloise Meyer.

Mrs. Frothingham is to give several hospitalities for her sister-in-law, and other hostesses in the colony are vieing with one another in securing her for their entertainments.

The Meyers, all of whom are expert horsewomen, will remain for the Berkshire hunt festivities and will be present at the hunt breakfast which Mrs. Frothingham is to give on October 3.

NO SOCIETY LULL TILL LATE FALL

Horse Shows, Tournaments, Teas and Dances Will Keep Smart Set Busy.

The most strenuously gay week of the Summer has just ended, and the coming weeks, with the Newport Horse Show, the Berkshire Hunt events, the tournaments, teas and dances give little promise of respite until late in October, when the fashionable butterflies, many of whom have already commenced to droop, go for a while to country homes to rest up for the social strain which begins immediately after they return to town.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Q. Brown (Miss Eldridge), who have just returned to their country home in Dobbs Ferry, on the Hudson, from a visit with friends in New London, are planning to make a visit to the Eldridges here soon after their return from their Summer home.

Mrs. Brown, as Miss Eldridge, was one of the most popular girls in the Back Bay set and when she brings her little family here she will no doubt be the recipient of many courtesies at the hands of her old friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Pratt McKean, the latter a daughter of the Quincy A. Shaws, arrived from Europe last week, just in time from the Shaw-Mitchell wedding, at which Mrs. McKean was charming in her princess gown of white embroidered linen and white plume-laden hat. It was her first appearance at a social function since her return, and she was kept busy receiving greetings.

The McKeans are at their North Shore villa on Pride's Hill, at Pride's Crossing, where they will remain until late in the Fall.

Mr and Mrs. John F. Codman returned Monday from a week-end visit with Mr and Mrs. S. W. Sturgis at Sunnybank, their Lenox estate.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Woods, whose Summer home is in Ipswich, have taken a house on Chestnut street for the Winter. Mrs. Woods was Harriet G. Cotton-Smith, and is a woman of fine presence and much charm of manner. The Woods have previously spent their Winters at the Tudor.

The Misses Mary and Serena Frye of Washington street, Brookline, returned the middle of the week from England where they have been spending the Summer with friends.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Livingston Grandin have closed their Summer place in Beverly and have gone to Poland Springs for the coming three weeks.

Mrs. Catherine Codman, of Westwood, who has been making a tour of the Austrian Tyrol in her motor car, which she took with her from America, has been joined by Mr and Mrs. Despradelle for a tour among the Pyrenees. They will make their headquarters at Biarritz, and will at the conclusion of the tour go on to Paris.

Mrs. John Chipman Gray has just returned from a delightful visit with Dr. and Mrs. Hasket Derby at Stoneacres, their beautiful estate at Bar Harbor.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Mason (Elizabeth Andrew), who have been spending the Summer at the Old Andrews estate in Hingham, are going to Manchester the coming week for the remainder of the season.

VAST WEALTH REPRESENTED BY MARBLEHEAD SOJOURNERS

Summer Colonies Centres of Refinement and Substantial Worth, if Not of Display.

Where the breaking waves dash high on the [illegible] and [illegible] of [illegible] Boston business [illegible] the famous [illegible] in beautiful cottages and enjoying the cool breezes which sweep in from the eastward [illegible] Summer heat. It is that class who delight in the vicinity of Marblehead for a heated term sol[illegible] [illegible] promontories, the strips of sand, the restless ocean and the magnificent atmospheric color effects which abound at sunrise and sunset.

Leaders in Big Industries.

Daniel Webster once wrote a prose ode about the [illegible] It is [illegible] of the feelings of these city dwellers by the sea. They are not society folk in the sense of being frivolous and entirely devoted to entertainment and entertaining. They represent the class which has [illegible] into the best circles in the land, is second to none in refinement and culture and has made Boston one of the great commercial centres of the world. No more charming hospitality is presented anywhere. There are no more tactful and gracious hosts and hostesses. Newport is the reflection of Wall Street and the hectic gambling spirit. But down on the North Shore the cottagers who come to town daily for business are the incarnation of honest, substantial, public benefiting trade.

Around Marblehead are the cottages of men who are the leaders in the leather, drug, lumber, grocery, coffee, jewelry, clothing and other branches of commerce. There are no cottagers anywhere more typical of the best there is in Boston. The boys are collegians, mostly Harvard men, while the daughters of the household claim Wellesley, Radcliffe, Smith and many other halls of learning for alma maters. Gowning is exquisite in taste and simplicity, fair cheeks are kissed by the sun into deepest coats of tan. Lithe figured lassies and athletic brothers and sweethearts clamber over rocks, stroll beaches and boat, bathe and devote themselves to tennis and golf in the glorious abandon of wealth, health and happy youth.

PAULINE SLOSSON AT THE LYCEUM

LOCAL THEATRICAL SEASON IS NOW IN FULL BLOOM

Six Houses Open Their Doors on Labor Day With a Matinee and a Great Variety of Attractions.

BOSTON'S theatrical season is now in full bloom. Every theatre is open, every stage is busy and there is a constant succession of plays and players. Six more houses begin their Winter season to-morrow, and every one has an extra holiday matinee. The theatres which open to-morrow are the Bijou, with "The Railroad of Love"; the Colonial, with Wright Lorimer and "The Shepherd King"; the Globe, with Hap Ward [illegible] "Not Yet But Soon," the latest thing in a musical comedy; the Hollis, with Dustin Farnum in "The Virginian"; the Orpheum, with the best in vaudeville, and the Park, with the return engagement of "The Lion and the Mouse."

The Majestic opened last evening with "Julie Bonbon," and the Castle Square, with "Mistress Nell" played by a new leading lady. At the Boston Theatre "Cape Cod Folks" continues on its successful journey, and at the Tremont another milestone is marked for "The Prince of Pilsen." All of the other houses present new bills. "The White Caps" is put on by the Bowdoin Square Stock Company, "Eight Bells" by the "real thing" Brothers Byrne at the Grand Opera House, and both Keith's and the Howard Theatres offer new vaudeville bills. The various burlesque houses present entirely new attractions, and all the Summer parks and out-door resorts offer something new to mark the close of their season. Taken altogether, the first week of the Fall and Winter season is a boomer.

Boston Theatre

Write down another success for the Boston Theatre. "Cape Cod Folks" completes the trilogy of its New England play successes of which "The Old Homestead" and "'Way Down East" are the other two of the Yankee Nibelungen. It is essentially a play for the people. It appeals to the heart, not to the head, to the rich coursing blood of virility rather than to the analytical mind of the [illegible] sooner. It is romantic, spectacular and farcical. It has as many laughs as heart-throbs, though the lasting impression carried away by the audience is the thrilling picture of the awful storm-stricken wreck. From the standpoint of popular favor "Cape Cod Folks" is a great play. It is jamming the big Boston Theatre at every performance.

It has been splendidly cast. [illegible] Brown makes a manly, [illegible] Mackay, a rough diamond, [illegible] J. Ratcliffe's David Rollin is of the [illegible] villain type. George [illegible] of Hoyt fame has a strong character [illegible] John Lott, and the Pietro [illegible] D. O'Hara is a type to be readily found in Provincetown's long street or sitting discussing the fisheries or affairs of nations on any of the benches of any of the town's fish wharves. Sarah Perry's [illegible] Hungerford is [illegible] Barriscale makes all possible out of her Becky Weir.

While all the scenes of "Cape Cod Folks" are exceptionally strong, that at the close of the third act, showing the storm at sea with [illegible] of a vessel on the treacherous [illegible] of the Cape, followed by the rescue of two of the characters in a small fishing boat by the heroine, is the acme of stage [illegible] The electrical effects produced in this scene surpass anything of the kind ever presented. There will be [illegible] to-morrow (Labor Day) in addition to the regular mid week and Saturday matinees.

For the New England schoolboy [illegible] matinee performance [illegible] composition on the [illegible] from "Cape Cod Folks" [illegible] will be presented by [illegible] It is now on exhibition in the [illegible] of the theatre.

Castle Square Theatre

Those kind powers who so shifted the cards that Miss Thais Lawton was brought from her Pacific coast work to head the company at the Castle Square Theatre should be tendered the most grateful thanks of a satisfied audience, and tendered them upon a gold [illegible] She is, in the words of a [illegible] "the real thing."

Miss Lawton, Howell Hansel and the others of this exceptionally clever company began their Winter season at this theatre last evening in "Mistress Nell," a play made famous [illegible] or perhaps which made famous Miss Henrietta Crosman. Miss Lawton [illegible] It is a strong, virile play [illegible] prises, and [illegible] of a leading woman severely [illegible] Miss Lawton proved equal to the [illegible] She made the [illegible] fairly sparkle with realism [illegible] the role too, and made a charming [illegible] and sword. The Castle Square patrons may [illegible] see this Winter an actress who shows in every word and movement that she is refined and that she is a born actress.

Joe Jefferson knew what he was talking about when he advised [illegible] career, prophecying that she would be the greatest actress in America [illegible] true.

Mr. Hansel played the leading male role with his accustomed [illegible] has always been Mr. Hansel's strong characteristic. He is sincere in everything he does even though he cannot [illegible] at times to sink his own personality into that of his character. All the others of the company have been seen at this house so often that they need no extended comment. They all do well, and it is particularly pleasing to note the re-engagement of Miss Fifreda Lasche, one of the most capable little women who ever played in Boston. "Mistress Nell" will be repeated twice a day this week, followed on September 10 by "The Girl with the Brown Eyes," Clyde Fitch's comedy drama.

Tremont Theatre

The reception accorded "The Prince of Pilsen" during the first week of its engagement at the Tremont was of the heartiest character and clearly denoted that this popular musical entertainment has not loosened its grasp on the favor of local theatregoers. It is worthy of note that there has been no deterioration in the quality of the performances nor in the elaborate character of its settings; both have been kept well up to the standard fixed when the play was first produced. Jess Dandy's impersonation of the German brewer radiates with humor and his fountain scene has never been equalled. Pauline Gusman is a charming widow and she uses a voice of excellent quality and training. Albertine Benson as Edith, Marie Welsh as Nellie, George Lydecker as the real prince, Henry Coote as Tom Wagner, J. Hayden Clarendon as Artie, Wilmer Bentley as Francois, Jeanette Bageard as Sidonie and Helena Delmore as "Buttons" make up a cast that admirably fitted to give vim, spirit and go to the performances. The Prince has only one more week at the Tremont and a special matinee will be given to-morrow.

Majestic Theatre

Louis Mann and Clara Lipman opened the season of the Majestic Theatre last night to a crowded house with the four act comedy, "Julie Bon-Bon," the first work as a playwright of Miss Lipman. She has an excellent part, while Mr. Mann one of the best character actors on the stage, plays an alcohol loving old boulevardier to the life.

The story of Julie is simple and tellable. Mlle. Bon Bon is the proprietress of a fashionable millinery establishment in New York. Returning from Europe, she meets on the steamer a young man. Knowing [illegible] they [illegible] fall in love. Directly they arrive in New York the youth becomes Jal Van Brunt of formidable family, while Julie remains simply the little milliner.

Worse still, she has a father who is an [illegible] reprobate of hopeless [illegible] Mrs. Schuyler Van Brunt [illegible] that her son shall not [illegible] mesalliance, contrives that he [illegible] her son [illegible] still further by bringing to [illegible] who has long been pursuing the [illegible]

The climax comes with a supper in [illegible] at which young Van Brunt gives way to his disgust at his lady's surroundings and mortally wounds her [illegible] Next morning, however, for no special reason save the compulsion of [illegible] and [illegible] Julie is [illegible] for Van and a soft, [illegible] happy marriage seems imminent.

The [illegible] of this piece is perhaps [illegible] but decidedly feminine. From the [illegible] sitting and [illegible] of the Maison Bon Bon to the [illegible] doubtable Mme. Van Brunt herself, who "can always manage her [illegible] sary." The four acts abound in lines and business [illegible] satirizing the weaknesses of women.

Miss Lipman's popularity and personal charm seemed to gain for her French accent and [illegible] her shy [illegible] scenes with her [illegible] the warmest approval [illegible] Mann received hearty applause for his elaborate characterization of the pitiful [illegible] disreputable old Frenchman. The [illegible] was superb throughout.

In addition to the regular Wednesday and Saturday matinees this week there will be a special holiday matinee to-morrow, Labor Day.

Colonial Theatre

Wright Lorimer and his big production of "The Shepherd King," under the direction of William A. Brady, will be the opening attraction at the Colonial Theatre beginning with a special matinee on Labor Day. In all the Old Testament there is no more beautiful story than that of David the shepherd lad who was elevated to the throne of Israel. It is a story that charms in childhood, that attracts in middle life and in old age when is understood the [illegible] and self-sacrifice of Jonathan and the strength of the friendship that existed between the lowly shepherd and the prince.

Wright Lorimer saw the dramatic possibilities of this chapter from the history of the Jewish race. He seized upon it and made David real to those who had only known him as a character in a fable from the ages long past. And to those who had ever known this son of Jesse, shepherd, musician, warrior, king known him as one of the greatest and grandest characters of all history to these he gave him life and being and spoken words and actions that befit the greatest ruler that Israel ever knew. And with this David he made Saul real. And Jonathan and Jesse the father; and Ozen, and Shammah and Abinadab and Eliab. And with these he gave us Merab and Michal. And [illegible] and Omar and Goliath himself. And even the Witch of Endor.

Keith's Theatre

To-morrow, Labor Day, will mark the opening of the regular Fall and Winter season at Keith's. The inaugural bill is one of much power, including, as it will, Colonel Gaston Bordeverry, the king of sharpshooters; Cressy and Wayne, Cliffe Berzac's Circus, Ned Wayburn's "Rain-Dears," Bailey and Austin, Matthews and Ashley, Paul Kleist and "Happy Jack" Gardner. "Grasping an Opportunity" is the comedietta in which Cressy and Dayne are to commence their annual engagement. The sketch is full of the dry humor for which Cressy is famous. Cliffe Berzac's Circus has won the name of being the most entertaining animal act ever brought to this country from Europe. Ned Wayburn, who has made a great name as the stage director of Klaw and Erlanger's spectacular productions, has evolved a novelty for the vaudeville stage in the shape of a "girl act" which he has named the "Rain-Dears." It is elaborately costumed and staged with special scenery. Neva Aymar, a pretty comedienne, is the leading "dear."

Bailey and Austin's specialty is a grotesque travesty act that is one prolonged howl of merriment. While Matthews and Ashley retain the characters that have won them popularity in their new sketch, "A Smashup in Chinatown"—their songs and parodies are all fresh. Paul Kleist, musician and necromancer; "Happy Jack" Gardner, burnt-cork joker; the Three Durands, Italian street singers; Marshall and Lorraine, in depictions of Bowery types; Moitare, a slick magician; the Lucados, manipulators of heavy objects, and the Kinetograph, will all have places [illegible]

[illegible] Day the performance will be [illegible] beginning on Tuesday [illegible] the doors will open at [illegible] daily, the show starting at 1

Orpheum Theatre

The opening of the Orpheum as a vaudeville theatre to-morrow has attracted an unusual interest because of the success which has attended similar amusement enterprises [illegible] by Manager Percy Williams in New York city. The new auditorium [illegible] for the comfort and convenience of patrons. Prominent in the attractions is Arthur Prince, the London ventriloquist, who has proved one of the sensations of the New York vaudeville stage. Another particularly strong feature is Fred Karno's London comedy company of fourteen English players, adepts in pantomime, who present a novelty styled "A Night in an English Music Hall." The Empire City Quartet reappear after many seasons, and another novel musical feature will be the Lasky Rolfe Quintet, their first appearance here. One of the most recent importations, Les Brunins, billiard experts, will be seen for the first time here.

Other features are Raymond and Caverly, the Rogers brothers of vaudeville, [illegible] of Lew Fields's company, who shows as well as a mimic for the first time in Boston, a novel animal act by Mme. [illegible] pets, the Dank Sehilers, European acrobats (first time in Boston), and some novel pictures for the vitagraph. The performances begin at 2 and 8 each day, and every seat in the house will be reserved.

Hollis Street Theatre

"The Virginian," a dramatic version of Owen Wister's fascinating story of the wild West, returns to Boston to-morrow for a two weeks' engagement at the Hollis Street Theatre, commencing with a matinee performance. In the matter of atmosphere, as a reproduction of life on the unfenced range of the early '80's, the play is true to its subject in every particular. Dustin Farnum's characterization of the Western range rider has been pronounced exquisite in its manly sincerity and an ideal conception of Owen Wister's hero.

The story relates principally to the love of the Virginian for Molly Wood, the pretty Vermont school teacher, and of the hatred of Trampas, the villainous cattle thief, for the Virginian. The third act has proven one of the strongest and most talked about dramatic scenes shown on the stage in recent years. Steve, who was the pal of the Virginian, has gone wrong; Trampas has induced him to become a cattle thief and the two, with another couple of outlaws, are encamped at Horse Thief Pass, as they suppose, miles away from the vigilance committee pursuing them. They are, however, tracked to their hiding place by the Virginian at the head of the vigilantes. It is part of his duty to assist in the lynching of his old friend and comrade. The scene is of exceptional power and pathos, for it is known that Steve is more sinned against than sinning, having been led astray by the stronger will of Trampas. This episode in "The Virginian" has probably called forth more merited praise [illegible] scene produced on the stage of recent years.

The [illegible] Company is headed by Dustin Farnum, who seems almost to have been created for the title role, which he so successfully portrays. Among the [illegible] players are Frank Campeau, [illegible] Frank Nelson, Harry [illegible] Mabel Wright, [illegible] and Lillian Corbin.

Park Theatre

The return of "The Lion and the Mouse" to the Park Theatre, opening with a matinee to-morrow, will be keenly welcomed by the theatregoing public of Boston and its environs is demonstrated by the fact that the Park Theatre has the largest advance sale in the history of that playhouse. When Henry B. Harris presented the play here last season for the first time it immediately made a great hit. The play tells a strong and intensely interesting story, dealing directly with the influence exerted on American politics by the great moneyed interests. Secondly, it represents a genuine conflict of character and principle worked out in a highly logical manner, and finally it is full of human interest and emotion without the least suggestion of taint of illicit passion. Briefly outlined, the story is of the trial and disgrace of an upright and honest judge, Judge Rossmore, who has defeated certain illegal money-making schemes of a king of finance, John Burkett Ryder, known in the street and to his associates as "Ready Money" Ryder. Judge Rossmore's daughter, Shirley, with whom Jefferson Ryder's son, is in love, returns from Europe to find her father ruined [illegible] broken in health and [illegible] embarrassed as the result of [illegible] through the political influence of John Burkett Ryder, whose schemes Judge Rossmore had thwarted. One man [illegible] the proof of Rossmore's innocence [illegible] man is Ryder. Shirley's efforts to [illegible] stain from her father's name form the plot. The love interest, [illegible] in the struggle between the lion and the "mouse," and [illegible] becomes a factor in a situation as unconventional in its treatment as it is finely dramatic in its movement and climax. The play opens with a matinee to-morrow. There will be regular matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

Bijou Theatre

Beginning to-morrow afternoon and continuing twice daily, the John Craig stock company will be seen at the Bijou Theatre throughout the Fall and Winter season. Manager Craig's determination to keep right on is due to the unusual success which he and his excellent stock company have met with during their ten weeks at the Globe Theatre. The style of plays given and their admirable manner of presentation were popular, and it came to be the regular thing, despite unusually hot weather to find the theatre packed. The first play to be presented under the new conditions is the four-act comedy called "The Railroad of Love," which the late Augustin Daly adapted from the German. As compared to most plays of the lighter order this one has considerable of a story, and its plan of action is well defined. Mr. Craig has cast the play in a way to show his new company off to the very best advantage. The piece, too, will be set with [illegible] care to detail which has been especially characteristic of everything that he has put on during the Summer. The company consists of Mary Young, Cordelia MacDonald, Kate Ryan, Thomas Mackie, William Humphrey, William H. [illegible] and John F. Beck, and the new members will include Gertrude Berkeley, who played for a single week with the company this Summer; Alice Riker, Eleanor Parker, William Warren, Arthur Fox, George De Carlton and William Johnson, nearly all of whom have been seen in stock work before in this city. Mary Sanders, who will take a few weeks' rest, may rejoin the company later.

Globe Theatre

Hap Ward in a new musical comedy, entitled "Not Yet, But Soon," will inaugurate the regular season at the Globe Theatre to-morrow afternoon. It is claimed by Manager E. D. Stair that in viewing this offering the audience may safely stow away its thinking apparatus and prepare simply for two and a half hours of clean wholesome amusement without the worry of any particular amount of plot. Mr. Ward first earned his vogue as a comedian of unction and jollity during his long association with Harry Vokes, and in "Not Yet, But Soon" happily celebrates his return to his former style of entertainment. A jest, a song, an odd whimsey of ludicrous "stage business," a clever dance, constantly changing pictures and combinations of dainty coloring—this is "Not Yet, But Soon." As Bill Nerve, the champion lazy man, Mr. Ward has been fitted with a part which suits him like the proverbial glove. One of the features is an absurdly funny burlesque on "Uncle Tom's Cabin," in which the broad shouldered comedian appears as Little Eva. Mr. Ward also has with him Lucy Daly, Fred Wyckoff, Robert Evans, Matt Woodward, Dick Barry, John C. Hart, Fred Parrent, Sandy Chipman, Carrie Merrilees, Jennie Palmer, Marian Merrill and Helen Clark.

Grand Opera House

Famous Brothers Byrne will present their pantomimic comedy, "Eight Bells," at the Grand Opera House for a week, beginning with an extra matinee to-morrow, Labor Day. The production is a novelty, containing within itself a musical comedy, a farce comedy, a pantomime, a spectacular play, a circus and a burlesque constructed for laughing purposes only. The first scene represents two gardens divided by high brick walls, with a cottage on each side. The second is a steamer's deck, which turns into a big ship at sea. Four adjoining staterooms are shown, and while the ship is rolling on the high waves a number of peculiar acrobatic features are performed by the inimitable brothers Byrne. The third act represents an island upon which the ship has been wrecked, and here occurs a number of first-class specialties terminating with a funny fire scene, one of the most laughable effects ever produced. Matinees will be given as usual on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, with the extra matinee on Monday.

Columbia Music Hall

Another of the big beauty shows of the Empire Circuit will visit the Columbia to-morrow afternoon for a stay of one week. This show is the famous and popular Innocent Maids, with a galaxy of comedians, led by Nat and Sol Fields, in two laughable burlettas. "Happyland," the closing burlesque, is a satire on Li Hung Chang's visit to the United States, and is from the pen of one of the cleverest writers of burlesque in the country. In the opening show, "The Geezer," will be seen one of the most elaborate ensembles ever attempted in extravaganza. It requires the services of twenty-two women and calls for some expensive costuming and a stage setting of remarkable beauty.

The theatre will be open to-morrow evening at 8:30 o'clock to give those interested in the Nelson-Gans fight a chance to hear the returns read from the stage. The tickets sold them are good for the evening performance.

The olio is full of good acts. Hughes and Hazelton, travesty stars; Emma O'Neil, Californian baritone; Mr. and Mrs. Larry Shaw, the Seyons and Marvellous Dale, the juggler. For next Friday night, Manager Farren will have another big amateur bill.

Bowdoin Square Theatre

One of the liveliest of Southwestern melodramas "The White Caps" will be offered at the Bowdoin Square Theatre this week. It is a drama which tells vividly the experiences of a Kentucky judge who is harassed by an unruly mob because of his objection to lawlessness. The judge is protected by the young sheriff, who is in love with his daughter. By plottings the leader of the White Caps kills the judge and lays the blame on the sheriff, who is then pursued by the White Caps, but finally proves his innocence and brings the guilty person to justice. The climax of the story is one that revels in scenic work when the United States troops come to the rescue of the falsely accused and round the White Caps up. Charlotte Hunt plays the leading role of Hazel Randolph, the judge's daughter. The leading male role will fall to Wilmer Walter, and Jim Healy, the leader of the White Caps, will be presented by Henry Alexander. The play is for one week, with daily matinee at bargain prices for lady patrons.

What Would You Do Over a Thous[and Millions?]

There is only one man in this country who is reputed to be worth a thousand million dollars. That one man is John D. Rockefeller. There are four other men, appearing in a well-known drama, who during the performance of the play portray events in the life of a man who is worth this colossal amount. Perhaps you have figured yourself as a millionaire but did you ever stop to realize what you would do were you the owner of a thousand millions?

As the interpreter of a character who controls the enormous amount of wealth Arthur Byron, as "Ready Money" Ryder in "The Lion and the Mouse," may be depended upon as an actor of sufficient sincerity and intelligence for an opinion that is worth while.

"What would you do with such a fortune, for in playing the role of 'Ready Money' Ryder you must have thought it all out?" Mr. Byron was asked. "Where would charity come in?"

"That would be my first consideration. Do you realize what a man could do for charity with such capital?" asked Mr. Byron. "Why, he could transform a row of hovels reaching from here to Chicago into a veritable Utopia. He could heal the sick and bring comfort and sunshine and happiness to millions of people. I do not refer to the charity that some of our millionaires practice, the building of universities to make a lot of young men worthless for the world's work. I believe that a young man who remains in college after he is twenty-one, providing he is to be thrown upon the world to win his own livelihood

Austin & Stone's Museum

To-morrow will witness the opening of the Winter season at Austin & Stone's Museum. The Gitano troupe and Scandinavian orchestra will present a group of superb soloists and a magnetic chorus in native costumes, under the baton of Director Waldmir So ler. "Cap" Cordona's mammoth dancing bear, a second imported attraction, will furnish entertainment of an extraordinary character. Other bookings are Trixie and Ben Hur, the biggest snake in the world, and Till's Marionettes. The theatre shows will include the "Minstrel Maids," and the olio will bring before the footlights Musical Seelye, Zelda Russell, James Maxwell, in illustrated songs; the Martins, Siddons Brothers and electric vaudeville.

Howard Athenaeum

A real good Old Howard show is promised for this week. On Labor Day the bill will run from mid-day till near midnight. Among the feature acts are Fred Watson and the Morrissey Sisters in a novelty singing and dancing specialty new to the Howard. Frank V. Seymour and Emma Hill in the eccentric comedy acrobatic sketch, "The Mix and the Mixers," will offer their folly, while Elmer Tenley, best known as the Manhattan Man, will show a few things new to the Howardites. Wesson, Walters and Wesson will present their "A Trip to Washington," and Murray, Clayton and Drew will offer comedy, singing, dancing and travesty work. Charlie Harris, in the skit called "Glass Put In" and "The Inspector and the Maid." The Musical Simpsons, Carey, Cotter trio, Thornton with the winning smile, the Valedons in aerial cycle work, Carroll and Doyle in a new comedy sketch, La Rue, the flexible aerialist, Thompson and Lawrence in vocal and humorous putterings, Fredericks in new feats of magic and the Howardscope, with new pictures, will tend to make one excited and happy. There will be reports from the Nelson-Gans scrap on Monday.

Lyceum Theatre

The Lyceum will have for its next week's attraction, commencing to-morrow (Labor Day) matinee, the much-talked of Behman Show, and Frank D. Bryan's Congress of American Girls, seen for the first time out of vaudeville, in a stirring patriotic spectacular act. In the olio are the "Human Flags," sixteen dainty girls in historical ensembles, and rapid character changes; Geiger and Walters, in a novel musical act, "The Streets of Italy." The Two Ruppelts, direct from Berlin, Germany, in daring acrobatic feats; The Leo Georgis, another European act of the humorous type; The Eight Martini Mimosa Girls, from the London Music Halls, sprightly, youthful and graceful dancers; Hayes and Wynne, in "wireless sounds from the land of Terpsichore;" The Cyclonic Six, first appearance in several seasons, in an amusing mix up of ludicrous situations and incidents; The Masqued Ladies Quintette, whose identity is worth discovering as a prize is offered for the same. In the unique spectacular afterpiece styled "Hey Diddle Diddle," are: Pauline Slosson, the prima donna, Frank Manning, the eldest comedian; Pete Curley, of Celtic wit and fame; Tommy Glenroy, "the stuttering dude," and many other well known people.

Palace Theatre

The Transatlantic Burlesquers present this season the "Flubb Dubb Conspiracy," a musical comedy craze protection in three acts, said to be "a deliciously tempestuous conglomeration of animated fun and nonsense, richly seasoned with the most popularly tuneful conceits ever furnished for a like purpose." This is purely a sufficiently strong recommendation to inspire confidence, and one that will, in all probability make itself substantially felt at the box office of the Palace Theatre, where it remains as the attraction for one week. An excellent array of vaudevillians, embracing the Howard Brothers, kings of the flying banjos; Friend and Downing, conversationalists; Goforth and Doyle, novelty entertainers; the World's Comedy Four; Minnie Higgings, vocalist, and Joe Emerson, the song illustrator, will be found in the olio.

Ibsen Afternoons

On Thursday afternoons, September 13 and September 20, at the Colonial Theatre Wright Lorimer and his company will produce for the first times in Boston Henrick Ibsen's five-act prose drama, "The Wild Duck." Mr. Lorimer will be seen as Hjalmar Ekdal, the photographer, Carl Eckstrom as Gregers Werle and Marie Shotwell as Gina Ekdal. An entirely new production has been provided by William A. Brady from designs made by Mr. Lorimer, who spent his vacation in Christiania, Norway, in conference with the director of the National Theatre concerning the production of this novel play.

"A One-Horse Town"

Ned Wayburn, whose musical fun show "A One-Horse Town" comes to the Globe, September 10, is regarded as the most successful producer of musical extravaganza. Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger engaged him to stage "The Pearl and the Pumpkin," "Bluebeard," "Mother Goose," "Humpty Dumpty," "The Rounsaire" and all of the Rogers Brothers' recent productions. Mr. Wayburn was one of the first to recognize the value of high-class musical acts as drawing cards in the leading vaudeville theatres and his offerings are still the most sought for among progressive managers. Among the acts of this sort originated and owned by Ned Wayburn are the Minstrel Misses, the Futurity Winner, Daisy-Land, Rain-Dears.

Symphony Seat Sale

The interest which has been excited among patrons of the Symphony concerts by the coming of the new conductor, Mr Karl Muck, finds evidence in the unusual number of inquiries that are being made concerning the date of the auction sale of seats. The sale will take place, as usual, in the first week of October, Monday and Tuesday, the 1st and 2d being given to the sale of seats for the rehearsals, and Thursday and Friday, the 4th and 5th, to the sale of seats for the concerts. The first rehearsal and concert will be given on Friday afternoon, October 12, and Saturday evening, October 13. ... to the potent attraction of a new conductor who ranks among the few great men of his kind in the world Mr. Ellis is preparing a remarkable strong list of soloists. Chief among them will be Paderewski and Melba, their only appearance in a Boston next year; Rosenthal, Gabrilowitsch, Petschnikoff and ... Dr. Muck sails from Bremen on September 25. He has been spending his Summer in Bayreuth, where he conducted the four performances of "Parsifal," and in Salzburg, where he was one of the conductors of the Mozart Festival.

"Joseph Entangled."

Next week's play at the Bijou Theatre, the second of the Fall and Winter season of the John Craig Stock Company, will be "Joseph Entangled," which is one of the brightest comedies of Henry Arthur Jones, the English playwright. The comedy contains a cleverly conceived plot, and the dialogue is of the sparkling epigrammatic sort. All the leading members of the present strong company will be in the cast.

Out-of-Door Attractions.

To-morrow will be the first day of the Revere Beach carnival, and the festival, which is to continue two weeks, promises to be bigger and better than ever before. Among the reasons for this happy outlook is the hearty co-operation of the management of Wonderland with the enterprises along the beach itself. The programme for the week at Wonderland, too, has been arranged along Mardi Gras Carnival lines, parades floral and parades fantastic, battles of flowers and battles of confetti, festival music by the bands and festival features everywhere, will make the week a gala one at Wonderland. Thousands of incandescent lights will be added to the tens of thousands already there, and even these will be augmented by several thousand Japanese lanterns. Not to visit Wonderland some evening during this week will be to do one's self an injustice.

Because of the Revere Beach carnival, and also because of the tremendous business the enterprise is now enjoying, the date of closing has been extended to September 16. A very interesting programme of free attractions has been provided. McPhee and Hill, aerialists, will perform twice daily on parallel bars, trapeze and other apparatus high over the open-air arena. Nelson F. Butler, the cornet soloists, has been retained for another week, and Fred A. Bennett's comedy, "The Strike of the Band," in which he gives his wonderfully accurate imitations of the eccentricities of Creatore, will be repeated. For a "thriller" Professor Tilven will slide from the top of the tower to the circus ring on a slender wire. Miss Bessie Ross will give vocal solos in the arena, and Professor La Roux and his band of aeronauts will make daily novelty flights with the biggest of all balloons, "Wonderland." Next Thursday there will be a convention of the "graduates" of the infant incubators, when many, if not all, the infantile mites who owe their lives to this scientific institution at Wonderland will ... and on exhibition.

Greater Paragon Park will close its season in a blaze of glory on Monday night with a holiday celebration. The plan to celebrate this last week of the season by giving away to every hundredth buyer of an admission ticket a special strip ticket which admits the holder to all the shows in the Park, ... will have aggregated by Monday something like five thousand dollars in prizes and to make it all the more interesting on the final day, Labor Day, ... of the lucky tickets will also have refunded to them the price they paid for admission to the park. On a conservative estimate there will not be less than 50,000 visitors to Paragon Park on Labor Day, and on this basis there will be at least 500 patrons whose day's enjoyment at the Park will not cost them a single cent. All the remarkable attractions at Paragon Park continue to the very end of the season, including Will Hill on the high wire, La Belle Blanche in her "Slide for Life," and Sadie Knowlton in her terrific "Plunge of Death." The Bostock Animal Arena has a remarkable record of average daily attendance. "Teddy," the educated chimpanzee, at the close of the season goes to Paris to appear at Bostock's Hippodrome.

Trolley companies report that this Summer has been by far the biggest season since the electric car's inception. The Boston & Northern and Old Colony systems will shortly inaugurate a series of excursions by trolley that cannot help but become popular. At the passenger department of those roads, situated at No. 300 Washington street, descriptive folders may be had for the asking, and hints for all sorts of trips, whether they are to be short or long, are freely given. Many people are taking the trip to Maine by trolley, and the shorter trips to Gloucester and Plymouth at reduced rates are still popular. A good method for a party is to hire a special car, costing about the same as the regular fares.

Norumbega Park will have special holiday attractions for Labor Day, and the most popular of these will be the concerts all day in Music Court by the American Watch Company Band of Waltham. The launch service for the Charles River trips from the new Norumbega boat landing will ... for the holiday. No little enthusiasm is being manifested at Norumbega Park now over the new souvenir postal cards, which have just arrived from Germany. In the covered open-air theatre the vaudeville programme will be headed by Kein, Ott brothers and Nickerson in the greatest of all musical acts. A novelty singing and dancing act will be offered by Whalen and West, entitled "Won't You Walk with Me"; Auman and Hartley will give a singing and character sketch, and the Nadas, acrobats, and the ...graph will exhibit a series of motion pictures.

There is no place in the world more delightful than Nova Scotia, the "Land of Summer Rest." It is a wonderful sight now to drive through the Cornwallis Valley, containing some of the largest apple orchards in the world. Persons should plan to take a trip on one of the popular steamers, Prince George and Boston, of the Dominion Atlantic Railway Company, which leave Long Wharf (foot of State street) daily (except Saturday) at 2 p. m.

Though the Summer excursion season has now a short lease on life it still has probably the record day of the season to come. That will be to-morrow, Labor Day. It is the last holiday of the warm weather, and a day on which people make a special effort to get out and enjoy some of the near by excursions. A resort which will get a good share of the holiday patronage, by reason of its many attractions and the fine excursion by water, is that to Bass Point, Nahant, on the steamers of the Nahant line, sailing from Lincoln wharf, foot of Battery street. At the point there is boating, bathing, fishing, dancing, roller skating, fireworks, free band concerts and a host of other recreations.

No trip out of Boston presents as many pleasurable novelties as this combination rail and boat trip to Bass Point. Trains connect with the steamers of the Lynn Steamboat Company for Bass Point. The trip entire takes fifty minutes and costs but twenty cents. Dancing, bathing, boating, fishing, roller skating, shore dinners and ... at the hotels are some of the attractions.

Travel on the three Plant line steamers sailing from Commercial wharf to the Plant lines was never so heavy. The popularity of the only all water route to Halifax, Nova Scotia, Cape Breton and Charlottetown is apparent every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at noon when the steamers sail. Some Facts About Plays and Players Beloved by Theatregoers and Events That Will Please Them.

By ERNEST L. WAITT.

RECENTLY I was shown a remarkable ... of Wright Lorimer standing by the grave of Ibsen, the N... poet. Ibsen wrote "The Wild Duck," which Mr. Lorimer is to produce here at special Thursday matinees, and this picture brings the author and the player together, and shows that although the former is dead, he still lives through his story in Mr. Lorimer. Mr. Lorimer is ... after the ideal in dramatic art. He has a firm belief in the theatric ideal on the stage, as opposed to the Twentieth Century ... he believes that the majority of theatre-goers prefer an ideal ... thoroughly realistic one. This idea he has faithfully followed in the dramatization of "The Shepherd King."

Miss Fola La Follette, daughter of the Senator from Wisconsin, has been engaged by Will J. Block to create a leading role in support of Alice Fischer in a new comedy, "Honor Bright," to have its initial presentation in Chicago in October. Miss Fischer is now conducting preliminary rehearsals of the new play at her home at Siasconset, where the author of the comedy, Miss Grace L. Furniss, is her guest.

E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe have acquired a most elaborate classical repertoire, and it will be interesting to note how many of the plays announced will really be produced. At ... Mr. Sothern has given out that he and Miss Marlowe will ... "John the Baptist," Percy Mackaye's "Sappho and Phaon" and ... "Hamlet" ... Hauptmann's "The Sunken Bell," ... play written around Launcelot and Guinevere, and Shakespeare's ... "Merchant of Venice," "Twelfth Night," "The Taming of the Shrew," "Romeo and Juliet" and "As You Like It." Rather a large order, eh?

The Bijou Theatre, which hereafter will be the home of the John Craig stock company, has been the scene of many a notable ... in its earlier days. ... many famous stars have trod its boards, among them the great Macready, ... who appeared there ... the famous Charles Burke, the comedian, and Jean Davenport Lander, or as she was better known before her marriage, Jean Margaret Davenport.

In E. S. Willard's next American tour, which will begin in Montreal on October 1, "Colonel Newcome" will be the chief novelty, with Mr. Willard in the title role. The cast includes William Sauter, Ivan Simpson, A. S. Homewood, Walter Edmunds, J. W. Lawrence, H. Barfoot ... Miss Alice Lonnon, ... Miss Nellie Angell. Other members of the cast are Miss Agnes Wharton, Miss Jessie ... and Miss Ruth Barry.

Tyrone Power, who is to star under the management of Edward A. Braden in Marie Corelli's Scriptural play "Barabbas" during the coming season, is at St. Paul ... Mr. Braden announced yesterday that "Barabbas" would have its premier on November 5 at the Boston Theatre. Edith Crane will be cast for Judith, the principal female part.

Charles B. Dillingham has obtained the dramatic rights to Winston Churchill's novel, "Coniston," and will make a production of the new play in the early Spring.

Miss Thais Lawton, the new leading lady of the Castle Square Stock Company, takes great pride in a personal tribute that she received from Joseph Jefferson several years ago after acting scenes from "Macbeth" and "Pygmalion and Galatea." "I feel that I can say what I honestly think," remarked the eminent actor. "If you do not become a great actress I shall be very much surprised. No other young woman on the stage that I know of could have done what you have done to-day."

Money forms the basis of the theme in "The Lion and the Mouse." This is what the "Mouse" says of it: "Money itself is nothing: it's the spirit that controls it, the spirit that gives it, the spirit that receives it, the spirit that earns it, the spirit that spends it. It also creates misery and is an engine of destruction when not properly used, destroying individuals as it does nations."

Digby Bell has two old negro servants, husband and wife, at his summer home at Siasconset, Mass., who have been in the family a good many years. One day recently Bell noticed that the two were having, evidently, a very heated argument. Wishing to pour oil upon the troubled waters, if needed, he approached them and said:

"What are you two arguing so excitedly about? If there is any trouble you had better tell me, perhaps I can settle it for you."

"Dis am no argument, Mr. Bell," replied the negro; "I hab earned ten dollars wid a leetle side speculashun. My wife thinks she ain't gwine to git dat ten dollars. Well, she ain't. Dis am no argument, sah."

Mary Hall has already reaped the reward of her great hit in Franklin Fyles' play at Proctor's by being signed by Daniel Arthur and J. Arthur and Zimmerman an ideal choice for the part, ... a wonderfully strong portrayal.

Arnold Daly's company, which comes to ... Theatre for three weeks beginning Monday evening, September 10, will begin its engagement with "Arms and the Man," ... the famous Bernard Shaw, the Irish genius, now the reigning literary lion of both America and England. "Arms and the Man" is perhaps ... of ... Shaw comedies at any rate it is the Irishman's very merriest satire if we may accept the views of the critics of New York, where Arnold Daly's company was seen in the piece all last Spring. Mr. Daly will appear with his company in this city playing his original characters in all the Shaw plays. Following "Arms and the Man" Mr. Daly announces "Candida," "You Never Can Tell," "How He Lied to Her Husband" and "The Man of Destiny" by Bernard Shaw, and "The Monkey's Paw" by W. W. Jacobs, "The Lemonade Boy" by Gladys Unger, "The Flag Station" by Charles Arthur Kenyon and "Grandfather Coquesne" by Cosmo Hamilton. Mr. Daly will appear in each play and associated with him will be Chrystal Herne, Margaret Bourne, Isabelle Urquhart, Edgar Baume, Dodson Mitchell, Percival Moore and John Findlay.

The forthcoming return of Albert Chevalier ... to this country should be an artistic event that is unparalleled in the annals of American dramatic history. Of Mr. Chevalier it can only be said that he stands in a position unique by itself, for he alone has created it, and so far has no imitators worthy of the name. Generically he may be classed as a character actor, but actually he is much more, and his exact standing in the dramatic profession is hard to classify, though perhaps he might best be described as a ... His debut ... acknowledged ... that ... When ... with twenty odd characters that were at once beautiful and artistic, and now on his return he will give us others of equal brilliancy.

Henrietta Crosman regretfully foresees her loss of taste for chickens this Winter. In the comedy, "All of a Sudden Peggy," she has to eat chicken at every performance—really eat it, not merely pretend to do so. She has always been fond of chicken, but she expects to loathe the very name of it before the season is over. Her company this season is Edward Mackey, Ernest Stallard, J. R. Crauford, Addison Pitt, John Marble, C. A. Chandos, Kate Meek, Ida Waterman, Jane Marbury and Ann Warrington.

FAIR WOMEN OF MANCHESTER'S SOCIETY COLONY

SOCIAL TIDE AT THE GAY NORTH SHORE NOW ON EBB

Manchester by the Sea, Sept. 1.—The North Shore season has reached high water mark. From now on the tide of social activities will be on the ebb. The Essex County Club has been quite the centre of fashion this week. On Wednesday afternoon the August show of the North Shore Horticultural Society was held, and this, in addition to the usual Wednesday afternoon band concert, offered an attraction for one of the largest gatherings of the smart set of the season. Mrs. Morrimer B. Mason, Mrs. W. Scott Fitz, Miss Adele G. Thayer, Mrs. George E. Cabot, Mrs. Frederick E. Tibbitts and Mrs. C. E. Cotting were among the largest exhibitors. Mrs. Henry L. Higginson was awarded the society medal for the best table of flowers. Mrs. H. C. Hooper received the beautiful silver cup offered for the best collection of foliage and flowering plants.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Denegre have been entertaining at Villa Crest, their West Manchester home, Mrs. C. S. Hoff of Newport.

Mr. and Mrs. Cameron Curry of Detroit are guests of Mr. and Mrs. William McMillan at Eaglehead, Manchester. Wednesday evening Mrs. McMillan gave a delightful dinner of sixteen covers in honor of her guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis M Whitehouse returned Thursday from a cruise in their yacht, the Sirata, to Nantucket. Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Whitehouse threw open her spacious residence for the last in the series of subscription recitals.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Cunningham, who have been spending the month of August at Northeast Harbor, Me., will return to their West Manchester cottage next week for the balance of the season.

Beverly Farms

The big event of the season in this section of the North Shore will be the open-air horse show of the Myopia Hunt Club at Hamilton Monday. Society always looks forward to this event with considerable interest, and all join in making the event a gala one.

Mrs. J. S. Cabot has been entertaining the past week, Mrs. Merritt Trimble of New York.

Miss P. S Stackpole, who came on for the Mitchell-Shaw wedding last week, and was a house guest of Mrs. R. H. Stevenson, has been spending the past few days a guest of Mrs. Bryce J. Allan, Beverly Cove.

Mrs. W. Sears has just returned from a visit with the C. C. H. Peabodys at Paul Smith's, New York.

Beverly

Mr. and Mrs. Summers and their daughter Helen of Rochester, N. Y., are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Atkinson on Lothrop street, Beverly Shore. Mrs. Summers has traveled extensively through Europe, but expresses herself equally attracted with the view obtained from the piazza of Mr. Atkinson's house, compared it with the world-renowned Bay of Naples

To say that the whole layout of the grounds is beautiful hardly gives credit to the thought and work that has been expended on this place. The hedge in front was set out in 1891, made of Japanese barberry, has grown to the height of six feet, and is itself one of the attractive features of this residence. The strawberry on the grounds is simply wonderful, and seen from the beautiful and comfortable piazza in the rear of the house, easily reminds one of the vineyards in Southern France or Italy. Looking out over the valley nearby, the imagination would not have to be too drastic to bring to mind some of the beautiful Swiss views.

Mr. Atkinson is justly proud of this home, whereon he finds quiet, peace and rest after his business cares. A more restful, beautiful and attractive spot cannot be found on Beverly Shore.

"Connie" Zerrahn and Elizabeth Rosen Among Those Who Keep Gayety at High Pitch.

Youth and beauty are enjoying their innings in the whirl of social gayeties at the North Shore, and tennis, golf, swimming, launching parties and picnics topped off with formal and informal dances fill the Summer days of the younger contingent.

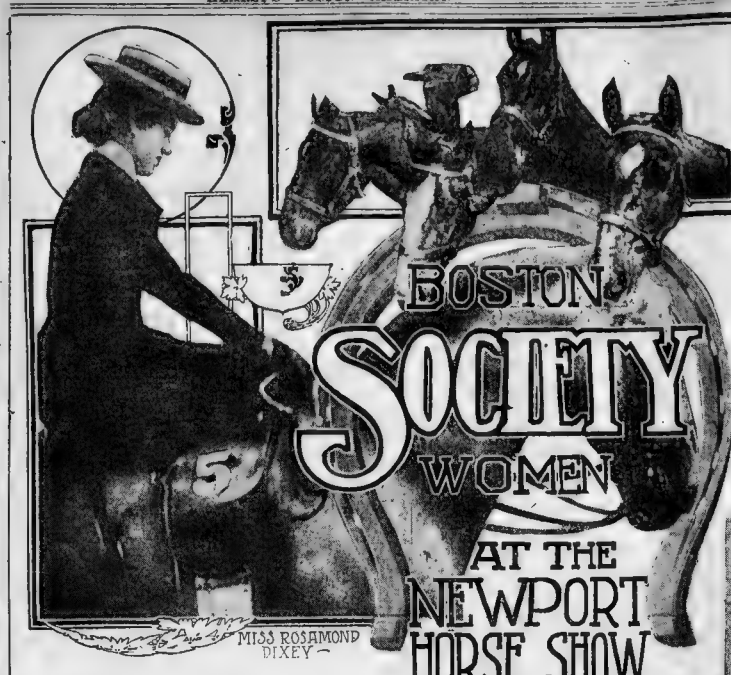
Beginning on Thursday, golf held sway, and the open tournament at the Essex County Club put in a strong bid for participation. The grasses and grounds were fairly alive with smartly gowned women and pretty girls. On Saturday the mounted sports and gymkhana attracted society and was a fitting climax to the week's gay round of events.

Prominent leaders in the fashionable affairs of the exclusive North Shore colony and to whom the smart set there look for novel ideas in the way of entertaining, are the pretty and original Connie Zerrahn, Elizabeth Rosen, Hannah Stevenson and that most charming young matron, Mrs. George de Peale.

Miss Zerrahn, who, with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Zerrahn, spent the past year or so in Germany, is one of the most sought-after girls on the North Shore. Her face, to which there is a charming sparkle of expression, is most interesting. She is the typical out-of-door girl, and her wit and originality in devising new forms of amusement has won her no end of popularity. Elizabeth Rosen, who is with her father and mother, the Russian Ambassador Rosen and Baroness, at the Coolidge cottage, in spite of all the attentions showered upon her is quite the spoiled and remains the same wholesome fun-loving girl who first won the love and admiration of both old and young on the North Shore.

Hannah Stevenson, the pretty Viscout Cole president, is always in demand, and though she would "rather play tennis than eat," to please her friends she lays aside her racquet and leads them into new fields of enjoyment. New ideas are readily germinated in her fertile brain, and she is ever ready to meet the constant and growing demand for "something new" in the line of amusement

Mrs. de Meale, wife of the secretary of the Swedish Legation, has added much to the zest of the social life on the North Shore, and is the hostess for many charming and altogether novel entertainments.



REGALLY GOWNED SOCIETY WOMEN WATCH TENNIS PLAY

Newport, R. I., Sept. 1.—The last in the series of mixed doubles in the three tennis series arranged by Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. Barger-Wallach and Miss Maude Wetmore began at the Newport Casino last Monday afternoon with these entries: Miss Edna Barger and Alfred Stillman, 2d, Miss Anita Peabody and Edgar Leonard. Miss Eleanora Sears and W. A. Larned, Miss Edith Rotch and N. W. Niles, Mrs. Reginald Brooks and Malcolm D. Whitman, Miss Margaret Busk and Harold Sands, Mrs. Barger-Wallach and Cyril Hatch, Miss Clara Chase and William Putnan, Jr. In the finals played on Wednesday Malcolm D. Whitman and Mrs. "Reggie" Brooks beat Miss Edna Barger and Alfred Stillman. 6—4, 8—7, 6—3.

Among the beautifully gowned women on Monday at Newport Lawn Tennis Tournament were Mrs. James Lowell Putnam in a princess costume of black lace over white taffeta, panama hat with ostrich tips; Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., pongee coat suit, cerise chip hat, gray plumes, Mrs. Nathalie Schenck Collins, valenciennes lace, white lingerie hat; Mrs. James B. Haggin, embroidered mull, cherry hat, roses to match; Mrs. Egerton L. Winthrop, Jr., white batiste, with Irish lace, salmon pink hat; Miss Louise Scott, white eyelet linen, blue girdle, leghorn pink rosebush hat; Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, white mull princess gown, valenciennes lace, pink leghorn hat, Mrs. "Billy" Rositer, Jr., white embroidered mull, cream leghorn hat; Mrs. "Dick" Gambrill, buff linen, heavily embroidered in white grapes, black picture hat. Mr. and Mrs. James Lowell Putnam have been in Newport for the tennis, and were prominent among those present at Mrs. Reggie de Koven's recent ball in honor of Ethel de Koven, which, by the way, society is saying cost the De Kovens the snug little sum of $4,000. Mrs. Putnam, who strolled in at the Casino with Mrs. de Koven the other morning, was decidedly smart in a white gown, pink girdle, Nile hat to match, turned up on one side above a big red rose. They have been guests of Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish

The Countess of Stratford, who was once the greatest beauty in New York society and a woman of high position in London, was Cora Sutton, daughter of the late Samuel Sutton of New York. Samuel Sutton's father was born in Saratoga, and went South, where he married the most beautiful and best educated rebel girl in Secession times Miss Elizabeth Cary. Lady Stratford has been twice married. She be now Mrs. Morgan M. Kennard, but retains her title by courtesy of the King Vern smith, first married Sam Colgate, who died and left her $20,000,000. Then, while cutcoating it in London, the elderly and eccentric beau brummel of Stratford, fell in love with her golden red hair and blue eyes, and bestowed his title and landed estates upon her. Six months after their marriage in Grace Church, New York, the old lord, while duelling on a railroad platform in Jersey City, had slipped under a train and was killed. Then she met Kennard, who made he in love millions in South Africa, and married him He is a sister of Sidney Smith and Sam Smith. He posed for Mrs. Smith. Miss Sears was on hand Wednesday to see the championship match between Wrenn and Clothier.

NEWPORT SOCIETY GLORIES IN HORSE SHOW THIS WEEK

With Additional Entries of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, It Is Expected Records Will Be Broken.

Society will worship at the shrine of the horse the coming week, for on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock the annual show will be held at Newport.

The lively bidding for boxes in the recent race augurs well for the social brilliancy, and beauty will be arrayed in the best for the, the climax to the Summer's gaieties. It is here that all Newport will assemble, "old" and "new," mature and budding, representing many cities, and where the belles of Boston and Baltimore will hold their own with those of New York and Washington Blue blood and new blood will be equally set forward, and everything will be life and stir. The open side of life at Newport is at no time seen to better advantage than during the days of the horse Show.

No Autos Need Apply.

The scene from the sartorial standpoint will be more brilliant than that presented at the Tuxedo Park horse show in mid June, or even the national horse show at the Madison Square Garden in November. During those three days the horse will be king, and no automobiles need apply. The events are far more varied, and with the additional entries of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, who did not exhibit last year, there is the prospect that this show will be one of the very best ever seen in Newport There will be a splendid battle between some of the largest stables in the country

The feminine element in all the finery of flowers and feathers will be in constant attendance. Beauty and social position will don the very latest hats and garments from Paris, and the grandstand from a

BIG PLANS MADE FOR LABOR DAY

"Wild Bill" Kennedy and Cowboys Soon Fold Tents.

"Wild Bill" Kennedy and his strife gladiators, bold bad bandits, cowgirls and other entertainers of the Wild West show down at Wonderland are getting ready to don their Sunday go to meetin regalia, for there will be great doings down there during the two weeks set aside for the Mardi Gras. Monday will be a gala day in Wild Bill's arena, and Tuesday and Wednesday will be none the less notable, for on those days thousands of men, women and children will witness the Wild West and Indian congress as guests of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

The gilt-edged invitations to the carnival week will eddy about the Wild West, and after that the boys will round up their steeds for the last time this season and prepare to trek across the plains to their home ranches while they all enjoy the rest and quiet of cold weather, bright fires and other comforts of life.

Go ng Back to the Plains.

The Indians are busying themselves already with their home tepees and making preparation for the Winter on their own reservation, "Wild Bill" himself will not go back to Bills, Oklahoma, but one has but to glance at his plans to guess into it to where he expects to fall back upon his interests for the Winter. Annie Shaffer, the daring cowgirl who rides kicking horses that the most valiant of the "boys" are leery of, told a reporter from the BOSTON AMERICAN yesterday that she had worked pretty hard this season and was going to settle down on her ranch in San Angelo, Texas. It is whispered about the corral that Miss Shaffer has another interest that draws her to quaint San Angelo, but she blushes very prettily whenever this subject is mentioned, and always finds something to busy herself about on the other side of the stockade.

One of the new members of Wild Bill's aggregation, Captain W. E. Bennett, is going to take a step into vaudeville, and perhaps he may be lost to the Wild West for ever. Captain Bennett is one of the best sharpshooters that ever went out with an "outfit," as they call the Wild West show, and there are few combinations that he can't outdo. One of his favorite little stunts is to shoot four glass balls thrown into the air at the same time. Another trick that sends the chills up and down one's spine is shooting glass balls which are nicely balanced on a cowboy's head.

Those and other feats of the thriller type promise to be one of the big features of the Wild West show during the two weeks to come.

Millionaire Talk "a Pipe."

All of Wild Bill's cow punchers have secured positions, or, as they call it, "chances" for Winter's work. One of the boys told of overhearing a woman spectator remark one day last week that she thought that the cowboys were not real cowboys at all, but merely riders who were trained very much the same as other circus performers, and merely wore the cowboy "rig" to lend realism to the spectacle. The fallacy of such a condition was explained by the cowboy, whom inborn modesty forbids the mention of his name.

"There ain't nothin' to that idea of the lady's, pard," he said, stretching his legs after a particularly tough ride on a big bucker. "I guess I know what's the goods in a Wild West outfit, 'cause I've hung to this here aggregation for four seasons and if you don't believe me, go over and ask Wild Bill. This talk about us being swells in the Winter time and making so much money with the show that we are regular mills nobs is a pipe. Take it from me, it's a pipe!

"I've been that works at ridin', ropin' and ridin' the buckers in my good Wild West show has got to be the real goods as far as his bein' able to hold down his job is concerned. I've heard this knock before about the riders bein' regular performers and not knowin anything about a ranch at all, but I tell you though, partner, that the best recommend that you can take to a holder is that you have been with so and so's show outfit all Summer."

"Makes a Man Lazy."

"It stands to reason, don't it?"

"With this show we fellers are expected to ride a bucker every show; that's three, four and five times a day, and sometimes more than that. We have to do ropin' and all kinds of didoes. Why, out on a ranch we only have a roundup in a dog's age almost, and there's not much doin' in the broncho bustin line except for one or two of the fellers who are bunked up on the ranch for that particular purpose.

We see more hard work with a show outfit in the season, which runs four months at most, than we do with a ranch in a year's time. Of course, we do this principally because there is more money than there to be workin' in the West. But that's not the only reason. Some o' the fellers has got good jobs out there that they could hold down all the year round, but they are considered good men, and for that reason they are allowed more privileges than the others get. That makes a man idzy, you know, that special privilege business, as it affects a cow puncher just as much as it does one o' them Senators that's gettin' knocked so much now. Say, but some one is certainly handin' the lemon out to them fellers, what?

"Money Ain't at All Bad."

"As I was sayin', not all of the fellers come on to join the outfit because of the extra money. Some of 'em, realizing the hard work that they have to do with the show, join just to keep in good condition, and they enjoy the game just like a vacation. The work's harder, but its kinder fun to play before a big crowd of people all the time, and the money we get out of it ain't at all bad, no, sir, not bad at all.

"I've got a chance for this winter, though, out in Colorado, I've usually went to it in Hilloo but I'm goin' into Colorado, just to try it. The cow punchers call that state the 'Dude's hang-out,' 'cause there is so many big cities scattered 'round, and its only a little bit of a lope from some o' the biggest places into town, so when a feller goes to ranch it there, he kinder gets new ideas from goin' into the city so much, and gradually he gets tenderfoot ways on him, almost afore he knows it. It's an awful fate, and I hope that I won't ketch it.

"I'm sorry to say that this Wonderland has put some o' my bunkies on the danger list, and, honest, I caught Eddie (my pertickler pal) cryin' to get into a paper collar last Sunday. He'll certainly get the rasps if he tries that on again. I'm frail it's a girl—but we all hope for the best. We break up the outfit pretty soon, you know, and perhaps when he gets out on the old free-and-open again he'll come to and fergit it. Get to be goin'? Well, say, pard, don't knock us an' say we're strong on the brownstone front residences and fur overcoats in the winter, 'cause that's a pipe an' I hate to think that anybody would think that about us. S long"

Parade a Big Drawing Card.

There's some pretty good rough and homely philosophy there, and if a little unpolished, it's dead earnest and not bad to absorb.

The programme which Colonel Kennedy has arranged for the coming two weeks is one of promise, and the members of the show are going to do their prettiest to make a favorable impression on the great army of Wonderland visitors who will storm the gates during the closing of the season. Several great excursions are being arranged and one of 2,000 people employes of the Ipswich Wool Manufacturing Company of Waltham, was on the grounds yesterday and enjoyed the big attractions, not forgetting the Indian Congress and Wild West.

The parade about the lagoon and along the board walk is itself quite an entertainment and is plenty fine drawing card, for the splendid red men, in their feathered and much-beaded regalia and with their stoical faces adorned with fleeting pigments, the cowboys and the cowgirls and the Cowboy Band, all hold the attention of the Wonderland pleasure seekers and incidentally draw the crowds to the big arena.

Big Labor Day Plans.

More power to Wild Bill! Absolutely devoid of the tinsel of make-believe, his show is a winner, and the BOSTON AMERICAN'S guests who will have the pleasure of witnessing the show on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week will find that they have seen about the strongest show of the kind that ever played before New England folks.

As Monday is a holiday and always regarded as the big day of the whole season at Revere Beach, the Wild West show will be repeated several times during the day and evening, and as the enclosure about the arena is large enough to accommodate several thousand spectators, Colonel Kennedy is preparing to pay to 10,000 to morrow

WONDERLAND'S SUCCESS DUE LARGELY TO PUBLICITY MAN

In publicity there is success, say the managers of Wonderland, whose season closes this month.

Starting on May 30 as a brand new proposition, Wonderland concludes its first year well up in popular favor, successful despite weather drawbacks, usually the cause of failure of Summer pleasure resorts.

WILLIAM H. WALSH,
Press Representative at Wonderland.

Few places have ever been so conspicuously paraded before the public as has this city by the sea. Day in and day out people have read of the wonderful things that were going on, the amusing, the interesting, the thrilling, and have flocked there to see for themselves.

It has been popular with the masses even on rainy days, when there was little prospect that the clouds would clear away, the people raised their umbrellas and gaily paraded the board walks and then sought shelter within the concessions where they found things to amuse and entertain them.

American Played Big Part.

In securing for Wonderland the publicity which it sought, the placing of its attractions before the people all over New England, the BOSTON AMERICAN, in both its daily and Sunday editions, played a most important part. At the outset the BOSTON AMERICAN gave announcement as the organ which could reach the most people, the people that the Wonderland management wished to reach. Wonderland's attendance for the season, outclassing that of any similar resort, is evidence that the work was heard about by quite a few persons throughout the New England States.

Wonderland originated with John J. Higgins, who, believing that such a place could be made a success, purchased the twenty-six acres of land at Revere on which the city now stands and began talking about getting people interested. Mr. Higgins was joined in the project by [illegible] Thompson of New York, how Wonderland's general manager, Horace Mann, [illegible] secretary, and Major Thomas D. Barrell of Governor Guild's staff.

"Better Get a Press Agent."

Among the concessions that was suggested was the Brady-Grossman company's hours. Mr. Brady asked what had been done in the line of publicity. That question had been forgotten in the rush of other business.

"Better get a press agent," said Mr. Brady, "and boom this park."

Someone suggested William H. Walsh of the Boston Theatre, who had secured publicity for that house, the Eastern Steamship Company, Dreamland and Luna Park, Coney Island. Promptly Walsh was sent for. He [illegible] Feabruary 15.

Mr. Walsh worked day and night accepting the public that Wonderland was going to be a great show. If he found a doubter he took the doubter bodily to Wonderland, and even in his half-finished state convinced him.

Wonderland, talked about and paraded by the column every day, opened with a huge crowd at its doors fighting almost for admission. They gave place to other crowds during the day and evening. They never ceased coming.

Drew Big Crowds.

Mr. Walsh sat in his office and figured [illegible] to bring more crowds. He got them. He secured publicity for the things that interested the mother, the children, grownups and the boys and girls. The press agent figures that Wonderland has been well launched on the sea of amusement enterprises.

Wonderland was selected by the BOSTON AMERICAN as the place to send its readers. How they enjoyed themselves has been told time and time again in the columns of this paper. The BOSTON AMERICAN crowds, in the early days of the week, swelled the attendance many thousands.

Mr. Walsh, the creator of Wonderland's publicity, was formerly a newspaper man and connected with several Boston and New York papers, principally as a political writer. He deserted the newspaper field to become a press representative and agent of publicity several years ago.

MARCH TEMPO GIVES LOVE SONG THE BARBARIC TOUCH

Popular love songs had so long made use of the slow waltz movement in the refrain that it was no wonder that "Hiawatha," with its spirited march movement, swept the country and could not be suppressed until several incorrigible singers and whistlers had been placed behind the bars.

It seems that it is only the burning passion of love as it is supposed to exist among savages and semi-barbarians in the tropics that lends itself to such a treatment in the march movement. There is nothing dreamy about the passion of these warm blooded unsophisticated creatures—at least according to the poets and composers. They love as they fight, with all their nerves on edge.

"Hiawatha" was a convincing argument for this theory, and therefore brought forth a crop of imitations, most of which were pale and unprintable. There is printed in this newspaper to-day, however, a march love song which cannot be called an imitation, though it does suggest that tremendous success of a few seasons ago. It is called "My Mexican Queen"—which is well, since the specification of a more temperate country as the land of these lovers might cause doubts about the progress of the march tempo.

The melody is very pretty, with an effective distribution of phrases rapidly sung with a refrain for each note and sustained notes hold over the bar.

An idea of the arrangement may be gained from one stanza with the refrain:

In a quiet little nook by a brook
I would meet my lover bold,
In Mexico, quite long ago;
'Twas a warm and very bright, starry night
When his love to me he told.
Quite long ago, in Mexico.

Songs of true love by the birds right above
Filled our hearts with glee;
Shade from the trees by the soft, gentle breeze
Set us fancy free.
Then he made me happy as could be
When these words he sang to me
"Oh, you're my own, my Mexican queen,
My heart's own dream, you reign supreme;
Your throne will ever rest beside this silvery stream,

Poultney Bigelow Investigates Panama Canal Again

The eye of the whole maritime world is centred on the digging of the Panama Canal by the United States Government.

But the mouth of the whole civilized world is widening into a loud guffaw and sneer at the incompetence of the men who are handling the momentous contract.

Poultney Bigelow, who has spent many years in the study of colored races and labor problems in tropical countries, in 1905 went down to the scene of the digging of the Panama Canal to investigate conditions. The results of his investigations were published in a magazine in January of this year, denouncing the inefficiency of the men who are handling the work.

His article came to the attention of the Federal Government, which, through the President, issued a statement which contradicted Mr. Bigelow's, claiming that he had made but a superficial examination of the ground.

The Cosmopolitan, therefore, sent Mr. Bigelow back to the scene of the Panama Canal, and in the September issue is an article which is a scathing denunciation of the horrors accompanying the work of the digging of the canal.

In 1879 De Lesseps, the great French engineer, started to dig across the Isthmus of Panama. Ten years later the organization went into bankruptcy, and the French Government sentenced to varying terms of penal servitude many a noted financier and politician for political jobbery, bribery and other heinous crimes in the eyes of good government.

It is to be inferred that, since inefficiency and political jobbery are accompanying this country's attempt to dig the canal, the same results will follow—imprisonment, penal servitude, for those who are guilty.

You, every man and woman in this country, who are taxpayers, ought to take an active, vital interest in this canal. It means commercial supremacy to this country—a commercial supremacy which no other nation, even in the remotest degree, can approach. It means joining the two great oceans—the Atlantic and Pacific—and it means, when it is successfully completed, what you are seeking for—commercial prosperity.

But do you want to fail as De Lesseps failed—do you want this nation the laughing stock of the world? Or——

Do you want to have it said that the work was finished honestly, quickly, and efficiently, and with as little of the attendant horrors of death and disease among those working in a swampy tropical country, as possible? Little or no effort is made yet toward draining the land, whereon the workmen are COMPELLED to live, of the reeking, filthy swamps that exude the most terrible of diseases—tropical fevers.

If you are a MAN, and a real citizen, you will read Poultney Bigelow's article, "PANAMA—THE HUMAN SIDE" in the September Cosmopolitan, and then act as befits a citizen.

ALL CUBA IS AFLAME IN REVOLT.

HUNDREDS RALLY TO FAMOUS LEADER'S CALL

CIENFUEGOS HARASSED BY BESIEGING FORCES

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Havana, Sept. 1.—Puerto Principe Province has joined the revolt. It is the last to take up arms against the Palma government, which at last realizes that the insurrection is serious. Rurales have been rushed there, but their number is utterly inadequate to cope with the situation. They can only hope at best to stem the tide till such a time as the administration of the irreconcilables.

It is believed that Caulares has gone to join General Iseloa Sanchez, a veteran of the war of liberation, who is reported near Arroyo Blanco in the province of Puerto Principe with 200 well armed men.

Arroya Blanco is 22 miles from Moron, in a southwesterly direction. The Governor of the province has telegraphed here that the white district is in a state of unrest and that troops are badly needed. He sent word that he was enrolling volunteers, and that many were volunteering pressed that the revels was not as serious as appeared on the face of events.

Rebels Seize Bahia Honda.

Bahia Honda, an important town on the north coast of Havana Province, has been occupied by a band of rebels 800 strong under the command of Campos Marquetti, the negro Congressman, and General Castillo. They have been riding the countryside for several days, but have not molested the property of foreigners.

No serious is the state of affairs at Cienfuegos in Santa Clara that the city hall has been fortified. An armored car was sent out from city to-day with a force of furalers. No word has been received from their departure. It was reported that 200 insurgents were seen near the town this morning. Yesterday this same band raided the town of Rancheuela, and after running off a big herd of horses, took $700 from the town treasury. No shots were fired, and the inhabitants were not disturbed in their ordinary pursuits.

There has been no word to-day from Pinar del Rio. There was a report that Guerra was still avoiding an engagement with Avalos, but no confirmation of this was obtainable.

Fear American Intervention.

The government organs are beginning to warn the people of the danger of American intervention. La Discusion, the semi-official organ of the Palma government, says to-day:

"Permanent intervention would be worse than death. It would be the defeat of the Caribbean should engulf the pearl of the Antilles.

"The colored race may trouble before the possibility of intervention. Americans hate and despise negroes.

"Everywhere with whom they have been in contact for two hundred years, are treated like dogs, lynched, and hardly considered human. If it is so with negroes of their own land and language, what would happen to the Cuban negro?

"Our courteous comrades in the public departments will be astonished to see the type of Rifles (General Tasker H. Bliss), who, when administrator of customs, asked nobody to be seated in his office and who forced the use of the English language."

What was reported on Friday to have been a great government victory over the insurgent force under Colonel Asbert in Havana province by reports received late this evening turns out to have been in fact a slight rebuff for the revolutionists. [illegible] not suffer an outright defeat at Colonel Asbert's hands.

LOVE TRIUMPHS AND BRIDE LOST TO HUSBAND FOR MONTHS RETURNS TO HIM

Pretty Lena Picard, who until last December 2 was Lena Cross of No. 176 Broadway, Somerville, when she married Donet Picard, of Cliftondale, to remain with him only two hours after the wedding, and for whom the young man has since sought everywhere, even starting suit for $5,000 against the two sisters and a brother of his bride, charging them with keeping her from him, is to-day with her husband. She rejoined him two days ago and now they are in Lowell spending Sunday and Labor Day among friends, perfectly happy that the separation which had blighted their early days is over forever.

Picard is employed in Lynn as a shoeworker. A year ago this Summer he met Lena Cross, who was regarded one of the prettiest of Somerville's pretty girls, at the Summer home of her sister, Mrs. Allen Burbank, at Nahant. Miss Cross made her home with Mrs. Burbank and her sister, Miss Jennie Cross, who lives at No. 176 Broadway, Somerville. A brother, Arthur W. Cross, lives at Winchester.

Stole Away Her Love.

Lena was but twenty when Picard, a few years her senior, popped the fateful question and was blissfully accepted. Soon forcible objection was entered against the young man on the ground that he was personally objectionable, but it was alleged that the girl's relatives had determined that she would wed George H. Wood, a wealthy jeweler, of Lowell. The young lovers, however, planned that they would wed, whether or no.

They slipped away from relatives last December and hastened to the parsonage of the Rev Charles A. Gross, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Lynn, where they were made husband and wife. Joyously they made their way to the residence of A. J. Houle in Cliftondale, where Mr Picard had lived for a year. There a wedding supper followed, and then the young bride of two hours said she would go home for her clothes and get there early enough not to excite any suspicion.

Loses His Pretty Bride.

Lena went home and in an unguarded moment let drop the fateful intelligence that she had married Mr. Picard. The bride of two hours did not return that day, nor the next, nor for months to her husband.

Picard waited in vain to be rejoined by his bride and then with wrath in his eyes he went to the residence in Broadway. Somerville, only to be told by the sisters of his young wife that her was never to live with her. They are alleged to have told Picard that his bride had repented herself when too late. He was refused permission to see her nor would the sisters nor the brother tell him whence she had been spirited.

Brings Suit for Wife.

Last March, Picard, angered by the prolonged refusal to restore to him his wife, and believing that she was forcibly detained from rejoining him, brought suit against the sisters and brother in $5,000 charging that she was being kept from him against her will. Attorney Edward S. Underwood and Attorney William H. Miles, both of Lynn, were engaged to take charge of the young man's case.

Picard thought that the young woman had been kept in a convent by her relatives, and he proposed to have his right as a husband passed upon by the courts. At the time Mrs. Picard has been hot cling with herself as to whether she should return to her husband or bow to the will of her relatives.

Her heart won the day. A few months ago she was sent to Michigan but her love for her husband outlasted all separations and when she returned home the other day she told her folks that she was going to live with Picard whether or no and they at last relented.

'JACK THE SLASHER' STEALS GIRLS HAIR IN CROWDED STORE

"Jack the Slasher" has again made his appearance in Boston, after several months of rest, and Miss Julia S. Lynn, a pretty Brighton girl, is to-day mourning the loss of one of her chief charms, as a result of her head in a Tremont street store last night.

Hysterical and almost fainting, Miss Sullivan, who is eighteen years old and lives at No. 27 Litchfield street was taken to the Court Square police station shortly after she had regained [illegible] went home.

With three girl friends, Miss Sullivan was shopping last night. As the three were walking through the crowded store she felt a slight tug at her hair. She turned just in time to see a man push away through the crowd and disappear.

Instantly the thought of "Jack the Slasher" flashed through her mind. She drew her hair, which she wears in two braids, over her shoulders and saw that half of one braid was missing. It had been severed by a clean cut, evidently with a razor.

She screamed and two went into hysterics. Her companions also screamed and in the excitement the [illegible] escaped.

One of Miss Sullivan's friends gave the description of the man. She is twenty-two years of age, smooth face, weighs about 160 pounds, dressed in dark suit and straw hat. Armed with this description, the police are now searching for him.

This is the first report the police have had of the depredations of the hair fiend for several months. Last winter and early in the spring he was very active, and more than a score of complaints were received from women and girls whose hair he had stolen.

AUTOIST CLOSE TO DEATH AS GASOLINE BLOWS UP MACHINE

Warned by Rumbling, He Abandons Repairs and Barely Escapes with His Life

Crawling from under an automobile but a second before the gasoline tank exploded, wrecking the machine, Frank McDermott, of Wollaston, narrowly escaped death at Field's Corner last night.

McDermott was driving a car owned by James C. Frasier, of Wollaston. The engine worked badly and McDermott had considerable trouble with it. In front of the Howe building he stopped his engine and crawled under the auto to ascertain the cause of the trouble.

He heard a rumbling sound in the tank and got out as quickly as possible. As he stepped [illegible] in the street there was a terrible explosion. The auto being lifted from its [illegible]

BRUCE--CLIFFORD WEDDING TO START WAR IN SOCIETY

Every Englishman's Parents Will Fight Advent of American Stage Beauty.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Sept. 1.—The forthcoming marriage of Hon. Lyndhurst Bruce, son of Lord Aberdare, and Camille Clifford, the American actress, promises to create a rupture in English society circles.

The day that Miss Clifford is pronounced the wife of the future Lord Aberdare a social war will open without preliminaries in spite of some unfortunate exceptions. London society has found itself none the worse for the charming women who have won from the stage. Gilbert and Sullivan's music is much overpraised for Miss Clifford and her young fiance.

On the other hand, the young man's own family will form the front of the army of opposition and Lord Aberdare and the Viscountess of Newport, Bruce's sister, may be counted upon to do everything to keep the Norwegian stage beauty out of society.

MAN THOUGHT DEAD SAFE WITH FRIENDS

Edward A. Decker, the Jamaica Plain man who has been missing from his home since Thursday, has been found with relatives in Franklin. Mr. Decker's disappearance worried his wife and after a hot answering the description of the one worn by him was found on the shore of Jamaica Pond it was thought that he might have been drowned. The pond was dragged. The man for the man ended late yesterday afternoon when word was received that he was in Franklin.

ATHLETICS WIN; 24 INNINGS

Photograph by Boston American Photographer.

Coombs, Triumphant, Opposed by Harris for Boston, and 18,000 Persons Are Thrilled for Nearly Five Hours by Wonderful Playing.

For four hours and forty-nine minutes yesterday afternoon 18,084 spectators watched twenty-four innings of baseball at the Huntington Avenue grounds, and while 18,084 plates of beans grew cold saw the Athletics beat the Bostons 4 to 1. It was the most remarkable game of ball ever played.

It was the longest game on record—that is, as far as recognized baseball [illegible] concerned. In fact, away out on the prairie lashes, it is alleged that the Fargo and Devils Lake teams played twenty-five innings to a tie, but that doesn't count in polite baseball society. Again in 1877 the Harvard and Manchester, N. H. nines played a twenty-four inning contest [illegible] inning. But that was in the days of the "dead ball." In that game [illegible] neither side could make a safe hit.

After the sixth inning neither side got a man across the rubber until the twenty fourth. Then with two men down and a man on second the heavy artillery of the Athletics began to play. A terrific liner straight at Pitcher Harris from the bat of Schreckengost made the Boston twirler dodge in a hurry. The ball stzzed to centre field and a run came in. Then Seybold and Murphy dropped three-baggers in the crowd behind the right field ropes and two more of the enemy scampered across the plate. The next man popped a fly to Ferris, but the damage was done. The three Boston batters were easy victims and the crowd made a rush for the gates.

Coombs, the young pitcher who [illegible] wonderful headwork he displayed. In at the pitcher Coombs smiled and [illegible] joined the Athletics after the baseball season at Colby University closed last Summer, was the hero of the day. Connie Mack, the astute manager of the Athletics, has picked some fine youngsters from the ranks of the college players, but he never picked a better one than Coombs. Take a look at the score and see what this young man did and then you will not know half the story.

The score does not tell about the [illegible] eleven of the extra innings after the Athletics had had their full nine innings. If Bostons had men on bases [illegible] Murphy's error, and Morgan secured [illegible] to second. Freeman was sent [illegible] for Carrigan and Coombs served up meat for the deliberate purpose of giving Freeman a pass. "Buck" became disgusted, and foolishly reached out for the last one and dribbled it to the pitcher. He was an easy out, and when Harris [illegible] in the fifteenth Grimshaw got to first on Murphy's error, and Morgan secured [illegible] to second. Freeman was sent [illegible] for Carrigan and Coombs served up meat for the deliberate purpose of giving Freeman a pass. "SH-H," SAYS BOSS GASTON AS MACHINE, IN PANIC, SEES SHADOW OF MORAN

Colonel William A. Gaston, the boss of the Democratic State machine, will return from his vacation to-morrow and give the floundering minor leaders the benefit of his presence until the State convention has settled whether or not he is to continue to rule the party.

Gaston has not commented on Bryan's speeches and his friends say that he will have nothing to say about them for publication. It is intimated that he will issue orders to Josiah Quincy, Congressman John A. Sullivan and the rest of the talkers that they must maintain a discreet silence in the future or give out misleading statements hard pressed.

Will Fight Ownership.

Gaston disapproves what Bryan has said in favor of public ownership of railroads. From the threats made by one of his closest friends, he will endeavor to have the platform of the Massachusetts Democrats go on record against public ownership, on the ground that it is experimental and not practical now. Gaston is fiercely opposed to the idea of public ownership and would not have the Democratic party of this State declare in favor of it for personal and business reasons, more than on political grounds.

He thinks too well of the interests he has in the Boston Elevated Railroad, the gas trust of Boston and the banks dear to John, which have large holdings in public service corporations, to favor a public policy which aims to oust them off from the legalized graft accorded them by the laws that have been lobbied through the Legislature.

Soft Talk for McNamee.

John B. Moran, in his platform, has declared strongly in favor of public ownership of public utilities. That is one reason why the Gaston element will keep up the fight against him. They will even take up ex-Mayor John H. H. McNamee of Cambridge, Bimore and Judge Forbes to fight for delegates to the State convention, and prom he him all kinds of support in the event of his nomination. It is said that they love McNamee, but that they do not want to allow the Moran party to pass the platform and secure control of the State organization.

McNamee knows he does not stand the ghost of a show at the present time against Moran and he is not disposed to run, but Quincy and Sullivan have talked him into such a frame of mind that he now thinks there is something to be said in favor of his duty to stand in the breach and save the party from the radicals.

McNamee Radical? Not Now.

One short year ago Gaston classed McNamee as a radical and pooh-poohed the idea of his running against General Charles W. Bartlett for the nomination for Governor. McNamee swore he would run in spite of all Gaston could do and loudly talked about what he was going to do to the party bosses, but on the day of the convention Gaston persuaded him not only to quit but to second the nomination of Bartlett.

And McNamee was paid by being made a "leader." Gaston put him on the at large membership of the State Committee. To run McNamee against Moran, to retain control of the machine and to keep out of the platform any talk favoring public ownership—which Gaston considers fanatic mount to a slap at the idea—are the three points which the bosses are now striving to accomplish.

Conference Called Off.

Yesterday a conference was arranged to be held at the Thorndike, but, for some reason, it was called off at the last minute. Quincy, Sullivan and McNamee were to have been there. It was decided to hold it next Wednesday and invite into its mysterious circle a few more of the faithful, and, for that reason, rooms 123 and 124 at the Thorndike have been reserved. To impress McNamee, to make plans for winning delegates, and to hear words of wisdom from Gaston will be the business of the gathering. Now that the mystery meeting has become known it may be that the Thorndike date will be cancelled and some new trysting place appointed.

Scolding for Lyman.

Arthur Lyman, chairman of the executive committee of the State machine, may get a scolding at the next meeting of the bosses. He is reported to have said a few days ago, when some of the machine men were declaring in favor of fighting Moran to a finish, "Oh, what's the use?" And then he added that he believed that when it became evident one crowd had another beaten to a standstill it was time to quit fighting and make up.

Such words have come near helping treason to the machine ears, and it is said Lyman was "held up" by one of the listeners as having persistently admitted that Moran had the combination elected.

At the Moran headquarters there is an air of confidence which is impressive. The campaign committee claims that it is now simply impossible for the old machine leaders to elect more than a handful of delegates to the State convention. They insist that Moran will be nominated on the first ballot; that the machine platform to be built by Quincy according to the Gaston programme, will be thrown out, that the platform written by Moran will be adopted, and that the 18 members now on hand of the State committee will be anti-Gaston Quincy Sullivan men, every one of them.

Coughlin for Chairman.

It now seems likely that the two elements may be able to agree on Dr. John W. Coughlin of Fall River for permanent chairman of the State convention. George Fred Williams came back from New Haven Friday night in Dr. Coughlin's yacht and they had a very fine discussion of the situation. To rout the machine Rogers, with the prestige of the conquering hero, a man who has always been friendly with them, is an idea that appears to the Moran forces a certain vengeance, and, for that reason, they are not "making a kick" when Dr. Coughlin is suggested for permanent chairman.

Ownership in Platform.

Mr. Williams insists that public ownership and direct nominations would rank among the chief issues of the State campaign and not the second in importance given to the legislative regulation plank. Notwithstanding the fact that Bryan has thrown a wet sponge on the fire started by the Republicans to reform the tariff, as they have promised to do, and the position of what an honest tariff should be, Mr. Williams maintains that it would be unwise to feature the tariff as the chief State issue at this time. He believes it might be used by the candidates for Congress with consistency and some effect, but that it would be useless as a factor in the settlement of the tariff depends on the election of the State ticket. Figuring that Bryan may not understand his position thoroughly, Mr. Williams says he intends to write to him and explain fully just how he views the tariff issue.

Mr. Williams does not believe Bryan will be fooled by the advances that are being made by the men who could not see him a few years ago, and his abiding faith that Bryan will continue to fight the men who were with him in the other days. He realizes that Bryan is most forgiving, but does not think he will be found hugging the Democrats who, as Mayor of Boston, refused to show him ordinary courtesy when he visited the city ten years ago.

Bitter Against Mayor.

The break between Mayor Fitzgerald and the State machine is absolute. He has been jollying the State bosses, and they have come to realize it. Bitterly they refer to what they call the double-dealing of the busy one. Truthfully they say that he has thrown them down, and will be found before long in the open for John B. Moran, where he has been quietly for some time. It is a fact that Quincy and "Joe" Corbett labored long and earnestly one day this week with the mayor and finally induced him not to announce his endorsement of Moran in his speech. Since Fitzgerald came out unqualifiedly for public ownership and everything else that Moran advocated in his election speech, against the wishes of Quincy and Sullivan, all hope of keeping Boston company with him in this campaign has departed from the breasts of the machine leaders.

Wants to Be in the Swim.

They say: "Pitz thinks Bryan struck the popular chord and that Moran has got the rank and file with him, and he wants to be in the swim. Not that he believes in the issue or the principles involved, but he thinks they make up the popular song."

Judge Corbett, after the Ward Five committee, which he controls, indorsed Moran is convinced that the game against him is all up, and has told Quincy he might as well figure up the cost.

It is expected that Senator George A. Scannell will announce his programme for this campaign Tuesday. It is generally believed that he will be a candidate for Congress against Tom Gardner, in the Sixth District.

Henry T. Schaefer of Winchester says he fully expects to be nominated for Lieutenant Governor, and that the ticket of Moran and Schaefer will be the winner.

"Dan" Toomey's Latest.

"There is one committee of the State convention that never amounts to anything. It is called 'the committee on the balance of the State ticket.' But what is it for? Why, it's to see that the machine should hold on to every office it has now. It's all nonsense to talk about the State committee being against Moran. How would they go about getting willing to run on the ticket with McNamee?"

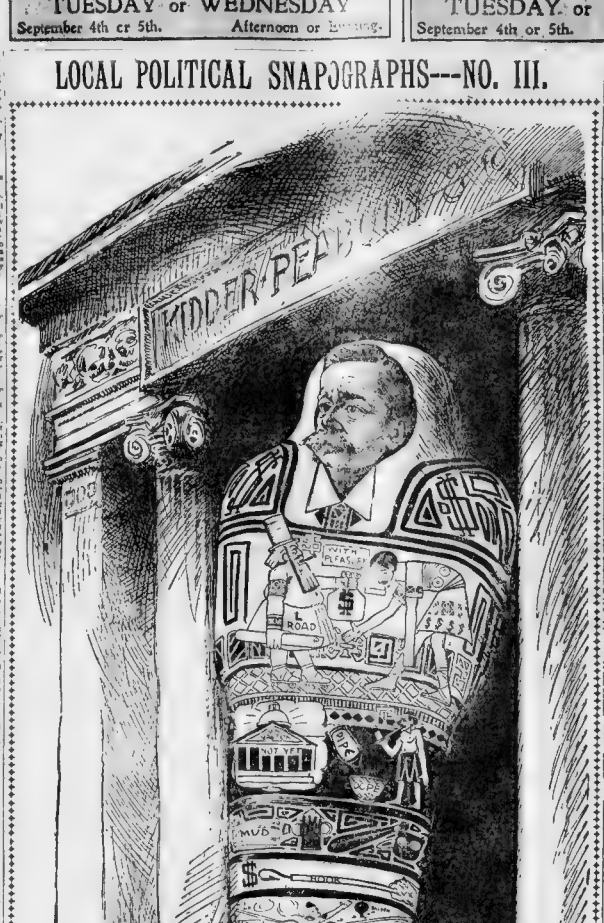
LOCAL POLITICAL SNAPOGRAPHS---NO. III.



CONRY TO AGAIN WAR ON KELIHER FOR CONGRESS.

East Boston Leader, Seeking to Recover Laurels Lost in Noted Contest, Said to Be Planning Vigorous Campaign

Former Congressman John A. Conry, it was announced last evening, will contest with Congressman John A. Keliher of Ward 9 for the Democratic nomination this Fall in the Ninth Massachusetts Congressional district. There has been much talk within the last month of Conry's taking this step but no definite intention of so doing was made public by him. Politicians were not surprised when they heard that he had decided to take the step. They predicted a hot fight. It would not surprise them if several others entered the field.

Conry was elected to the 57th Congress as the regular Democratic nominee. He had been nominated in Faneuil Hall at one of the largest and most sensational conventions ever held in Boston. There was a deadlock which lasted for hours and hours.

Yielded to Conry.

Keliher was then a candidate, but in the end yielded to Conry on the agreement that he was not to seek renomination, but was to retire after one term in favor of Keliher. When his term was about to expire Conry thought that existing political conditions warranted his breaking the pledge. But he was beaten by Keliher for the nomination.

Then Conry ran as an independent. It was one of the most desperate political battles in the history of the State. There was intense bitterness on both sides. Keliher won after the polls. He had 19,352 votes Conry polled 16,040. Then Conry contested Keliher's election. He charged corruption frauds. He contended that Keliher had gotten his small plurality by colonizing in Ward 8. In that congressional district Martin Lomasney supported Keliher, whom he had fought politically for years. He married Lomasney's daughter. That was the beginning of a new alliance which has since endured.

Say Mayor is Neutral.

Conry took the contest to Washington, where there was a Congressional investigation by a committee, which seated Keliher.

It has been customary in the Ninth District for each man elected to have three terms. That was followed in the case of Neal, Collins, Joseph D. Leary and Mayor John F. Fitzgerald. Conry's defeat broke the precedent. Now it is said that he will try to break it again in the case of Keliher, who has served only one term.

Conry is a Boston leader. He was president of the Common Council and chairman of the Board of Aldermen.

Keliher has been State representative and Senator. He supported Donovan, the Lomasney candidate, in the Democratic caucus fight for the mayoralty nomination last Fall. The attitude of Mayor Fitzgerald in the coming battle is regarded and Conry will be watched by politicians with intense interest. John Tenh declares that the Mayor's friends say he will remain neutral.

NERVOUS DEBILITY TWO YEARS.

A Beautiful Girl Restored To Health.

Miss Irene Smith, 10 Minnesota Ave., Randle Highlands, Washington, D. C., writes

"Peruna has cured me of catarrh of the head and stomach, and nervous debility from which I suffered greatly for two years.

It removes the cause of many cases of nervous debility. It assists digestion, increases the appetite, regulates the circulation of the blood and thus gives new life to nervous invalids.

NERVE TONICS DO NO GOOD.

Nerve tonics, such as strychnia, quinine and the like, do more harm than good. Nervousness generally depends upon some digestive derangement or bodily deficiency.

The rational cure for nervousness is to correct the condition upon which it depends.

It is because Peruna does this very thing that it has become so popular for diseases of the nervous system.

Miss Alma Cox, Orum, S. C., writes:

"I have been a great sufferer from dyspepsia for five years. How I suffered no tongue can tell. I tried several of the best physicians without receiving much benefit and also tried many medicines.

DYSPEPSIA CAUSES NERVOUSNESS

"But still I suffered with sick headache, cold feet and hands, palpitation of the heart, and a heavy feeling in my stomach and chest.

"At times I would be so nervous I could not bear to have any one around me.

"One day a friend sent me one of Dr. Hartman's pamphlets and I decided to write to him. He advised Peruna and Manalin and after taking the medicine two weeks I felt greatly relieved. My head did not ache so much and my stomach was relieved of its headache.

A FRIEND ADVISED PE-RU-NA.

"I am so thankful that I can say that after taking several bottles of Peruna and Manalin I am restored to health.

"Before taking your remedies I could not eat anything. I lived on water and dyspeptiene for two years. Now I can eat.

"Everybody is surprised at my improvement. I write to advise all suffering women to take your remedies, as I know if it were not for Peruna and Manalin I would have been in my grave to-day.

ADVICE TO SUFFERERS.

"I cannot thank you enough for the kind advice you have given me."

Mrs. J. C. Jamison, 61 Marchant St., Watsonville, Cal., writes:

"I was troubled with cramps in the stomach for six years. The doctors said that I had nervous dyspepsia.

"I procured Peruna and commenced taking it. I have taken several bottles and am entirely cured

MORAN TAKES STAND AGAINST INJUNCTION

Says Workmen Have Indefeasible Right to Jury Trial When Employers Seek to Intimidate Them.

In a letter to the citizens of Massachusetts John B. Moran declares against government by injunction and calls attention to the plank in the platform as a candidate for Governor.

Mr. Moran says in part:—

"The refinement of legal reasoning which has developed the power of the American court of equity to intervene between the employer and his striking workmen by the injunction process and to proceed very little farther before we shall have an equity tribunal trying all sorts of crimes and punishing them as competent without the intervention of what we have regarded as the first constitutional safeguard of liberty—trial by jury. In England the courts have not yet discovered the powers which have been discovered in America.

Failed to Restore Order.

"The worst feature of the modern development of injunction is that it does not serve the purpose it is supposed to do, it does not restore order in the streets of Chicago, where it was most grossly abused, and one of the leading corporation lawyers of the country, who is counsel for the largest railroad system in New England, said, when asked about the extensive application that injunctions during the great railroad strike which was compelled by Eugene V. Debs, 'Injunctions didn't settle the strike, rather than stayed it.

"The truth is that the employer who asks for the interference of the court by injunction does it to demoralize his striking workmen and punish them for offenses of which, on like evidence, no jury would find them guilty.

"If a man is charged with a breach of the peace and he is arrested by a policeman he has the right of a trial by jury. If the employer makes a complaint against a striking workman for breach of the peace that workman has a right to a trial by jury. But if, on the other hand, he (the employer) applies to the court to prevent all anticipated breaches of the peace, and he (the workman) is arrested for an alleged act of the court, he has no right to a trial by jury, but he is punished for contempt on the fact as found by a judge.

Right of Trial by Jury.

"But the injunction does serve a useful purpose to the employer, for it allows him to make reckless charges against his work people and submits the case before a judge on very insufficient evidence.

"I believe that the question should be fairly presented to the people of Massachusetts whether or not the right to a trial by jury should be preserved in all cases where the liberty of the citizen is involved, save possibly for those to be committed in the actual presence of the court."

SEE SCHEME TO HURT UNION IN HOLD-UP OF PAPERS

Democratic nomination papers for the State primaries, which have been held back from Boston Mayor Fitzgerald, were seized upon the request of Chairman Josiah Quincy of the State committee, who is controlled at the rooms of the Democratic city committee, No. 220 Washington street, for a check Tuesday morning.

Quick work will be required on the part of the supporters of the various candidates as the first hour for filing is 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, and papers will also go on the ballot first. The closing hour for filing has been set for 5 o'clock Friday afternoon, when the papers will be opened.

It is the opinion of the politicians that the delay in giving out nomination papers was designed to hurt the Moran candidates, as his supporters have heard for some time a full set of delegations from every ward in the city is made up, while the Gaston faction, led by Josiah Quincy, have been unable to put any delegation in the field pledged to any candidate, because they have no candidacy candidates.

Gaston--The Dead One--"Nothing to Say."

FOSS BALKED BY MACHINE IN FIGHT

State delegations pledged to Eugene N. Foss for Lieutenant-Governor had been filed from but six of the twenty-five wards of the city of Boston at the close of the first day for filing papers with the Republican City Committee.

Lieutenant-Governor Eben S. Draper had a full set of delegates from every ward of the city filed by the "machine" men early yesterday. This gives delegates pledged to him first place on the ticket, an advantage worth many thousand votes, in the opinion of some politicians.

The Foss people admit that the opposition of the city machine to the reciprocity has been a severe handicap to them in securing men to lead the Foss delegations, but say that they will have a delegation on file from every ward of the city before the closing time for filing, 7 o'clock Wednesday morning. Yesterday they filed from Wards 7, 16, 19, 23, 24 and 25.

Concede Foss One Ward.

The Draper people declare they will carry every ward in the city with the possible exception of Ward 23. Foss's home town. Foss is confident that he will show enough strength in the convention to secure the adoption of a reciprocity plank.

Nomination candidates for Congress in the three Boston districts filed their papers yesterday. One candidate for State Senator did so. He is Thomas M. Vinson of Ward Twenty, who is urging for the Republican nomination in the Eighth Suffolk district.

Clear Field For Lane.

Frank L. Stoker left was reported yesterday as having withdrawn from the Congressional race in the Eleventh District, leaving a clear field to Senator Daniel W. Lane of Ward Two. In the Fourth District, former Senator Edward W. Callender, Joseph Lundy, Lee M. Friedman, James P. Magenis and possibly John W. McAnarney of Quincy will file papers for the Congressional nomination on Tuesday.

In Ward Seven, which is always carried by the Republicans, but two candidates have filed nomination papers for Representative. They are Morris Bennett and Grafton D. Cushing, present Representative. They will probably be unopposed.

BELIEVE MISSING CITY CLERK DEAD; EXAMINE BOOKS

Chicopee, Sept. 1.—Mayor Taylor to-day appointed Frederick J. Lunham of the New England Audit Company of Springfield, expert accountant, to examine the books of City Clerk John D. White, who mysteriously disappeared a week ago. The books have already been examined by City Auditor John J. Kirby, who discovered a shortage in the cash account of about $3,500. The other accounts were straight as ever. It has been thought best, however, to have an expert examination. The search for White is being patrolled on the river and a search was made for Mr. White's body. It is now believed that the missing city clerk took his own life. The police have been unable to gain any definite clews and the matter will probably be placed in the hands of the State police early the coming week.

There is considerable criticism because circulars were not sent out broadcast soon after Mr. White disappeared. This was not done, as Police Marshal Hamilton wished to shield Mr. White's relatives as much as possible.

THOUSANDS TO GREET HEARST IN SYRACUSE.

Great Welcome to Labor Day Guest, in Which Many Cities Will Be Represented.

OVERFLOW MEETINGS PLANNED BY COMMITTEE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 1—Arrangements for the great welcome to be tendered William R. Hearst in this city on Labor Day are completed and fine weather alone is all that is necessary to bring out on Monday one of the largest crowds that ever assembled in this city to greet a distinguished visitor.

Chairman Harry G. Williams, of the Labor Day Committee, is daily in receipt of letters from labor unions in Central New York, announcing their intention to be in Syracuse Monday and add in the welcome to Mr. Hearst. The trades unionists of Auburn are coming down early Monday morning, 1,000 strong. Former Mayor John S. Browne, of Auburn, announces that he and the members of the Independence League of that city, numbering nearly 1,000, will arrive in Syracuse at 10 a. m.

No great will be the crowd that will attempt to gain admission to the Alhambra on Monday morning when Mr. Hearst will deliver his speech, that the Labor Day committee believes it will be necessary for Mr. Hearst to address at least two overflow meetings in the Central Park of this city, probably one in front of the Alhambra, and one in front of the city hall.

Owing to the great number of labor unions men from other cities that will be here, not more than 1,500 special invitations could be issued. These have been sent to prominent clergymen, lawyers, physicians and merchants, members of the Chamber of Commerce, Congressman Driscoll, Senator White, the members of Assembly and men prominent in the political life of the city. The Alhambra is being decorated in grand style with American flags and bunting and presents a striking appearance. Mr. Hearst will arrive either to-morrow evening or early on Monday morning.

"One day a friend sent me one of Dr. Hartman's pamphlets and I decided to write to him. He advised Peruna and Manalin and after taking the medicine two weeks I felt greatly relieved. My head did not ache so much and my stomach was relieved of its headache.

WOMEN WEEP AT BANGOR DOCTOR'S FATE

Sobs In Courtroom As Judge Sends Briggs to Prison Cell

3 YEARS FOR FASHIONABLE PHYSICIAN

Bangor, Me., Sept. 1.—[illegible] years at hard labor was the sentence imposed upon

MISS MAUD B. TAGGETT

DR. WILLIAM H. H. BRIGGS

Fashionable Bangor physician sentenced to three years in prison at hard labor and pretty victim for whose death he was held responsible.

Dr. William H. H. Briggs, found guilty of manslaughter in causing the death of Miss Maud Taggett of Mars[illegible] in an illegal operation.

Dr. Briggs, who has been one of the most prominent physicians in Bangor, listened to his sentence without a tremor, but utterly collapsed when led from the courtroom to a cell.

The room was crowded with friends of the convicted man, many of them fashionable women of the city. As they heard the sentence pronounced some of them sobbed, and others bowed their heads and wept silent.

Dr. Briggs was unable to meet their eyes as he was led from the room, and looked steadfastly at the floor. Not one of his friends could speak to him, although many [illegible] their sympathy.

The verdict of manslaughter was given at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. The jury had been out all night and had come in once [illegible] instructions.

"We have," answered the foreman.

"Is the prisoner guilty or not guilty?"

"Guilty of manslaughter," said the foreman.

A moment's silence followed, then hysterical sobs were heard from many of the women in the room.

Dr. Briggs [illegible] gave no outward sign of his emotion save the constant clasping and unclasping of his hands.

"We will take a recess," said Judge Powers of the Superior Judicial Court, in which the doctor's trial had been conducted.

Near the prisoner's chair was clustered a little group composed of his wife and a few friends and relatives. Mrs. Briggs gave no sign of the pain she must have felt, but gazed anxiously at her husband as though fearing [illegible]

At the foot of the stairway leading from the court house to the jail a group of women, many prominent in society, and a score of physicians, all eminent in their profession, waited for Dr. Briggs to pass. They could not speak to him, but they extended silent sympathy as he passed by.

The operation by which Miss Taggett met her death was performed February 24, and her death occurred March 1. Briggs was arrested in connection with the crime March 2, charged with manslaughter, and was released on $2,000 bail. On April 16 he was again arrested, the charge having been changed to that of murder, and the present trial commenced last Monday.

Portland, Me., Sept. 1.—The daring [illegible] of robbers, led by a woman, [illegible] operating in different sections of New England for several weeks, held up [illegible] in broad daylight to-day, [illegible] $47 and escaped in an auto[illegible]

The victim was Christo[illegible] Nelson. He was at Morrill's Corner when two men approached him. They struck him on the head, took his money and gold watch and fled to their auto.

Harold Hitt, who [illegible] gave chase. The men jumped into the auto, in which a woman was waiting, and were whirled away towards Deering.

The police give little doubt that the trio were the same who are wanted for blowing open the safe and robbing the post office at Randolph, Mass., for the burglary of the post office at Ponkapoag, Mass., for the attempted robbery of the West Roxbury railroad station and the attempted looting of the railroad station at East Douglas, Mass., where the woman leader of the gang fired at the station agent.

They are also believed to have robbed the postoffice in Kingston, N. Y., of $500 in money and $800 in stamps.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Sept. 1.—If it takes two years to learn old style spelling, how much money will a man save by becoming a fonetik?

Here is the answer to the problem, which has been figured out by Professor Shallow, acting superintendent of New York's schools.

"If two years of the cost of educating each child can be saved to the State and two years of his economic time can be saved for his parents and at the same time the child can get a more useful education [illegible] cost of new text books would be trifling.

"With 600,000 children in average attendance, in every eight years $42,440,000 is wasted in teaching spelling. Moreover, if some of this time could be saved, say that the course would be abbreviated even one year, it would mean the saving of 500,000 years of earning power to the parents.

"Supposing that a child is worth even as little as $3 per week in business or in aiding in the home. This would make $78,000,000, which is now wasted in trying to teach the child an illogical spelling.

"But even if the school course were not shortened, the time now wasted on spelling could be given to other important studies. It [illegible] question of spelling will eventually save [illegible] a year $120,000,000 to one city it [illegible] worth considering."

SPIRIT OF INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE SWEEPS OVER MASSACHUSETTS

Wage-Earners and Professional Men Join Host of Progressives Who Seek in Vain for Relief From Corporation-Controlled Parties — In Union There Is Strength, Cry Earnest Band of Reformers.

NEW HAMPSHIRE CHRISTENS ITS FIRST BRANCH IN ROOM OCCUPIED BY LINCOLN

Massachusetts have declared the controlled machine of neither of the evils of present-day ... Independence League ... and ... organizations have been ... plans ... will be elected and a method ... be adopted.

... headquarters of the League, ... during the past week, indicated that the ... are coming to join and assist ... nearly overwhelmed with the requests for information and offers of aid that every mail has brought.

BIG DEMAND FOR SPEAKERS.

"Every county in the State, ... is responding, and practically all the cities have by this time organized their branches. Scores of ... forming leagues and have asked for advice, suggestions and literature," said Secretary Davis last night. "They can't come along too fast to suit us. We have the force to handle the inquiries, and the only thing they are likely to be disappointed in, in their haste in speakers. I have to-day had requests for speakers for such towns as ... Tuesday night. Labor Day intervenes and it is time to reach members who are ready to go into other towns to speak. I had to notify three of the applicants that the State League could not furnish them good speakers on that night. We have been able to grant the requests for other nights during the coming week.

"I wish, however, you would inform such people who are organizing leagues that they will be more certain to secure speakers for organization meetings if they will give the State headquarters more than two days' notice."

STOUT LINKS IN LEAGUE CHAIN

Five branches that give promise of especial enthusiasm and activity among those organized during the past week are those in Cambridge, Fall River, Gardner, Clinton and Leominster. In the first two cities there is a promise from the leaders in the movement that the membership and strength will be very large. The others are strong additions to the chain of league branches that is spreading across Middlesex and Worcester Counties, including Fitchburg and several smaller towns.

A busy coming week is expected to see branches of the league under organization in Framingham, Everett, Wakefield, Woburn, Needham, Marlboro, Hudson and a number of smaller towns.

SWEEPS OVER BAY STATE.

"The growth of independent thought in Massachusetts is marvelous," said Prof. ... head of the league, yesterday. "I have been out through the State nearly every day this week, talking to citizens during the day and addressing meetings at night. The wave of independent sentiment that is sweeping over the State is no common with the rest of the country is powerful and irresistible, and those who have failed to find to the party machines the relief that they sought are turning to the Independence League, recognizing that it offers them the movement they have been searching for."

LET THE WORLD KNOW IT.

Citizens who organize leagues in the various cities and towns of Massachusetts are urged to send an account of their meetings, their lists of officers, and photographs of their presidents, secretaries and executive committees to the BOSTON AMERICAN, which will be pleased to give them publicity. They can secure all particulars as to league work, with printed matter for distribution, by writing the secretary, at the Winthrop Building, Boston.

Physician Aids Work.

The provisional secretary of the League, Dr. Arthur Maynard, is a well-known physician whose influence is strong among a large number of Fall River citizens. Dr. Maynard is very enthusiastic as to the prospects of the League.

"There is room for the movement in Fall River, and in every city and town in Massachusetts," he said the other night. "I hope to see it casting a great influence in political affairs. I shall do my part to help it along."

Wherever the league is mentioned in this city it is compared to the "flying wedge," which more than any other one factor defeated John L. Sullivan for Governor two years ago. "Fall River showed what could be done when the people were united in a political movement then, is the general opinion. "The town can make a good showing in this independence campaign."

That paper misunderstands ... professes to misunderstand ... It is and the Democratic party ... a sorry plight, but the machine which thinks it is the Democratic party ... People have got into the habit, lately, of regarding the party machine as the party. The machines have got into the same habit and cherish the idea. That is why such a movement as the Independence League is necessary. That is why the machine bosses are so keen, from the Independence League, something of the sentiment as to ... and their ... Massachusetts."

Strikes Sympathetic Chord.

These words, spoken by one of the citizens present at the meeting to organize a branch of the Independence League of Massachusetts in Cambridge Thursday night, struck a sympathetic chord in the hearts of those assembled and were enthusiastically applauded. Again there was loud applause when the State secretary, in his remarks, said:

"We have ... with the Democrat ... If there is ... not with the Republicans of Worcester ... Lincoln. But we have ... will not rest with the combined Democracy and Republicanism as exemplified by August Belmont and J. Pierpont Morgan."

Every Man Signs Roll.

After the speeches at the Cambridge meeting, which was held at Washington Hall, every man present signed his name to the league roll, and agreed to do all in his power to secure members for the league.

The executive committee appointed will meet on Tuesday evening to discuss the recommendation of officers, to be made to a meeting of the League on Thursday evening, when Thursday a good speaker will be on hand and all members and their friends are expected to attend the gathering in Central Lecture Hall, Lynn Street.

One of the powerful organizations in Cambridge is the League of Municipal Ownership Associations, and scores of members of that society are joining the Independence League. Secretary Alexander Weaver of the Municipal Ownership League presided at Thursday evening's meeting and is a member at large of the provisional executive committee.

START PIONEER BRANCH IN ROOM OCCUPIED BY LINCOLN

Manchester, N. H., Sept. 1.—In the in the league platform are best suited for identical room occupied by the great the people of New Hampshire, several men emancipator, Abraham Lincoln, when he who are tired of the domination and control of the old parties met at the Manchester House and formed themselves into an executive committee for the purpose of doing everything possible to bring about a reformation in present conditions and spread the league movement.

The wave of sentiment in New Hampshire at the present time is distinctly against corporation control of every department of the State government, and the prime movers in the league here are convinced that it offers the best possible solution for relief from the corrupt conditions that have existed in the State for many years.

To Visit Every Town.

It is the purpose of the organizers to form branches of the league in every city and town in the State, and they believe that men of all parties who are disgusted with the absolute domination of the Boston and Maine railroad and other big corporations to join them in the crusade.

... of the executive committee are ... Lawrence H. ... of Hanover, George W. Griffith of Portsmouth, Homer D. Frank of Keene, Dennis E. O'Leary and Murdock A. Weathers of this city. All are men of unquestioned standing in their respective communities. Mr. Weathers has long taken an active interest in municipal affairs, and was a candidate for Mayor of Manchester two years ago. Mr. O'Leary is past-president of the local Central Labor Union, and is prominently mentioned as a delegate to the Democratic national convention in the last campaign.

Plans to start ... branches in Concord, Nashua, Portsmouth, Dover, Rochester, Laconia, Franklin, Penacook and Somersworth are nearing perfection.

LEOMINSTER PLANS BOOM FOR LEAGUE AT BIG MEETING

Leominster, Sept. 1.—It is the intention of the officers of the recently formed branch of the Independence League of Massachusetts in this place to hold a large meeting in the near future, at which prominent members of the league from up and out of town will make addresses. In the meantime a canvass for members is being systematically made throughout the town, and it is ... that before another meeting the membership will be large.

John Maguire, who was elected provisional president of the league, is a well-known business man whose enthusiasm over the new movement explains his willingness to attend to office, notwithstanding his big home business. He is ably seconded in his magazine belief in the future of the organization by Miss A. L. Farrell, who was elected secretary.

Among the well-known citizens, including Louis M. Barrow and John May, spoke at the organization meeting, and predicted success for the league and the principles it represents.

CLEMENT WAGES BITTER WAR ON VERMONT MACHINE

Widely Heralded Charges of Graft In Condemned Beef Carry Consternation Into Republican Ranks.

Burlington, Vt., Sept. 1.—The greatest political fight in the history of Vermont will be decided Tuesday. The speakers' campaign in every city and town in the State in the past four weeks have returned to their homes. Every argument that can be advanced and every town thoroughly canvassed and now both sides declare that the result depends upon which way the big silent vote is cast.

The fight has been waged by Percival W. Clement against Fletcher D. Proctor with a vigor which has made the machine pull all its wires. Senator Redfield Proctor, father of Candidate Proctor, the man who has held office practically for twenty years, ... was ... one his son succeed him in the United States Senate, has been in ... almost ... the State committee, and it is through his advice that most of the work has been carried out.

Clement says he has made his fight for ... the abolishment of the ... system in the conduct of State ... and ... wastage in the system of taxation. Charges of graft have been hurled by him and his army of speakers. The machine has replied with the charge that Clement, when he owned the Rutland Railroad, granted rebates to coal dealers, thereby allowing a coal trust to develop.

"Spoiled Beef" Charge.

Clement's greatest campaign sensation has been the allegation that the State cattle commissioners sold cattle condemned as tuberculous with the knowledge that they were to be killed and marketed as good meat. An investigation was started by Attorney-General Sherman Pitts, and Statistician A. L. Sherman of this city conducted it. It is alleged that it was in reality no investigation at all. Newspapers were called on sworn. A sweeping denial of the charges was made by the attorney-general, who deemed the charges important enough to publish in full the report of the affidavits of prominent farmers stating that they had seen diseased cattle killed and sold as good meat have been sent to every voter in the State, and the fact that the cattle commissioners are machine men has been impressed upon the minds of the voters. In several instances Clement's speakers have been interrupted in the midst of their addresses with questions about diseased beef, and in every instance they have been unable to answer satisfactorily.

Both Claim the State.

The claims of the two committees have not changed within the past week. The C. M. Chapman, chairman of the Republican committee, still estimates Proctor's majority at 20,000 or over. A. J. Hall, chairman of the Independent committee, says Clement will be elected by a majority of from 5,000 to 7,000.

The fight made this year by Clement has been peculiar in some respects. He has not had associated with him a single man who has been in politics as a leader. The fight has been made by him single handed. He had no one to contribute financial support and the expense of the campaign has been borne by him alone. On the other hand the Republicans have had men of wide experience in politics and the greatest campaign fund ever contributed in the State has been at the disposal of the committee.

GRAND TOUR TEACHERS QUIT FOREIGN SHORES FOR HOME

The BOSTON AMERICAN Grand Tour teachers, who on July 6 sailed away from Boston for trip through the principal countries of Europe, are to-day far out on the Atlantic Ocean on their way home.

On last Thursday they sailed from Liverpool, bound for Quebec and Montreal. They are due to arrive in Montreal next Sunday, and should arrive in Boston the day following.

While in Rome six of the ten Grand Tour teachers were so fortunate as to see Pope Pius X. celebrate mass in the Sistine Chapel in the Vatican, during the third anniversary to his election to the Pontificate. To Misses Grace A. Allen, of Bristol; Ellen De S. Barrett, of Newburyport; Mary Boynton, of Boston; Annie L. Maguire, of West Roxbury; Agnes K. Croswell, of Providence, and Isabel Katzen, of Salt Lake, was presented the rare opportunity, for the number of visitors to the Sistine Chapel on that occasion was limited to 150.

Two Months on Continent.

The teachers of the Grand Tour have had a wonderful vacation. For over two months they have been traveling as guests of the BOSTON AMERICAN and from the letters nine tunnels received from them it is evident that they are delighted and benefited beyond words. While in Switzerland during the last two months in Grand Tour teachers were written from Rome. The Eternal City made a great impression on everyone in the party.

See Sights of Cairo.

Miss Isabel Katzen, who wrote on a souvenir post card from Milan, tells of a visit that she and some of the other teachers paid to the exhibition that is being held in the ancient Italian city which is famed for its wondrous exhibits. In the exhibition is an exact reproduction of the old Egyptian city of Cairo, and there the New England teachers entered a Mohammedan school, where the pupils were strictly reciting the Koran in unison with their backs turned toward the teacher as is the custom in that for handled by a fifteen year-old boy sufficient proof of a Mohammedan mosque in the exhibition. While seeing the sights of Milan, Miss Katzen says that the teachers were all thinking of the journey of the 14th, an all-day trip over the Alps in which they had to pass through sixty-nine tunnels

WONDERS OF ANCIENT LAND AMAZE AMERICAN'S GUESTS

By the Grand Tourists.

Geneva, Aug. 18.—We are having an admirable day thus. Our four days' stay in Rome was extremely interesting and instructive. Although it was extremely warm there we had little time to think about it. Every minute was taken up with some new place of interest. We had while there unusually fine guides, who covered much ground in a short time. We were shown the various historical ruins of ancient Rome, as well as its beautiful monuments of art.

The churches are grand, both from an architectural and historical side. Some of the places visited were St. Peter's Cathedral, which is the largest and most beautiful building in the world; St. John's Lateran Church; the Sancta Scala (Holy Stairs) Church, in which we saw the 28 stairs taken from the Temple of Pontius Pilate, and which our Lord ascended during his persecution. Rome may well be called the Eternal City. We entered the Pantheon, and saw the largest unsupported dome in the world.

See Ancient Relics.

On our way to the Vatican we passed the Tomb of Adrian, column of Marcus Aurelius, Temple of Neptune, and many other relics of ancient times. At this time, and only at this time, ancient Roman history meant more to us than it had ever done before.

Arriving at the Vatican, we were shown into the Art Galleries, which contain many of the most valuable paintings by Raphael, Michael Angelo, Perugini, Botticelli, Guilo Romano and many other famous painters. We were then led into the museum at the Vatican, where we saw many of the original statues by the world-famous sculptors.

At Listine Chapel.

We entered the Sistine Chapel, where services are held only under the charge of the Pope. Six of our party had the good fortune to attend services in this chapel, and so were enabled to see Pope Pius X. We chanced to be in Rome on the third anniversary of the coronation of the Pope and were fortunate to secure tickets to attend this service. It was a rare opportunity, for the number of visitors was extremely limited, there being but about 150 present.

The service in the Sistine Chapel when the Pope celebrated mass was very impressive. Those who attended were Misses Allen, Barrett, Boynton, Maguire, Croswell and Katzen.

America in Coliseum.

The largest ruin was to all of us the most interesting, that of the Coliseum. As we stood in the centre of the immense amphitheatre of the ancients, we could not but marvel at the wonderful ability of the Roman people. We were so impressed with this ruin that we visited it by moonlight and we saw the moon rise over it. Seated within, some of the ladies entertained us with national airs of America and the whole of the party joined in singing "America."

Leaving Rome we returned to Switzerland, and if Italy is rich in its art, Switzerland is rich in its natural scenery. From Lucerne to Milan we passed through several four-tunnels, among them that of St. Gothard. We were fifteen minutes in passing through this.

Amid Mighty Alps.

At Lucerne we went to the top of Mt. Rigi, and got an excellent view of the Alps with the pretty lakes scattered between. At Interlaken we had a drive, and, wrapped in blankets, we enjoyed an ... ing ride ... going from the Torrid to the ... Our trip to Geneva was delightful, ... sailed on the beautiful Lake Geneva. Unfortunately, the sky was ... enough for us to see Mt. Blanc, but ... we are to return that way on ... Paris, we hope to see it then.

Switzerland is certainly the ... country that we have visited.

We leave on Monday for Paris, ... we anticipate a very pleasant time. The weather has been extremely fine, ... very little rain, and we think that ... have been ordered especially for us. It has rained on but three days since ... left Constantinople, and that was the ... day that the European teachers were ... home. We are hoping that they have ... as good a time as we have had.

DREYFUS TO LEAVE FRENCH ARMY AND QUIT COUNTRY.

Paris, Sept. 1.—Friends of Major Dreyfus say he will resign his commission in the army next month, when he will have completed thirty years' service. He is reported to be much dissatisfied with his assignment to an administrative position in the suburbs of Paris, where he is not in touch with the army.

Major Dreyfus would have preferred active service with a line regiment, but the government officials say they have already gone as far as they can with safety in making his rehabilitation so thorough and complete.

According to a close friend of Major Dreyfus, who visited him recently in Switzerland, where he now is, he intends to liquidate the pension due him and leave France forever and devote himself to writing into English the history of his case. Several publishers have made offers for his manuscript, and he is said to have accepted the offer of an English firm.

CONDEMNED MEATS, BARRED BY LAW FROM BAY STATE, SOLD IN WEST BY PACKERS' AGENTS

Packing houses, those of Boston and Massachusetts and the Eastern depots of Western concerns, are busily collecting all the canned meats which were condemned by the Massachusetts State Board of Health and are shipping this product to other New England States and to more distant points.

Representatives of the packing houses admit that they are now taking this action. They say that they have been selling the same sort of goods for years, but that under the laws of Massachusetts they cannot continue to do so here.

Manager Warner of the Boston branch of Schwarzchild & Sulzberger said: "We are selling no canned goods that have been condemned. [illegible] board will be taken back and the money refunded or other goods given in exchange. STOCKS Buoyant, Many New Gains in Prices | MONEY Further Drop in Bank Surplus for Week | BONDS—News of REAL ESTATE

Union Pacific Railroad Shares the Feature of the Week In the Market, Making a New High Record; Boston Coppers Are Listless, But Advances Are Made In the General Stock List.

BOOM PLANNED FOR METAL STOCKS

New York, Sept. 1. Steel and copper stocks are about to be moved into the limelight in Wall street. The coming week has been selected as the time for stirring them into activity. The lease by the Steel Trust of [illegible] of the Great Northern railway is expected to [illegible] heavy buying of the steel stocks. The trust is [illegible] supply of [illegible] the world for the next [illegible] years.

[illegible] can be secured as a result of [illegible] organized [illegible]

[illegible] clear to some people who have [illegible] market sensations and the copper stock will be found in the hands of [illegible] brokers. With the [illegible] advancing and with a heavy movement of gold from Europe the speculative public will be expected to [illegible] the [illegible] are the [illegible] in the whole situation. Neither frost nor storm [illegible] injure them [illegible]

[illegible] for the purpose of [illegible] the public buys [illegible] In fact [illegible] much public following [illegible] the [illegible]

In view of the holiday tomorrow [illegible] bulls and bears feared to make [illegible] commitments, and the totals [illegible] of 420,000 shares were therefore of good [illegible] Summer Saturday.

Practically every stock [illegible] the list [illegible] with Union Pacific the feature. This issue, which [illegible] upward movement [illegible] gained 2⅞ in [illegible] Reading [illegible] the session [illegible] shares traded [illegible] 42,000 [illegible] noted gained [illegible] 110½ [illegible] St. Paul was a feature [illegible] small way [illegible] a week [illegible] ranging [illegible] to 177 [illegible] shares. [illegible] but each gained fractionally. Amalgamated advanced with [illegible] for the day being [illegible] The dealings in this issue were [illegible] very different [illegible] Winter when Anaconda [illegible]

Loss in Bank Surplus.

The bank statement [illegible] again poor. The loss [illegible] large, but [illegible] Up to the time of [illegible] statement speculation was [illegible] very desultory fashion [illegible] with little enthusiasm. Operations were confined mainly to the professional element. Many of the room traders had left town to be absent over the holidays. Commission house business was lacking, and this fact, together with the other [illegible] features, kept the trading light.

After the bank statement was published, however, the [illegible] of dullness [illegible] and it was [illegible] that the prices increased to the highest level of the day [illegible] about the same figures. Union Pacific, which had held the most prominent place as before stated, was bought more heavily immediately after the appearance of the bank statement and the price was forced to still another new high record, 194⅛, then a maximum gain of 3⅛, and only ⅜ above the closing figure of 194.

Engagement of Foreign Gold.

It is maintained by men who believe that they have good information that within a few days New York bankers will acknowledge having engaged a large amount of gold in London and Paris. It is believed, also, that other favorable announcements will be forthcoming [illegible] week.

Although it has been officially stated that there was little or no probability of the Atchison directors acting on the common dividend at the meeting called for next Wednesday, it is still thought by some shrewd observers that the dividend will actually be declared at the meeting and announced immediately thereafter. The belief is still strong that the rate will be 2½ regular for the six months, and ½ of 1 per cent extra, making a 6 per cent. basis.

It is claimed that Amalgamated Copper stock for some little time has been passing through a process of accumulation. A sharp upward turn in this stock is looked for in the near future. It is understood that during the month of August the largest metal selling companies in this country sold 100,000 pounds of copper. This authority says that there is very little copper in sight for nearby delivery. He believes that the Amalgamated dividend will be at the rate of 8 per cent. but does not have a definite idea as to what the extra rate on Anaconda will be.

Expect Another Rise.

The speculative movement was upset for a time by the trust company failure in Philadelphia. That announcement put the finishing touches upon a market which was getting rather top-heavy and [illegible] of the sensational details of the failure the disaster had for a day wide influence. Most of the week's movement was characterized by quiet liquidation. Insistent profit taking and renewed purchases for a further rise. The big people expect it still.

Within one day after the news of the failure came out the market regained [illegible] of its lost strength. This firmness was for to reassure speculators and led to many sharp advances, [illegible] standing [illegible] to 6 per cent. [illegible] rate for call money. Many supporting orders were put in on Wednesday morning when the market was forced to take stocks at the rate of 500,000 shares per hour. When many predicted a break, the insistent buying by shrewd operators advanced prices well up towards the higher level of the present movement. The whole speculation was well studied and except for the spectacular features of the Philadelphia failure it did not lead to much disturbance.

The Boston market was listless yesterday, but the tone was steady. The weakness in Copper Range and the strength of Butte Coalition were the features. For [illegible] week [illegible]

Water street, Medford, to H. M. Beglen. This property consists of a ten-room house, which has been thoroughly remodeled and improved with all modern appliances, about 20,000 square feet of land and an [illegible] house. The tax valuation is about $6,500, but the price paid is withheld. Mr. Beglen buys for a home and will immediately occupy.

Great activity in the sale of Court Park land at Winthrop is noted, the lots, only a few of which are now on the market, being in great demand. Some of the purchasers of Court Park had already have begun building and without doubt many attractive dwellings will be erected during the coming year.

Important Marlboro Deal.

Robert A. Clark of Marlboro has sold his farm of 100 acres, located on the road from Marlboro to Gleasondale and Stow, together with a mansion house, large modern barn, two silos and two henneries and a fine fruit orchard of 300 apple trees. Included in the deal is a large amount of stock and personal property and a retail milk route to the city. This is considered one of the best farms in that section. The purchaser is W. M. Wilbur of Orange, who buys for a home, and will immediately occupy. The assessed valuation is $4,800. The Edward T. Harrington Company negotiated the sale.

The same firm reports the sale of the beautiful estate in Townsend Harbor, modernized by Leonora Bradley Pattee, which she purchased through the same brokers in May, 1905, from Fred N. Lowe. This property consists of a farm of eighty-five acres, upon which are 300 fruit trees, an immense wood and timber lot, attractive house remodelled by Mrs. Pattee, as well as the barns, stables and out buildings. The real estate was sold together with all the household furnishings of mission furniture copper inlaid, to a business man of Boston, who intends to make this a permanent home.

Deeds have passed through the office of Henry W. Savage in the sale for Henry E. Vincent of the estate No. 72 Wellington Hill street, Dorchester, near Mattapan, consisting of an eight-room frame house and 5169 square feet of land. The property is new and not yet assessed. Albert J. Sargent is the buyer for a home. Papers also have been passed through the same office for the sale for Frederick J. Hutchison of a double, three-family frame house, with 2567 square feet of land, located at Nos. 96 and 98 Burrell street, all assessed on $5,000, to Robert C. Steinmetz, who buys for investment.

ACTIVITY IN REAL ESTATE DEALS SEEN DURING WEEK

Farms and out-of-town property took precedence in the real estate market again last week, but a number of interesting deals were recorded in the city proper. It was not an active week, but the usual Fall activity begins to show signs of its approach.

Agreement papers have been signed for the well-known Oak Island Grove, situated at Revere Beach, and final papers will pass to record in a few days. It is the intention of the new owners, John E. V. Hayden and John H. Kealey, to develop the forty acres still retain the grove and let it for picnic parties, as in the past.

Deeds have gone to record in the sale of a poultry farm situated on Bay road, Norton, consisting of eight acres of land, an eight-room house, four poultry houses and all personal property belonging to Rosalie Clark, who conveys title to William Holden of Boston, who is already in possession. Henry W. Savage was the broker.

Papers are reported recorded in the sale of the estate known as Griswold Warehouse, in rear of No. 15 Adams street, Somerville, consisting of a two-story building 30 by 60 feet and lot of land containing about 3,000 square feet. The grantor is F. T. Griswold and the purchaser is C. A. Bowes, who buys for improvement. Edward T. Harrington Company negotiated the sale.

The physical condition of the mines of these companies has improved 100 per cent. to 500 per cent. in thirty days. The mines are being actively developed and are becoming great producers of bullion. They will soon become great dividend payers.

All of these stocks are now selling for cents, and, in our opinion, most of them will soon be selling for dollars. Six months ago Goldfield Mohawk sold for 44 cents a share. Hundreds of sales have been made of this stock at $4.40 per share since.

The opportunities are identical. No one realizes this more than men on the ground, who are buying these standard Manhattan stocks with all the money they can lay their hands on.

Follow the lead of men who are on the ground. They "take a look for theirs," and they never buy until they are convinced by personal observation of mine showings at close range. They never make a mistake.

Write for our monthly, weekly and special market reports. On July 16th our market review advised the purchase of Little Grey Manhattan at 22. It is now selling around 75. It also urged the purchase of Jumping Jack Manhattan at 22. Fully 100 per cent. has been already made by investors who followed our advice on Jumping Jack then, with fully another 100 per cent. advance for them. BETTER METHODS IN EDUCATION OF YOUNG

By Dr. Gertrude T. Bodfish.

There has been a rapidly increasing tendency for thirty years or more to make education along all lines of a more practical nature.

Ever since President Rogers founded our great Institute of Technology, people in this country and in Europe have striven to make the education, especially of the so-called industrial classes, of that nature which would make them successful wage earners.

Yet, if we study the methods of President Rogers we will see that he was not in close sympathy with the more narrow conception of what is meant by a "practical" education. In his pamphlet, "Plan and Outline for an Institute of Technology," he is very decided on this point. He says: "In the features of the plan here sketched, it will be apparent that the education which we seek to provide, although eminently practical in its aims, has no affinity with that instruction in mere empirical routine which has sometimes been vaunted as the proper education for the industrial classes. We believe, on the contrary, that the most truly practical education, even in an industrial point of view, is one founded on a thorough knowledge of scientific laws and principles and which unites with habits of close observation and exact reasoning a large general cultivation.

Education for All.

"We believe that the highest grade of scientific culture would not be too high as a preparation for the labors of the mechanic and manufacturer; and we read in the history of social progress ample proofs that the abstract studies and researches of the philosopher are often the most beneficent sources of practical discovery and improvement."

We are glad to have so eminent an authority to quote from to prove the correctness of our own position. President Rogers distinctly means that education, while it may fit one to occupy some important position in life, should not be confined to narrow limitations, and he also means that all should be educated irrespective of classes.

The word "classes" ought not to have any distinctive meaning in a democracy; neither should there be any special or different kind of education for one class of people more than for any other class.

The grade of intellect and inherent ability of the student, should alone be the determining factor as to the kind of education required. In harmony with the principles as laid down by President Rogers we have seen schools come into being which have united studies along academic lines with training in the manual arts.

Hampton and Tuskegee Institutes are well known for the grand work that has been accomplished there.

Based on Industry and Science.

Progressive people everywhere now recognise the necessity of training the hand as well as the head. When this idea gains still greater prominence the false lines of social demarcation will have been destroyed.

In the public schools is the best place to begin with the idea of an education based on industry or applied science. As an outgrowth of this idea, agriculture or garden work has been introduced into some dozen or more schools in Boston.

These so far are to be found mostly in the congested districts, but they ought to be placed in every school in the State. Not only can children be trained to have a knowledge of fruits and flowers, but they will instinctively come to love them and wish in time to own a part of the earth, or at least to cultivate it for others if not for themselves.

Their powers of observation and reasoning faculties can be developed in a natural, healthful manner. As they become producers they will grow to have great respect for the products of the labor of others. And thus will we have fewer thefts.

Carlyle says: "Train the children, each in its own little garden, to respect fruit trees, honorable profit, industry, beauty, and good order. It is the summary of all gospels to men."

Out-of-Door School Work.

In these gardens already established in our city, the garden work during the Spring and Fall terms is done in school time, in the two hours a week required by the curriculum. In the Winter months lessons on soil, plants, seeds, use of tools, etc., are given the children. They also sow seeds in window boxes.

After the April vacation, the out-of-door work of plotting the garden, preparing the soil and planting begins. Each child has his or her own little piece of ground, and plants as many crops as its narrow limits will allow. In some instances children have cooked and eaten the very vegetables they have grown.

One ambitious boy is quoted as writing in his diary: "I am going to have vegetables and flowers in my garden this year, so that I can have a boiled dinner and flowers on the table every day." Is there not a powerful hint in this story to political economists. Why do we not now provide all our children with little plots of ground, so they can become consumers of their own products. Half-starved children in our public schools would decrease if they had the chance to cultivate the soil which Nature by right has given them, but which unnatural conditions have taken from them.

Helps to Build the Soul.

While humane people recoil from the idea of exploiting child labor for the benefit of employers, they must not forget the child's divine inheritance of labor. Froebel says that the child "as a productive being must be educated from the beginning to self-activity and productive energy."

OFFENDERS IN JUVENILE COURT; COURT SKETCHES.

At 9 o'clock yesterday morning a smooth-shaven man with a kindly face and shrewd eyes took his seat on the bench in a small room on the Somerset street side of the Suffolk County Courthouse, spoke a few words to his clerk, a colored man, and the new Juvenile Court, Judge Harvey H. Baker, of Brookline, presiding, was open for its initial session.

It is a new departure, this special court for boys and girls who break the laws. That is, it is new in Boston. In Denver, where one has been in operation for some time, it has been a great success, and has added much to the reputation of Judge Ben Lindsay.

The advocates of this court and its judges believe that youthful violators of the law should not be classed or allowed to associate with old and hardened criminals. They believe that wayward boys and girls under fourteen years cannot be wholly bad and should be dealt with leniently and given a chance to reform, rather than be punished in reformatories or jails where associations with others would tend to make them worse instead of better.

Court Is Cosmopolitan.

So the Juvenile Court was established. As Boston is a cosmopolitan city, the court is cosmopolitan. Judge Baker is an American. The two associate justices are Philip Rubenstein and Frank Leveroni, a Hebrew and an Italian. The clerk is Charles Williams, a negro. The probation officers will have a large share of the work of the court, but none have been named as yet, although Mrs. Rose Kronkyn, of the Jewish Council of Women, acted in that capacity on the opening day.

The first prisoner brought before Judge Baker was Francis Malley, a Roxbury boy. As the proceedings of the court are to be secret, only the complainants, defendants and witnesses in each case are allowed in the room at a time.

Young Malley was charged with malicious mischief in that he threw an egg which struck Jacob Wishoff, of Topliff street, Dorchester. Wishoff was on hand with his egg-bespattered coat, and his brother, Morris, was present as a witness. As Morris could speak no English he was not called.

Led Into Court Sobbing.

The boy, sobbing, was led into the courtroom from the clerk's office and the door was closed. Even then the sound of the sobs could be heard in the outer court room.

Suddenly the weeper ceased. In a few minutes the boy came out, smiling, even though the tears still showed in his eyes.

Another boy, charged with loitering on the streets, was ushered in, badly frightened. He, too, came out smiling.

And so it went. Where the boys expected punishment, they received advice. Instead of being sent to jail or fined, they were given another chance and placed on honor to make the most of it.

The one unhappy man in the vicinity of the new court was Wishoff. With his stained coat over his arm, he wandered about disconsolately.

"Look at my coat," he wailed. "That Malley boy hit me with a bad egg, and my suit is spoiled. It cost me $35, and I only want him to pay me $15. He offered me $2 to get the suit cleansed, but I wouldn't take it. The judge says he must think it over, and he put the case off for a while. And the egg is all over my coat!"

"Talked Fine to Me."

And Wishoff started sadly for home.

"I didn't really mean to hit him," said young Malley. "I'm willing to pay for having the suit cleansed, but I can't pay him $15. And I don't believe the judge will make me, either. He's all right. He talked fine to me."

Judge Baker understands children and necessarily likes them. He is a close observer of human nature and can appreciate boyish troubles. Governor Guild was assured of that before he appointed him. Judge Baker hopes to be to Boston what Judge Lindsay is to Denver, a judge of whom children are not afraid, but to whom they tell their woes willingly and truthfully. Should he err in judgment it will be on the side of leniency, not harshness.

Already the tiny room under the great stairway in the court house is known as the "Court of Good Cheer," And that augurs well for the youthful offenders who must appear there.

YACHT CLUB OFF ON ANNUAL CRUISE

The annual cruise of the Wollaston Yacht Club of Quincy began yesterday afternoon, and will last until Monday night. Twenty yachts and launches left the clubhouse shortly after 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The first stop was made last night at Hull, where accommodations were found for the night by some of the members at the hotels, while others preferred to sleep on their boats. To-day the boats went to Marblehead, where most of the day will be spent. To-morrow the cruisers will witness the Sonder races. The flagship is the Harold D., with W. M. Chase as commodore.

15,000 GREEKS HAVE REUNION AND SPORTS

The Greek societies of Woburn meet in reunion at Wilmington Grove to-morrow. Arrangements for taking care of 15,000 people have been made, and the principal feature of the day will be Olympian games, closing with a twenty-five-mile Marathon race. The new Greek church was dedicated to-day with appropriate ceremonies.

GIRL SWIMMER IS OUT FOR RECORDS

Miss Mary McDonough, one of the girl swimmers at the L street baths, is out after records in her line, and, according to Superintendent Rowe of the baths, who gave her a trial yesterday, she will soon be able to excel the records made by Eleanora Sears, the Back Bay society girl who caused sensations as a speedy swimmer. Under Superintendent Rowe's coaching Miss McDonough to-day went seven-eighths of a mile in 26.40.

Miss McDonough lost in a race a few days ago through a technicality, but is not discouraged.

969 MORE VOTERS IN BOSTON FOR 1906

The supplementary list of voters was closed at 12 o'clock last night. Provided all of the names after being investigated are placed on the voting list, this year will show an increase over last of 969. The investigation will last ten days, closing September 10, and is in charge of Police Commissioner O'Meara, John M. Minton and Chief Justice Brown. In 1905 the police list total was 195,252. This year's police list shows a total of 196,221.

AS SMOOTH AS THEY COME
BIFF

Lady weight Jones, a bettors lucky guise from Missouri and the last of a Hedgerills of stock and grain investments and pur. Who has come to the front in vicinity of the great market at Bucket Shoppers. He's the wife type of dissipation, using it, real live sports and is up to date in all of the ins and outs. Some of the fast things at a race by the close acquaintance he has ever known to the tens, good and poor, and never stared the gaff. For one number of new, open to all to the world's fair, and the Gans-Nelson fight will be received by a direct wire and announced from the stage.

Returns of the Gans-Nelson fight will be received by a direct wire and announced from the stage.

FRED WATSON AND MORRISEY SISTERS

Train your lamps so they will burn at full glow and prevent smoke. Best of all, reading matter and soon shows you are the talk of every town and you will not be in the dark. Don't forget to see the show that you have been waiting for. Everything new and fresh.

Crowley and Killeen

Here's a couple of clever little comedians that are sure to please you. Their singing, dancing and talking out a line of nonsense that is quite refreshing. Don't miss it. As a talking team they are up to date in a class by themselves. Don't keep running all the time.

SEYMOUR and HILL

"The Mr. and the Misses." An acceptable comedy acrobatic turn to about the limit for foundation. Plenty of comedy and a varied set of new tricks that will land you for a while. Here's where you get a good start for your money.

ELMER TENLEY

A comedian artist who is the undisputed king of the banjo. Has a style all his own and very pleasing to see. He's slick and speedy all the way—a combination that never fails to please you. There's no bad wagons goods in his stock—everything new and first-class.

Wesson, Walters and Wesson

A comedy skitlet postmarked "A Trip to Washington—after the Ball." Introducing some good singing situations that are designed to land in front. This team is very much appreciated by those from the front, and you'll agree with us—they're a clever act and are welcome.

Murray, Clayton and Drew

Married A No. 1, when it comes to singing and dancing. All of actors of the day. A farcical sketch team just as from Missouri—see they'll show you. It's a good long screen for yours.

CHARLEY HARRIS

You never find this clever and original comedian going over the top. He's a winner in the front, wears no bothers. His "Going Fast In" and "The Preacher and I Must Be" are wide circles around anything ever seen in this line.

MUSICAL SIMPSONS

Masters and Leaders on the Xylophone and other instruments. Nothing artistic about them—they're a jolly and silent lot. Some things that are worth. Week will be double harness.

Carey, Cotter Trio

We never fancy farce too when we say that this combination of vocalists and dancers is about the best of its kind. Their work is clean, neat and the work is the warbler. Classy favorites wherever they stand. A trio well worth while.

"OUR" ALICE THORNTON

A classy bevy of fluffy and ruffles gradiators with high kicking abilities. Miss Thornton does her work with a grin for all the latest song hits and she's a winner.

THE VALADONS

A team of the most daring aerialists being There's quite a few of them but they will make you believe that's all as it seems to be nothing more than a trio. Their feats are a feature.

Carroll and Doyle

Each holds his own with a stock of laughing stuff and a load of bright and witty sayings, both of which raise out to the top. Their work is new and catchy.

LA REX

Thompson & Lawrence

Good ones. Full and keep you in an upper mit a bottle of quaint and chatty stuff—and breezy humor.

FREDERICK

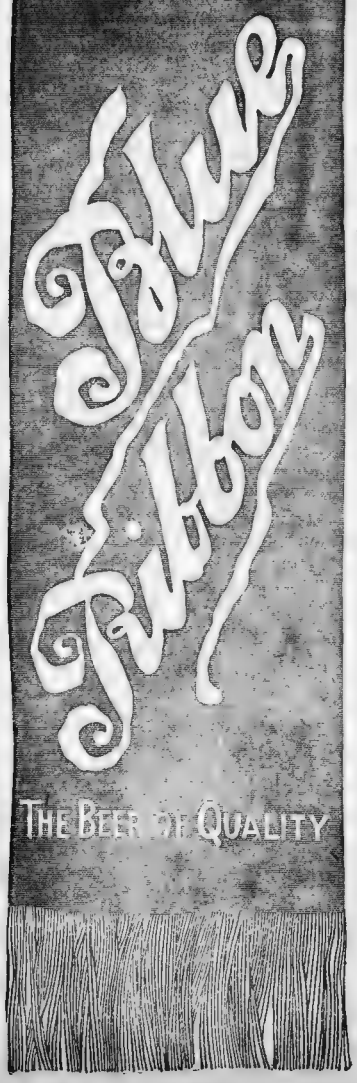
Pabst Beer is the Clean Beer

PHYSICIANS have said there is nothing better than Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer as a vitalizing tonic, because they know how it is made. They know the Pabst eight-day malting process and they understand the importance of the perfect purity and cleanliness of the Pabst exclusive process of brewing. They know the healthfulness of the beer produced by the Pabst process. People, and especially doctors, demand that everything they eat and drink be absolutely clean.



Pabst Blue Ribbon

Beer is always clean and wholesome. The Pabst brewery is as clean as the cleanest kitchen. In the long process of brewing, Pabst beer never comes in contact with anything unclean. The tubes through which it is run, from the time the malt is mashed until the beer is bottled or kegged, are sterilized to prevent any impurity or uncleanliness. Pabst Beer is not fermented in open vats, as is usual in breweries, but in Pabst hermetically sealed tanks, into which no air, except pure filtered air ever enters. Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer is not cooled, as is usual, in rooms where men walk in and out but it is cooled in specially constructed sealed coolers where no hands can touch it, no breath of foul air can taint it. Only filtered air is used to oxygenate it. It is then stored in hermetically sealed storage tanks until science and the test of time pronounce it perfect beer in age, purity and strength.

ADDRESSES DEMOCRATS AT GREAT GATHERING

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Sept. 1.—William Jennings Bryan, after having been welcomed back to America by citizens of three States, expects to start for his home in Lincoln, Nebraska, to-morrow afternoon.

An informal reception at the Democratic Club this afternoon, with speeches later in Newark and Jersey City, and a dinner at Healy's restaurant for newspaper men, about completed his active local programme.

Arriving at the Grand Central Station on the Winsted express early to-day, he entered an automobile with Mrs. Bryan and his daughter Grace. They went to the Victoria Hotel. Mrs. Bryan started out on a shopping tour. The Nebraskan had talks with his publishers, Funk & Wagnalls. Before he left the hotel he received a number of local friends in the lobby. Speaking of his reception in New Haven and in Bridgeport, he said:

Pleased With Receptions.

"The people everywhere were most kind. They received me most cordially, and I am very much pleased."

The reception at the Democratic Club was arranged to allow informal greetings from local Democrats, and the crowd which awaited him there was large.

After the informal reception Mr. Bryan's course was laid toward Newark, with Jersey City as the last stop before returning to this city.

Mr. Bryan was given a hearty welcome in Newark by the Democratic organizations of Essex county, augmented by delegations from all parts of the State, who had journeyed thither to do honor to the distinguished visitor.

Mr. Bryan arrived over the Pennsylvania railroad at 4.24 o'clock. A parade was formed with a police platoon and a brass band at the head of it. Then came Mr. Bryan's carriage, followed by half a dozen others with members of the reception committee. About five hundred members of the Democratic organization followed on foot.

Made a Brief Address.

Several thousand persons were gathered in Military Park, at Newark, and Mr. Bryan received a rousing welcome. Judge Gray called the assemblage to order and then introduced as chairman Jeremiah O'Rourke, who was a delegate to the two conventions which nominated Mr. Bryan for President. Mr. O'Rourke introduced Mr. Bryan, who made a brief address, during which he was frequently interrupted by applause.

After he had finished his speech, Mr. Bryan was driven to the residence of ex-Senator Smith, where he held a short reception, meeting most of the Democratic State leaders. Later he started for Jersey City.

A great crowd greeted him there and he was cheered on his way back to New York. His program ended with to-night's dinner. His speeches to-day followed the line laid down at Madison Square Garden.

CARS CRASH AT LEOMINSTER; 18 HURT.

Leominster, Sept. 1.—Two cars crashed together on the Fitchburg and Leominster street railroad near Maple farm, in North Leominster, tonight, and eighteen persons were injured, none seriously. Motorman Oakes is in the hospital with a broken leg.

A misunderstanding of orders relative to the leaving of turnouts is said to be the cause of the accident.

One of the cars was used for construction purposes, while the other was filled with passengers. Both were badly damaged.

Motorman Coombs and Conductor Gooder were in charge of the passenger car and Motorman Oakes was alone on the construction car.

Motorman Coombs saw that the crash was inevitable, and, after reversing the power, jumped. A number of passengers followed his example. Motorman Oakes stuck to his car, vainly trying to check its speed. Both cars were travelling at a fast rate of speed when the collision occurred.

An Italian, whose name could not be learned, had one leg broken, besides minor bruises.

SERVES 18 MONTHS; IS ARRESTED AGAIN

Special Officer Keene of the Dudley street station went to Providence late yesterday afternoon and arrested William H. Brown, colored, when he was released, after serving an eighteen months' sentence for larceny. The Dudley street station police want Brown on a charge of larceny made in 1904 by L. C. Jones of Southampton street.

SOCIETY COUPLE IN BROOKLINE ARE MARRIED.

Carl O. Zerrahn of Newton and Miss Charlotte Clarke Made One at Quiet Wedding, Ceremony at Bride's Home

A quiet wedding, attended only by the immediate families of the bride and groom, was celebrated in Brookline yesterday afternoon at the residence of Frederick W. Clarke, Dean road, whose second daughter, Charlotte, was married to Carl Otto Zerrahn, of Milton. The Rev. Daniel Dulaney Addison, rector of All Saints, the bride's church, was the officiating clergyman.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Edythe Clarke, as bridesmaid, while Mr. Geoffrey Whitney acted as best man. Following the ceremony a few friends from Brookline and Milton were present to tender their congratulations. Mr. and Mrs. Zerrahn will go to their home in Milton upon their return from the wedding journey.

RUSSELL, NOTED ARTIST, IS DEAD

Mr. Russell's most noted painting is "The Constitution," now hung in the rooms of the Boston Historical Society. Another similar picture was painted for the Brooklyn Historical Society.

Mr. Russell was educated at Oxford, England, and came to this country at the age of 20. He was a close friend of Sir Thomas Lawrence, the noted English caricature artist. He was 74 years of age and leaves a wife and eleven children. Funeral services will be held at his residence Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Whittemore of Lynn will officiate. Burial will be in Mt. Hope cemetery.

FALL DOWN STAIRS; THREE BADLY HURT

Three patients at the Relief Hospital were badly injured by falling downstairs yesterday. All are in a serious condition. Mrs. Emma Wilson, who lives in South Boston, was taken to the hospital in a carriage from a house in Atlantic avenue. Her left arm is fractured and she is terribly bruised.

Rose Levy, twelve years old, of No. 81 Leverett street, is suffering from a similar accident. She has multiple bruises and is on the dangerous list.

MYSTERY IN ACID BURNS ON WOMAN

Mrs. Elizabeth Schock, aged twenty-nine, of Suite 4, No. 42 Dundee street, Back Bay, was taken to the City Hospital at ten o'clock last night, suffering from carbolic acid burns. Her condition is serious.

The woman was found in her rooms by neighbors, who had been attracted to the flat by her groans. They found her on the bed, shrieking in pain. Considerable mystery surrounds the affair. The police were unable to obtain any solution from Mrs. Schock's neighbors.

PUBLIC INSTALATION OF ZIONISTS TO-NIGHT

Prominent Speakers Will Address English H. S. Association.

The first public installation of the English High School Zionists' Association will be held this evening at 7:30 o'clock, at the Y. M. H. A. rooms, No. 39 East Concord street.

A number of prominent speakers will be present, among them Leo J. Lyons, Jacob De Haas, Alderman Edward J. Bromberg. A musical programme of high order has been arranged by the committee of arrangements, composed of M. Paul Gordon, B. H. Bluestein, Isaac Greenstein, Augustus H. Kaufman, Saul Sharfman, Albert Holzman and Matthew Lipman.

BOY FOUND DYING ON RAILROAD TRACK

Worcester, Sept. 1.—James O'Hara, aged thirteen, of No. 7 Prescott street, was found in a dying condition on the railroad track near his home to-night. His right leg was badly crushed and he suffered from other injuries, which the physicians think may cause his death. He is at the City Hospital.

A passenger train passed the crossing a short time before the lad was found, and it is presumed that this struck him.

20,000 WAGE-EARNERS TO MARCH OVER BOSTON STREETS MONDAY

45 Bands Will Furnish Music For Labor Day Parade, Which Will Include Many Floats.

Line of march over which giant Labor Day parade will pass and some of the union leaders who have worked to make the event a memorable one in the history of labor in New England

LABOR DAY PARADE FACTS

Number of men in line, 20,000.
Number of bands, 45.
Number of musicians, 1,400.
Time of start, 10 a. m., from Copley square.
Chief marshal, Martin T. Joyce, president of Central Labor Union.
Marshal of Building Trades section, President John E. Potts.
Marshal of Knights of Labor District Assembly No. 30, K. of L., Master Workman Michael O'Meara.

Twenty thousand wage earners, both men and women, will parade to-morrow in the greatest Labor Day demonstration ever seen in this city.

Twenty years ago Labor Day was made a National holiday. In honor of the anniversary the members of the different unions have worked long and hard to make the celebration one that will be long remembered.

Success has crowned their efforts. Not only will every union that has paraded in former years be even more largely represented in line, but three unions that have not participated for several years will march. These are Typographical Union No. 13, Bricklayers' Union No. 3 and Bartenders' Union No. 77. Each of the three will have at least 1,000 men in line. Forty-five bands, comprising more than 1,400 musicians, will furnish the music.

The parade will start promptly at 10 o'clock. The route will be as follows: Copley square, Boylston, Berkeley, Tremont, Dedham, Shawmut avenue, Dover, Washington, Eliot, Park square, Charles, Beacon, School, Washington, to Adams square, where the parade will be dismissed.

The parade will be reviewed at the State House by Governor Guild, at City Hall by Mayor Fitzgerald, and at Adams square by Chief Marshal Martin T. Joyce, division marshals and their staffs.

Persistent efforts were made by the Labor Day Committee of the Central Labor Union to have a record-breaking showing this year. Sub-committees visited nearly every union in the city and requested that they turn out. To insure a big showing, several unions voted to fine members who do not march. The members of Brewery Workers' Union who fail to appear in line will be fined $10 each. Bartenders' Union No. 77 will impose a fine of $5 upon every member who fails to march and who can give no good excuse for not doing so. Barbers' Protective Union has voted a fine of $2 for each man who is not in the parade unless he can furnish a good excuse.

Women Aid Labor's Parade.

The women have not been behind hand in helping to make the anniversary an event long to be remembered. The Laundry Workers' Union will have a large float to carry all the women members of the union. The float will be draped with the national colors and drawn by six dapple gray horses. On the side of the float the union label will be displayed. Another float in the Central Labor Union division will carry the members of Cigar Factory Strippers' Union. The cheering will be led by the president, Miss Bessie Jacobs. The Overall Workers' Union will also have a decorated float in line. There are to be tally-hos and drags in the Typographical Union division, bearing members of the Woman's Auxiliary and women workers in the Municipal plant.

All the women are to be dressed in white and will carry flags, and at the head of each float three young women will carry a banner emblematic of labor.

Lamplighters' Union No. 11,943, A. F. of L., will celebrate its first anniversary by parading with the Central Labor Union division. The union will have a feature float with street lights on each corner.

Solomon Gompers Present.

Soloman Gompers, the aged father of President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, will be an honored guest. He will ride in a carriage near the head of the parade, and will be accompanied by Henry Abrahams, secretary of the Central Labor Union, another veteran worker in the labor movement. Mr. Gompers has been a member in good standing of a labor union for about sixty years.

The organization with the largest number of men in line will be Team Drivers' Union No. 25, with over 2,000. They will be attired in blue jumpers and slate-colored hats. The next biggest showing will be that of Boston Typographical Union with 1,400 men in line. They will carry canes and wear badges and large buttons with a facsimile of the Allied Printing Trades Council label. Several novel features booming the label will be in line, and thousands of pocket mirrors will be distributed. The "Typos" will have the right of line in the first division.

Twelve Hundred Bartenders.

Twelve hundred members of Bartenders' Union No. 77 will march in two divisions, wearing caps and badges. The headquarters of the union, corner of Hollis and

Leaders Tell of the Victories Won and ORGANIZED LABOR'S GREAT GROWTH IN POWER IN YEAR

The growth of the organized labor movement in numbers and in power, and the progress of legislation in the interest of the toilers, especially in Massachusetts, are set forth in the following statements by well known Boston leaders of the movement, as causes for especial gratification in this year's observance of Labor Day.

By HENRY STERLING, Secretary Boston Typographical Union No. 13.

HENRY STERLING

The usual progress has been made in the industrial field in the increase of wages and decrease of hours, especially in the book and job printing business, where 40,000 out of 44,000 men have secured an 8-hour day and effectually established that as the standard day in the printing business.

The future must tell [illegible] Mr. Gompers's effort [illegible] will be. Locally [illegible] this year achieved magnificent [illegible] results. Six measures of [illegible] importance to labor have [illegible] and taken effect. Of these the most important is the eight-hour law, the victory of more than [illegible] struggle. The veto of [illegible] was one of the causes of the [illegible] upheaval of two years ago.

Next to shortening the hours of labor, the bringing together of idle labor and the opportunity for labor is of most importance. This year the Legislature passed the free employment bill, petitioned for by the trades unionists during the last six or seven years. This official effort to bring the idle man and the vacant job together will prove one of the most salutary pieces of legislation ever enacted [illegible] if properly [illegible].

The [illegible] bill labor were [illegible] educational requirements were made definite and specific, and it was made a penal offence for padrones or parents to falsify certificates in such manner as to get young children at labor before the legal age.

In addition to this the new law excluding illiterates from the mills until they are sixteen years of age went into operation, and hundreds of children left the mills to go to school.

The grip of the money-shark on his unfortunate victim was to some extent loosened, and no longer can the Shylock bind his victim to perpetual financial slavery.

By HENRY ABRAHAMS, Secretary Boston Central Labor Union.

HENRY ABRAHAMS

What has organized labor accomplished since Labor Day, 1905, that has made for the elevation and improvement of the race?

The printers in many cities have shortened their hours, thus being able to spend more time with their families.

Cigarmakers have increased their wages.

Shoe workers [illegible] of arbitration [illegible] will stand by it [illegible]

The Governor has favored a bill abolishing child labor. Textile workers have secured a higher wage.

Bleachery workers of Waltham got [illegible] taught the value of trade unionism.

Labor has been taught the value of [illegible] chain of benefits.

His Honor, the Mayor, has given the electrical workers [illegible] with [illegible] members of organized [illegible].

But what is of greater consequence is the formation of trades unions among the women workers.

The interest of the workers in peace and the realization that war injures them more than any class in the community, is more manifest.

Our employers realize that the public schools and a free press have made a higher grade of men who want decent homes, pictures on the wall and books on the shelf and that they have to get a decent wage to have these things.

Last but not least, the laboring men have determined to use their political as well as their economic power.

By JOHN F. KENNEDY, Business Agent of Sheet Metal Workers' Union No. 17.

Strikes and labor difficulties during the past year have demonstrated that all crafts are better organized than ever.

It has also been clearly shown that there must be some other method of settling labor difficulties instead of employers appealing to Citizen's Alliances and Manufacturers' Associations in an endeavor to annihilate unions.

The difficulties can only be overcome by employers directly involved meeting their workmen on common ground without interference of parties foreign to the dispute.

The trades union agreement is the only solution of the difficulties. Then injunctions will be a thing of the past. employers will not seek the aid of courts to win unjust fights.

J. E. POTTS

Labor's most notable accomplishment [illegible] in the city of Boston and Massachusetts [illegible] the passage of the eight-hour bill. More recognition has been given labor by the Governor and mayors of cities by appointing trade unionists [illegible].

The past year [illegible] also seen organized labor through the American Federation of Labor, officially declare its intention of entering the political field. Following out this plan, Wage Earners' Clubs have sprung up all over the State.

We expect to have 25,000 members enrolled by the day of the State election. We do not expect to have all labor leaders in office this Fall, but do expect to have a strong organization.

CANNON TO RESCUE IN MAINE.

[illegible] AT PORTLAND BY [illegible] CROWDS

Will Make [illegible] Speeches and Will [illegible] Answer Argument of Gompers.

BOTH PARTIES CLAIM VICTORY NEXT WEEK

Bitter Contest Against Rockland Statesman Perplexes Leaders.

Portland, Sept. 1.—The Speaker of the House of Representatives, "Uncle Joe" Cannon, arrived in Maine this afternoon to help Congressman Charles E. Littlefield in his campaign for re-election.

Speaker Cannon will endeavor to offset the [illegible] of Samuel Gompers, the famous labor leader, who has been speaking throughout the State in support of the candidacy of Hon. D. J. McGillicuddy of Lewiston, Mr. Littlefield's opponent.

"Uncle Joe" and his secretary were met at the Union station in this city by an enthusiastic crowd, escorted to an automobile and driven to the Lafayette Hotel. [illegible] crowd was waiting with a band, which played "Hail to the Chief." Mr. Cannon [illegible] in the auto and made a short speech.

Speaker Cannon will be heard at a number of [illegible] in different parts of the State, his first appearance being [illegible] next Tuesday evening.

BOTH LITTLEIELD AND M'GILLICUDDY ARE CONFIDENT

By Clement L. Pollock.

Lewiston, Me., Sept. 1.—Victory is claimed by both sides to-day in the Littlefield-McGillicuddy congressional fight, with one week remaining of the most remarkable campaign Maine has ever seen.

[illegible] The Democrats declare that he will be defeated and have no figures as yet to make public. The growing sentiment in the State against [illegible] has been practiced has [illegible] the Democrats [illegible] to a landslide, and [illegible] Mr. McGillicuddy is going [illegible] to Congress.

Both Sides Confident.

The Republicans deny. They have had their [illegible] out looking for premonitions of [illegible] earthquakes, avalanches and other political phenomena, but they declare that nothing of that character can be found. Unless things change mightily within the next few days it is a certainty that both sides are going to claim the fight right up to the minute the ballots are counted.

Liquor Issue Potent

This is about all that Mr. Littlefield can reasonably count on to help [illegible].

The first thing, and by all [illegible] the strongest, that favors Mr. McGillicuddy is the feeling of the people of [illegible] on the liquor question. He will [illegible] hundreds of votes from Republicans on this issue.

Then it may be taken as granted that practically all of organized labor in the district is against Littlefield. [illegible]

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 1.—There is an insistent rumor here that General Trepoff is dying of the poison at Peterhoff. While this has been denied several times in a half hearted way, there is ground for the belief that the health of the military tyrant is in a precarious condition and that his physicians are in fear that he will not live.

New York, Sept. 1. Pope Pius has sent his blessing and an autograph photograph to William Randolph Hearst. The papal benediction to Hearst [illegible] a letter of appreciation for his [illegible] of Mt. Vesuvius sufferers. More than this, the Pope sent personal message to Mr. Hearst [illegible] of his aid to the Italian [illegible] and townspeople whose homes were overwhelmed by lava when Mt. Vesuvius was recently [illegible] by [illegible] three [illegible] blessing, message and photo were forwarded in care of [illegible] Judge Palmieri of this city, who was given a [illegible] private audience by the Pope after the former had returned from a tour of the devastated district.

It is hard," said Judge Palmieri, "for Americans to realize the gratitude felt in Italy for the aid [illegible] by citizens of this country through the medium of Mr. Hearst. The prestige with which the Hearst newspapers are [illegible] in behalf of the suffering [illegible] to alleviate distress.

especially grateful to Mr. Hearst and they [illegible] a copy of the [illegible] thanks for Mr Hearst which they had adopted. I was commissioned to deliver it to Mr. Hearst. They also sent to him a beautiful [illegible] piece of [illegible] of oriental pearls. All was in appreciation of the work done by him and his newspapers in the aid of homeless and hungry sufferers.

Judge Palmieri also brought information of [illegible] to myself to the Cardinal Secretary of State said to him, [illegible] Archbishop Farley that I hold him in the very highest esteem.'

This statement was considered of the utmost significance in Rome, where it is understood that another red hat is to go to America. It is understood that the coveted honor lay between Archbishop Farley and Ireland. What the papal secretary said is taken to indicate that Archbishop Farley may soon be elevated to the red robe estate.

Red Hat for Farley?

"That statement," said Judge Palmieri, coming from so high a dignitary, seemed to me more than a hint that there would be another American cardinal. That he will be Archbishop Farley I am inclined to think from the fact that in the hour's talk I had with the Pope he spoke in terms of enthusiasm about Archbishop Farley. There was more than an intimation of the advancement of the archbishop of New York in the [illegible] remarks, and plain when he bade me give Archbishop Farley his warmest greetings.

Prominent American [illegible] who have been recently returned from Rome say there is no truth in the rumor that Merry del Val will be removed from his secretaryship because of the situation between church and state in France. It is said that the secretary enjoys the fullest confidence of the Pope.

FEAR ENGLAND MAY LOSE SEA SUPREMACY.

FRANCE AND GERMANY SPENDING MILLIONS

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Sept. 1.—A fresh outcry from naval experts to the effect that Great Britain's supremacy on the water is threatened has been raised in connection with the commissioning today of the new giant battleship Dreadnought, the largest warship in the world.

The naval policy of the government is bitterly attacked. Incidents by it may be remarked that the popular demand for an increase of naval armament gives a peculiar answer to the statement advanced by Winston Jennings Bryan in his welcome home address to New Yorkers that he would be a sign of peace and hope for international arbitration as the substitute for war from the "Old World."

With the [illegible] of the Dreadnought in commission at Portsmouth today a new record in warship construction has been set. Eleven months only have elapsed since the keel of the gigantic steel monster was laid until the ceremonies [illegible] of the warship. She will now begin her gun [illegible] and speed trials, and they are attracting a [illegible] interest, because of the fact that the Dreadnought is the only battleship fitted with turbine engines, and owing to the enormous discharges of her [illegible] guns.

The supporters of a great navy are using the opportunity created by the discussion of the [illegible] of the Dreadnought to again urge an increase in the governmental naval program. Severe criticism is heaped upon the cabinet for delay in laying down more warships of the Dreadnought class.

"Four Dreadnoughts to Germany's two," is the battle cry of the experts, and they insist that England [illegible] dropping behind the two power standard for her navy which has always been maintained.

According to the present program, England by 1910 will have six Dreadnoughts in hand, while France and Germany will also have six vessels of the same class apiece. The experts in this country are asked that since the construction of the Dreadnoughts all other types of warships have been made obsolete, the supporters of a strong navy express the fear that within fifteen or twenty years England's water strength will be no greater than that of Germany or France individually.

SINGERS IN TRUST TO SELL VOICES

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Paris, Sept. 1.—M. Note of the Grand Opera, has [illegible] an association of singers and actors for the purpose of making and selling photograph records of their own performances.

According to the popular tenor, with the exception of three or four great singers who are [illegible] to [illegible] prices for singing into a phonograph, few opera stars make anything out of the [illegible] of their voices. Moreover, many of the records are taken without the knowledge of the singers.

HERALDIC BLUNDERS DISCOVERED BY KING

He Finds New Chapel In St. Paul's Has Glaring Errors In His Coat of Arms.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Sept. 1. King Edward has expressed displeasure with those responsible for the decoration of the new chapel in St. Paul's Cathedral of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, which he recently inaugurated with great pomp.

The heraldry in the roof was designed without consulting any competent authorities, with the result that there are glaring errors in the representation of the coat of arms of the King, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Connaught.

The blunders will have to be corrected at great expense, as false heraldry cannot be permitted to remain in an historic building.

This is not the first time that the King has pointed out errors in the execution of public works. Last year, when he unveiled a monument to the memory of the Guards [illegible] Wellington Barracks, he discovered that the Duke's first Christian name, George, had been omitted, and that the [illegible] of the Crimean War had been incorrectly described.

Another curious mistake has just been put right by the King. It appears that ever since the [illegible] of the [illegible] royal [illegible], which are [illegible] in the Tower of London, and which are used on [illegible] banquets, [illegible] have been using [illegible] What were known for [illegible] as royal [illegible] are [illegible] and silver [illegible] were inserted to hold salt at the bottoms of the cellars.

RUSSIAN HANGMAN HAS GONE ON STRIKE

He insisted [illegible] and is guaranteed a pension [illegible] his family in case of [illegible] who was [illegible] the unpopular appointment [illegible] the [illegible] from prison, where he had [illegible] a sentence of several years for murdering his father.

ENGLISH PREMIERS REQUIRE NO VALETS

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Sept. 1—The valet is a disappearing type in England and wealthy men are [illegible] professed dandies, are to a great extent doing without the service of a body servant.

The present Liberal Cabinet includes few men who [illegible] valets, although one or two may be classed as "dandies" and have a couple of men in attend to their personal appearance. In the House of Commons which has now a great Liberal majority and a strong Labor party, [illegible] persons of members who have valets is [illegible] very low.

Premier Campbell-Bannerman does not employ a valet, and Arthur J. Balfour, the ex-Premier, also dispenses with the services of a personal servant. His footman [illegible] his wardrobe, and when that functionary is absent, Mr. Balfour calls on the [illegible] Jane a retainer, who has been [illegible] for many years, to [illegible] the [illegible] dress suit.

The decline of the "gentleman's gentleman" is a corollary of the decline of the [illegible] chief in aristocratic households, and a symptom of the economy that has become compulsory as a result of the South African war.

RUSSELL LOWELL LETTERS TO BE SOLD

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Sept. 1.—It has been definitely decided to sell the Russell Lowell letters, the property of the late Charles Hodson [illegible] Ambassador," at the United States Embassy by auction some time in October.

They are good examples of the poet's [illegible] and gentle humor of Lowell. One of the letters is in the form of a brilliant [illegible] in which the writer threatens to [illegible] Mr. Hodson with his ghost if two pounds of tobacco for which Lowell was pining were not sent immediately.

GRANDE DAMES WHO LEAD PARIS.

COUNTESS POURTALES THE MOST PERFECT TYPE

Special Correspondence of Boston Sunday American.

By the Marquis de Castellane.

Paris, Aug. 25.—All women who by right of their great beauty, superior intelligence or exalted origin belong to a class d[illegible] in society are justly called "great ladies." France boasts a considerable number of these favored creatures, and I shall try to tell you something about a few of them.

The first whose name comes to my mind is the Countess de Pourtales. Her right to the qualification of "grande dame" comes rather from her grace and unfailing charm than from [illegible] qualities pertaining to [illegible]. Though Alsatian by origin, the Countess de Pourtales [illegible] [illegible] in 18[illegible] [illegible] considered the most perfect type of the [illegible] Parisienne, endowed with a quick wit, an open mind and a delightful fancy for social pleasure of an uncommon art.

"Grand Marshal of Pleasure."

For forty years she has shed joy and amusement about her wherever she has gone. "We are Grand Marshals of the Army of Pleasure," she used to say laughingly, in referring to herself and her women friends, and, as a matter of fact, no better title could be given this charming woman.

No doubt some future historian will mention her as one of the leading social spirits of her time. She will be depicted as the Queen of Grace under the Second Empire and the Third Republic. If ever she has been obliged to cause any one pain she has done it with so light, so soft a hand that the victim was scarcely aware of his hurt. A real fairy she always has been, and always will be so considered. This woman belongs to the small number of the favored of the gods.

The Countess de Greffuhle.

The Countess de Greffuhle is the next in rank of social favor to the Countess de Pourtales. She differs from her only in being somewhat younger, and in having features more nearly approaching the classic type of beauty. It is from her grandmother, Mme. Tallien, who used to be known as "Our Lady of Thermidor," that she inherits her sparkling, laughing eyes, which give her face a strange radiance that causes people to turn around and stare after her in the street. It is from her grandmother, too, that she gets her wonderful walk, every movement of which is so laden with grace, so supple and rhythmical that if all French society were called upon to state who in their midst had the most bewitching presence no one would think to name anyone but the Countess de Greffuhle.

Leader in World of Letters.

After the queens of beauty came the great women in the world of letters. We are fortunate in possessing a precious example of this type. Madame Adam in the domain of politics and in that of literature has won for herself a position without parallel, a mastery which no other woman of her day has been able to obtain. For the last forty years, first in the ranks of the opposition under the Second Empire, and lastly in governmental spheres under the Third Republic, it is she who has been in the front rank of those who direct public opinion.

Fair and slender and very young, Madame Henri Letellier, daughter of Mr. Fortune, Mayor of Trouville, seems from her earliest infancy to have been impregnated with the spirit of "chic" which pervades that fashionable resort. When you see her crossing the lawn at the celebrated Deauville [illegible] course, enveloped in multicolored gauzes, she seems some goddess descended from an unknown Olympus of Fashion.

HAS DRUNK 25,185 GALLONS OF MILK

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Sept. 1.—Three gallons of milk daily is the sole food of Dr. Hermann Schwartz, an Austrian physician, now in London, and he claims to have subsisted on a lacteal diet exclusively for twenty-three years. He appears to have thrived on it, for he is in the very best of health and strength. He considers himself, at fifty, still a young man.

To feed Dr. Schwartz takes the entire yield of two cows, and since an average cow's milk-yielding period is about four years, it follows that nearly a dozen cows have been milked dry to supply him.

Dr. Schwartz's belief in the milk cure is not shared by Dr. Josiah Oldfield, the celebrated diet specialist, who, commenting upon it, says: "There are better diets, and the absence of anything to excite the major portion of the alimentary canal into activity would have bad results after a lengthened period of talk alone. Nature did not intend man to live on milk alone."

KAISER TO BIVOUAC WITH HIS TROOPS

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Berlin, Sept. 1.—The Kaiser intends to make this year's German army manoeuvres more illustrative of real war than any hitherto held.

For example, the detraining points of the contesting armies are to be kept secret from their antagonists to the last possible moment, so that strategy may seem as genuine as practicable. Operations are, by the Emperor's orders, to be carried on without the slightest regard for his personal comfort.

His Majesty will bivouac with his troops living in a portable house, which is to be transported by motor trucks over the manoeuvring region.

PRETENDER IS READY FOR BATTLE.

LATTER SAID TO HAVE AN ARMY OF 4,000 MEN

Madrid, Sept. 1.—Dispatches from Morocco say that the pretender to the throne is concentrating 6,000 troops at Mulaya in preparation for a decisive battle with the Sultan's forces. The pretender, it is added, expects to obtain considerable reenforcements from the Riff territory. The Sultan's forces are said to number 4,000 well armed men.

Paris, Sept. 1.—A dispatch to the Temps from Tangier says reports to the effect that it is the Sultan's intention to transfer the court from Fez to the City of Morocco continue to circulate, but that no confirmation is obtainable.

ITALY'S DOWAGER ARDENT MOTORIST

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Rome, Sept. 1.—Margherita, the Queen mother of Italy, has expressed her intention of touring the cathedral towns of England next Autumn in a motor car. She has also had in contemplation a motor trip through the United States. Her Majesty is, perhaps, the most ardent of all royal motorists. She pursues the recreation in spite of many adventures and several narrow escapes from serious injury. She has a passion for long-distance trips, but does not care for fast-going.

Her cars are most luxurious. The interiors are fitted with tables for six persons, armchairs and folding seats, and are lighted electrically. She has, in her favorite car, a silver image of the patron saint of automobilists, St. Christopher.

The image is surmounted by the royal arms and has a gold border with the inscription, composed by the Queen herself, "St. Christopher preserve us from the perils of the way and protect us in the incidents of the journey."

In August last year Her Majesty was thrown violently out of her car while returning from great St. Bernard at high speed. She miraculously escaped injury and showed great courage.

WOULD LYNCH COUNT; MUMMY IN GARBAGE

Ignorant Parisians Sure He Had Committed Murder and Thrown Body Away.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Paris, Sept. 1.—The Vicomte de Louvois has just had a narrow escape from lynching under curious circumstances. He had recently received from Egypt a case containing a mummy, with numerous trinkets, vases, pieces of cloth, etc., which had been found in its tomb.

As the Vicomte cares only about the historical objects which are found in the Egyptian tombs, and not at all about the bodies, unless they be those of exalted personages, he put the mummy back in the box and gave it to the ragpicker who daily overhauls his garbage, with the injunction to "take it out and bury it near the fortifications."

But the ragpicker was curious and opened the box before carrying it away. When he spied the body of a human being he was convinced the Vicomte had committed a crime. He called the police and a crowd gathered about the door of the nobleman's home, and would have lynched him could they have got inside.

The mysterious box was taken to the Commissaries, and the police had the greatest difficulty in persuading the crowd that the corpse was over a thousand years old and the Vicomte could scarcely be accused of participating in its death.

"ANTI-SMART SET" BAND STIRS LONDON

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Sept. 1.—An "Anti-Smart Set" movement has been started among the best circles of English society. It is headed by the young Duchess of Norfolk, a high-principled and fearless woman, who already has proved her fitness for the proud position of premier Duchess, which she gained by her marriage.

By a system of rigorous scrutiny into the records of those who appear on their visiting lists, hostesses who have joined the reforming movement will weed out the men and women who bear the taint of the "Smart Set."

A courageous step in this direction was taken by the Duke of Richmond a year or two ago, when he struck off his house party list for the Goodwood races the names of certain women whom his most illustrious guest, the King, wished to be invited. His Grace fell out of royal favor in consequence of this fastidiousness.

540 Miles on Car's Axle.

Paris, Sept. 1.—Jean Gourdamesen arrived in Paris by the Marseilles express, having made the 540-mile journey clinging to the axle-bars beneath one of the carriages. He was sent to prison for vagabondage.

WOMEN TERRORISTS LEAD IN ACTS WHICH ARE KEEPING CZAR IN FEAR

Russian Girl-Martyr and Princess She Impersonated.

YOUNG GIRLS FACE DEATH WITHOUT HESITATION.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 1.—Women are leading the terrorists in the acts of reprisal which are making the Czar a shivering prisoner in his palaces. The Russian autocracy is trembling in this crisis as it never did before. The Russian women who seek a constitutional government for their country and destruction of the absolute rule which has debased the land, stayed progress and committed deeds of cruelty shocking the world, are the leaders in the plots to destroy oppressors by explosions and by pistol shots.

The Russian autocrats have learned that the women revolutionists are even more fearless than the men. They slay boldly and with a reckless disregard of their own lives which has appalled the stoutest heart of the hated officials. They are not deterred by torture and the most revolting abuse. They strike swiftly, boldly, surely and to the death.

Police spies and the great army of government police have been ordered to exercise unremitting vigilance in tracking down every girl and woman who is even suspected of being friendly to the people's cause.

Girl Revolutionist Dies.

This and an error by a telegrapher led to the death on her father's doorstep of Tatiana Riabinen, the eighteen-year-old daughter of a rich land owner in the province of Samara. Like many Russian girls of high birth Mlle. Riabinen was involved in the revolutionary cause. When, two months ago, a bomb was thrown in the town of Kazan, the police fell upon a trail which indicated the complicity of several residents of Samara. The chief of the terrorists they believed was an elderly woman named Riabinen, who had spent most of her life in jail as a revolutionist. A telegram was promptly sent to Samara giving a list of seven persons who were to be arrested.

Among them was the name Riabinen. The telegraph operator transmitted it Riabinen. The Samara police, knowing that the Riabinens were liberals, went to their house and arrested the daughter Tatiana, the only woman at home at the time.

Having mixed herself up with the propaganda, Mlle. Riabinen showed no surprise at her arrest. She prepared to start, accompanied the police to the hall room, but suddenly drank from a phial of prussic acid and fell dead.

The girl knew of plots and reprisals in which she had had a hand and preferred death at once to the lingering tortures which would have followed the discovery of facts. Once behind the bars, even if innocent, no mercy would have been shown.

Another instance of martyrdom to freedom's cause is given by Marie Spiridonova, a beautiful, frail girl of eighteen. Wrought to intense indignation by the atrocities of an official named Lucenovsky, she boldly went to the Borisoglebsk railroad station, and while he was surrounded by Cossacks shot down the monster who had had peasants knouted to death, maimed and crippled, and girls horribly maltreated.

It was the treatment of this girl that profoundly stirred the soul of Maxim Gorky.

Braver Than Charlotte Corday.

Another fearless girl whose name is unknown, but who had a passport bearing that of Sophia Laronoff, shot and killed the infamous [illegible] Min in the Peterhof railroad station. She is believed by the police to be the woman suspected of taking into Premier Stolypin's house the bomb which tore off the feet of his daughter and slew more than thirty persons. The police say that a woman planned and executed this plot to strike fear into the heart of Czar Nicholas and all the Grand Dukes who are urging him to stand firm and stamp out revolution with steel and blood.

"What is my name?" repeated this fearless girl when subjected to police interrogation. "What does it matter? I can stand death and torture under one as well as another. You will find that my lips are sealed."

Barbara Prinz, daughter of Lieutenant-General Prinz, [illegible] a bomb into the palace of [illegible] General Klauberg at Odessa [illegible] a subordinate of the latter's daughter [illegible] authorities have suppressed the [illegible] of how she was captured. One [illegible] that she had the bomb in a [illegible] that it prematurely exploded, blowing [illegible] her hands. But it is not known [illegible] that this girl [illegible] of the bomb [illegible] been another young woman terrorist.

Autocrats Fear Women.

The military officers and officials are in such dread of women revolutionists that they treat all who give them offence with the ferocity of wild beasts. An instance is the [illegible] with whips of Anna Smirnoff, a d[illegible] of the city, whose only offence [illegible] derisive [illegible] at the hero [illegible] Chevalier Guard was marching [illegible] Nevsky Prospect. It is said that [illegible] in openly used by order of a [illegible] that his brutality was so great [illegible] common soldiers refused to inflict all the outrages he ordered the unhappy woman subjected to.

Many of the women revolutionists are noble. Posing as the Princess Marishkin, a woman tried [illegible] General Trepoff in June last. It was the fourth attempt to slay him. There are others who are selling jewels for the [illegible] to buy bombs and guns with which the peasants are to be armed when the signal [illegible] general uprising is given.

AUTOCRACY IS NOW TREMBLING AS NEVER BEFORE.

[illegible] Lunkov refused to pay taxes and [illegible] in the [illegible] to [illegible] and whom the governor [illegible] prison promptly imprisoned were liberated.

The [illegible] government views any demand [illegible] on the part of the people [illegible] supreme authority. Cossacks were sent into this village under the command of an official named Lukhovsky and this figure, with the face of a satyr and the heart of a wolf, began to pacify the rioters. Several men were knouted to death, many were maimed and crippled, women and girls were attacked.

Young, Innocent Girl.

Maria Spiridonova was a pretty girl of small stature whose young, warm heart was [illegible] acquainted with the filth and awe of life. She learned of the deeds of Lujenovsky. She took upon herself the role of Nemesis for in Russia this avenging goddess is an legal person.

When Lujenovsky stepped on the platform of the Borisoglebsk depot, the Cossacks who surrounded him began to disperse the [illegible] paid attention to the little fragile Spiridonova.

Three shots were heard. They were aimed with a firm hand. The corpulent body of Lujenovsky fell heavily to the ground. Every one was paralyzed; no one noticed whence the shots came. The crowd thought that the Cossacks were shooting and in a panic turned to flight.

"Shoot me!"

Then only did the Cossacks notice the little girl. She stood pressing the pistol to her temple. A Cossack felled her to the ground with a blow from the butt of his gun.

A Cossack officer, Abramov, sprang at her [illegible] the [illegible] lifted [illegible] and while with the [illegible] blows on her [illegible] little body violently [illegible] shouted to the [illegible]

[illegible] our force!" No [illegible]

Cossacks Attack Girl.

Then these strong brutes, armed men fell on the little, helpless body of the girl and began to break her bones. * * *

Abramov kicked her with his heavy boots. But not one sound escaped from the lips of the girl.

How she was tortured in the police station is awful to describe. A famous old [illegible] Johnson [illegible] [illegible] the naked and senseless body of the girl from one [illegible] to [illegible]. Even the Cossacks [illegible] [illegible] revolted by the [illegible] the girl [illegible] [illegible] was arrested [illegible] [illegible] martyr.

[illegible] but she was [illegible] [illegible] and was told [illegible]

GORKY TELLS OF A GIRL'S SUFFERING FOR FREEDOM

By Maxim Gorky.

Citizens of Free-Great America:

I will tell you a story of a Russian girl, Maria Spiridonova, a story of one of those thousands of Russian women who perish in the struggle for freedom like flowers in the fire.

The story is loathsome, it is terrible—it will shock you—you will startle with awe and loathing, but I say to you, I ask of you—open your hearts! No matter how loathsome the truth may be, honest men must know it.

And you women of America, you must know all [illegible] you may be proud of what you have achieved and are achieving in your country, but also that you may impress on your children still greater hatred of oppression of man by man, still deeper and [illegible] love for freedom.

BUILDING TRADES COUNCIL TO MARCH IN SEPARATE LINE

The Building Trades Council, which has marched in conjunction with the Central Labor Union and Knights of Labor District Assembly No. 30, original in former years, will march separately this year, with 22 organizations in line.

The Central Labor Union claims that the Building Trades Section is the only bonafide building trades central body in this city at present. It is asserted that the B. T. C. entered into an agreement with the Central Labor Union [illegible] whereby a building trades section of the C. L. U. should be organized July [illegible] include all the unions of the B. T. C. [illegible] were eligible and all the big [illegible] trades of the C. L. U. which were not connected with the B. T. C.

The B. T. C. [illegible] section it wishes more time to adapt itself to the new conditions.

[illegible] Thomas F. Keough will be chief marshal, and the formation will be as follows:

Delegates to the Council, carriage containing Masters Paul and Joseph Cash [illegible] carrying the banner of the organization; Woodworkers' Union No. 24, Insulator and Asbestos Workers' Union, Steamfitters' Helpers' Union, Painters District Council, Cement and Asphalt Workers' Union, Wood Wire and Metal [illegible] Marble Cutters and Setters' Union, [illegible] Slate and Tile Roofers [illegible] No. 15, [illegible] No. 9, The Layers Helpers [illegible] Wire Workers [illegible] Glass Workers Union [illegible] Writers Union, Boilermakers' Union No. 131 and Slate and Soapstone Workers' Union. An invitation is extended to every building craft that desires to parade with the Council.

The chief marshal will establish his headquarters at the north-east side of Berkeley and Boylston streets at 9 o'clock and the parade will move at 9.30 sharp. All organizations in passing in review before the Governor and Mayor will make the regulation salute. The chief marshal will review the parade at Adams square.

The route is as follows: Berkeley, to Dover, to Washington, to Eliot, to Park square, to Charles, to Beacon, to School, to Washington, to Adams square.

The annual lawn party in aid of the convent building fund of St. Peter's parish at Meeting House Hill, Dorchester, was held on the spacious grounds surrounding the parochial residence yesterday afternoon and evening, over three thousand people being present.

Anti-Piano Trust Sale

Swell Bargains This Week. In fixing a sacrifice or selling price on a piano for our weekly disposal sale the name of the maker has nothing whatever to do with the matter. One piano may be quoted at $450 by its maker in its own warerooms but when through force of uncontrolled circumstances it gets to our storage sales room it must bear the sacrifice tag just the same as the piano whose maker quotes its price at $250, $300 or $400. We play no favorites—the only one who wins is the bright and early customer at our sales.

We will say of the lot of Pianos to be put on sale Tuesday, September 4th, only this—It is a fine collection of new and second-hand Pianos of the best known makers, there is not a poor piano in the lot—When we tell you that the downtown piano dealers buy their own makes from us when they can, and resell them at so-called bargains in their stores at an advanced price you can imagine what a splendid bargain you will get if you get up here early in the week—Every piano tuned by our own expert and put into the finest condition before shipping to you. To Our Customers

Instead of asking for more of your trade this week we are going to make use of the columns of the AMERICAN to thank you for the most generous support you have given to our house and to its ideas.

The response which you made to our half page Labor Day announcement last Sunday has been more gratifying than you can well imagine.

We thought that our high tide mark of last Christmastime would hold the record until next December. But during the week just closing you have sent in more orders than we have received in any other three weeks in our history.

The pecuniary gain which comes with this growth of business does not mean so much to us as does the attendant satisfaction of knowing that our old friends are still with us and that we are making new friends in greater numbers as time goes on.

Kindly permit us to take this means of expressing our deep appreciation not only of your valued patronage, but also of your messages of thanks and good will.

Assuring you that we shall constantly aim to deserve your continued support, and again thanking you, we remain,

Yours very truly,

Harvard Oarsmen Make Nearly Record Time in Trial on the Thames

SPECIAL CABLE TO THE BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

Putney, Eng., Sept. 1.—The Harvard crew made a sensational practice row to-day in spite of the terrific heat, covering the full course in 18 minutes 50 seconds, which is just three seconds below the best record for the distance. Coach Wray and other occupants of the Harvard launch, which finished abreast the Crimson crew, claim that the time was 18:47, which would equal the record made by Cambridge in 1900.

The result of the fast time created consternation in the camp of the English oarsmen, while the American stock took a jump, and unless a slump in form occurs before the day of the race, Harvard will go to the starting point a hot favorite over the home boatmen.

Harvard's trial was done under the best possible conditions, with a full tide and a helpful wind. Cambridge only did a mile trial, covering the distance in four minutes three seconds, which was a record in itself. Harvard pulled an average of 34 strokes to the minute and finished up at 34.

The excellent form in which the Harvard men ended up their fast trip from Putney to Mortlake convinced the onlook ers that they could have done even better under pressure.

The beating which began two weeks ago on Cambridge came to a sudden stop, and the experts admit that they are in the dark now as to the probable winner, and Harvard has forced herself to be considered a dangerous factor in all regattas.

Many Americans who happened to witness the exhibition of the Harvard men showered them with congratulations and are confident that their fellow-countrymen will win next Saturday.

Captain Filley modestly said: "I thought the chances fairly good when I learned the crew had tied the record." Filley smiled his satisfaction and said: "This gives us a chance for a victory."

Trainer Wray before the trial, when he saw the water and tidal conditions were perfect, despite the intense heat, said

"If we don't do better than nineteen minutes I will be disappointed."

Harvard justified Wray's prediction by equalling the record time of the course. Wray said this evening:

"I am satisfied that if the conditions next Saturday are like to-day you will see the grandest race ever rowed on the Thames. If records are not smashed I am mistaken. Harvard's excellent form is bound to improve until the race. English rowing experts harshly criticise the Harvard method of rowing, also their boat, calling the latter a tub. To-day's trial is an answer to those critics perfect. I am convinced they will get a more emphatic answer Saturday."

Harvard crew's admirers are enthusiastic over the showing made by the Crimson oarsmen in their time trials on the Thames. So far the Yankees have shown better than Cambridge and all Americans hope they will keep up their fine work till after the race Saturday.

W. W. COE WAS STAR IN N. E. CHAMPIONSHIPS AT WOOD ISLAND PARK

The cream of New England athletes competed in the track and field championships at Wood Island Park yesterday and struggled for the gold and silver medals which went to the winners.

Several prominent athletes entered in the flats, including W. W. Coe, the world's champion shot-putter; Bob Leavitt, the Olympic and intercollegiate champion hurdler, Ellery Clark, the record-breaking champion, and H. E. Kirsburg of Harvard, the intercollegiate champion hammer-thrower.

The games were run off with a dollar-fol dispatch through the agency of a line of officials and the hustling of the Hon. Joseph Macehe, president of the A. A. U., who directed the sport.

The fields were not large in any of the events, but each contained the best timber in this section of athletic territory.

Coe Was Biggest Winner.

Champion Coe was the biggest winner of the day, taking first honors in the shot-put and throwing the 56-pound weight, taking both with ease. Bob Leavitt of the B. A. A. would have signalled Coe in capturing two prizes, but he suffered a tumble in the high hurdles when he was in front and he had a chance only for low honors.

One of the best performances was that of Tom Cronan of South Boston, the Harvard representative, who leaped 23 feet 4½ in the broad jump.

The 5-mile race developed a fast run ner in Burns, a tandaan, who is practically a new comer on the track. When Starter Hugh McGrath sent the men away they settled down to beat the pace set by Lawrence in the lead. Hicks, the winner of the World's Fair 10-mile run and the Chicago 25-mile run this Summer, was one of the starters, but he dropped out after going a mile. Welton set the pace, closely followed by Lee of Somerville and Burns hanging on. This pair pulled away from the field, and on the last mile had the track to themselves with Dick Grant, the old Harvard distance runner, and Stanley of Roxbury. Grant was too far in the rear to catch the leaders, and Brewster was equally in the rear.

Burns Spurted to Front.

On the last lap Burns spurted to the front, followed by Lee, but Welton could not respond and fell back while Burns opened up a small gap on Lee, going to the tape.

Ford of Harvard had won the hundred without much trouble, but he was forced to take second to Ricsert of Tufts in the last half of the distance.

Front of the St. Joseph's and Robbins of the Cambridgeport Gym. had a hot finish in the quarter mile and the former only won by a scant yard.

Ellery Clark, the veteran of the track, secured second place in the hammer and 512-lb pound weight and pulled a third in the high jump. The summary:

100-yard dash—First heat—Won by F. J. W. Ford, Harvard; second, William Taylor, St. Anthony A. A.; third, Joseph Cassidy. Second heat—Won by John A. Connolly, Roxbury High; second, H. G. SHAW RIDES ELECTIONEER HOME FIRST IN GREAT $50,000 FUTURITY

Special to Boston Sunday American.

Race Track, Sheepshead Bay, N. Y., Sept 1—Billy Lakeland's Electioneer won the classic Futurity to-day, beating Pope Joan in one of the greatest horse races ever seen on the historic course. De Mund, on whom the Ruineys wagered thousands, ran third.

Then Pope Joan came along with a great burst of speed and got a couple of a lead so with the major part of the $50,000 purse.

Coupled with Pope Joan were Peter Pan (127 pounds) and Ballot (122 pounds), the latter only taking first choice at 5 to 1. Peter Pan was a 6 to 1 shot. De Mund, the colt for which Basil Shaw paid $15,000 to Newton Bennington last Spring. A blanket could have covered the first three youngsters.

It was a grand contest and one which will live long in the memory of the 50,000 spectators, who stood on the stand and cheered themselves hoarse during the rapidly pulsating heats scrambled the winner.

Shaw's Great Ride.

Pope Joan and Thomas Hitchcock, Jr.'s Corvisle showed the way to the elbow, where they fell back to the main division in a long, stern stretch run Shaw came on the outside with Electioneer under his inimitable hand ride. Yard by yard he made up on the pacemakers, until within the last half dozen yards, where he sailed the leaders to his winning off on the last couple of strides.

Lakeland also made up ground in the final stages, and it was a staggering finish for second honors between Hildreth and Pope Joan. The judges decided in favor of the latter only after considerable deliberation.

Despite the fact of the well played Keene entry having been defeated, a tumultuous demonstration followed the finish. Women screamed their delight, while thousands of men crowded around the stewards' stand to cheer Jockey Shaw and the busy Lakeland party. The band played "Dixie" and struck up "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

In the paddock Lakeland was almost overwhelmed by his fellow trainers. In a spectative way the horsemakers lost heavily for Electioneer was anything but a handsome winner. Joan A Gates had a goodly representation on, while Chas. O'Brien won a fortune, probably $100,000 went to the friends of Lakeland and the clique of big operators in the confidence of the owner.

Lakeland's share of the Futurity purse is $34,800, a life's competency for the average man. After leading Electioneer away to the paddock Lakeland broke down while petting his neck the old owner talked away a few salty tears, and another fusillade of handshakes and congratulations followed. Ruiney, worth $40,000,000, and F. J. Keene is worth a heap of coin, proportions, congratulated Lakeland shortly after a friend of Lakeland's owner suggested "Well you won't win a Futurity, after all."

NOLAN TRIES TO FIND OUT GANS' WEIGHT; FAILS

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Goldfield, Nev., Sept. 1—A quiet kept crippled up and down Goldfield's Main when Billy Nolan's latest effort to relieve his anxiety about Joe Gans's weight fell flat. Nolan went to the rooms of Jim Coffroth in the hope of getting some information, but was promptly ejected by Coffroth's trainer.

Crack Bikers Start Long Grind To-night at Beach

At 12 05 to-night the big twenty four-hour bicycle race at the Revere Cycle Track will get under way with three teams of three riders fighting for the most mileage in the long journey.

The track will be opened at 10 o'clock and a big crowd will give the pluggers a great sendoff a few minutes after midnight. Such a monotony-ending race behind pace is an innovation and the event is the first ever attempted. The riders realize the heavy strain they will be obliged to endure and have mapped themselves as it they were preparing for a six-day grind.

The New York trio, composed of John and Menus Bedell and Connolly, stands well with the pickers for first place. They have been doing road work in preference to track sprinting, knowing from past experience at Madison Square Garden what they are up against.

All the best confidence will be bestowed upon the American and Irish teams. The former is made up of Hugh MacLean, Will Stinson and McDonald, while Jimmy Moran brings in Hibernian Al Gilmer Bergen and Fat Logan as pace setters.

It will be a race when Moran and MacLean meet on the track, and there will be no lack of lively scrappings as they try to put each other off. The race will be won by the survival of the strongest, as the top speed will behind the motors for such a long distance will easily determine the weakling.

NORCROSS CLASS CHAMPS.

The Norcross Class and the Breen Class of the Church League, played the final game of the season at Franklin Field yesterday, the Norcross Class winning by the score of 8 to 2.

BEVERLY WINS FROM WAKEFIELD

[illegible] six passes. But of the passes three were deliberate. He allowed [illegible] but not more than one safety was made in any inning except in the sixth, when the Bostons earned their only run on Parent's three [illegible] single.

[illegible] struck out [illegible] Powers [illegible] hand and coached the [illegible] His throwing was [illegible] half dozen who [illegible] second.

Harris's Work Grand.

But if Coombs's record was wonderful, that of Harris was not far from it. From the third inning, when [illegible] he allowed the Athletics to [illegible] first run up to the twenty-fourth [illegible] is for twenty innings not [illegible] off his delivery [illegible] not more than one [illegible] recorded against [illegible] visitors had [illegible] fanned sixteen men and the further the game went the better he seemed to grow. But at last he weakened and in came the winning runs.

In the sixth [illegible] relieved Carrigan [illegible] great headwork [illegible] the Athletics [illegible] feetive. He [illegible] men in the last nine innings [illegible] two bases on balls during [illegible]

The [illegible] Freddie Parent was everywhere, and some of his plays were the kind you read about. Ferris was there with a [illegible] or two, and Morgan made some clever assists.

Fun Started at 1:30.

It was intended to [illegible] double header and the fun started at [illegible] o'clock but that first game lasted [illegible] hours and it was quit [illegible] The crowd was so great that [illegible] A hit into the crowd was good for two bases.

It was one, two, three in the first inning. [illegible] Harris [illegible] with a two-base [illegible] was left on third on Hoey's sacrifice [illegible] and out and on an attempted steal and Morgan's grounder to Murphy.

In the [illegible] with one down, Coombs was [illegible] Hoey [illegible] and Coombs scored. Boston [illegible]

Murphy singled in the fourth, with one out but was doubled with Cross on a grounder to Ferris. In Boston's half Stahl walked and stole after Parent had fanned, but [illegible] and Hoey was easy for Murphy and Davis.

Carrigan [illegible] the fifth with two down [illegible] Harris [illegible] Hartsel led off with a single in the sixth, Lord sacrificed, but Parent threw out the next two [illegible] retiring the side with a phenomenal stop and throw.

Tied It Up in the Sixth.

Powers led off [illegible] Coombs fooled him. Hartsel popped [illegible] Coombs stole, [illegible] was out, Ferris to Grim. In Boston's half Harris singled with one down and took second on Hayden's out, but Parent fanned.

[illegible] three for both sides [illegible] Cross [illegible] walked but the next three [illegible] outs.

Knight Hit Safely.

[illegible] twelfth, with two out, Knight hit safely to right. The ball bounced over [illegible] head into the crowd for three bases. Powers closed the inning by batting [illegible] or Hoeff. Stahl led off with [illegible] Boston's half. Ferris sacrificed [illegible] fanned. Grimshaw was passed [illegible] and Morgan struck out.

for Carrigan and Coombs served [illegible] balls [illegible] and dribbled it to Coombs, who threw him out. Then Harris fanned.

Missed a Good Chance.

In the [illegible] Parent singled with one out, but Stahl popped to Murphy and Ferris flied to Hartsel.

The Athletics went out in order in the seventeenth. For Boston Grimshaw singled after Hoey was retired. Morgan flied to Hartsel and Criger was thrown out by Murphy.

Knight led off in the 18th with a single to left, but two force outs and a fly to Stahl retired the side. Boston had another fine chance to win in its half. Harris fouled out. Hayden walked and Parent singled to right sending Hayden to third. Stahl was [illegible] and then Coombs struck out Ferris and Hoey.

In the [illegible] the visitors went out in order and [illegible] the Bostons failed again to bat in the winning run. Grimshaw was safe on Murphy's fumble and Morgan [illegible] But Criger flied to Lord and Harris fanned.

In the twentieth Knight singled and [illegible] with two down, but Powers fanned. [illegible] with a single to left, but was [illegible] to stretch it on a close play. [illegible] out and Stahl was hit by a pitched ball. Ferris hit weakly to Coombs.

One, Two, Three in 21st.

In the twenty-first it was one, two, three for Philadelphia. Hoey led off with a hit, but was out stealing, and the next two were easy.

[illegible] doing for Philadelphia in the [illegible] second. Hayden singled after two [illegible] out [illegible] Powers got him stealing. In the twenty third Knight made his fifth safe hit, but he died stealing. Boston went out in order.

Coombs fanned in the twenty-fourth. Hartsel singled to centre and stole. Lord fanned. Schreck lined a single, which [illegible] Seybold hit into the right field crowd for three bases and Murphy

DETROIT, 3; ST. LOUIS, 0.

Detroit, Sept. 1.—St. Louis was helpless before Siever's masterly pitching to-day, and Detroit won, 3 to 0. The game abounded in brilliant fielding, in which Sam Thompson, Detroit's 1887 veteran, actually carried off the honors, retiring the side in the fourth on three consecutive catches, all of them hard and one of them sensational. The batting of Crawford and Coughlin were prominent factors in Detroit's success. Score:

FINE AUTO TOUR FROM THE HUB TO WORCESTER.

Best of Roads All the Way, and Direct Route From Boston to New York.

The run from Boston to Worcester is one of the most popular of those around Boston. It is one much sought by those who desire to spend a pleasant day touring over the best of roads, and then again it is popular owing to its being on the direct touring route from Boston to New York, and fashionable Lenox and the Berkshires.

It is conceded as one of the best routes so far as road conditions are concerned, owing to the prevalence of macadam. The start is made at the junction of the three roads, [illegible] street, Common-wealth [illegible] extension across the railroad bridge at Cottage Farms, and direct to the garage, where the left turn is made. The road runs direct over the hills with the hill climbing hill to the right, by Chestnut Hill Reservoir, through Auburndale and alongside Norumbega.

At the top of the hill a mile beyond with a greenhouse on the left is the road to Saxonville. Do not turn to the right passing through Sudbury, cross two railroad tracks and continue direct over fine macadam roads past the Wayside Inn, and continue to end of the macadam roads. At the junction of two roads at the end of boulevard, follow the right to Marlboro, the left road being known as the back road to Worcester.

Through Marlboro.

ARCHIE HAHN RUNS AT EAGLES' GAMES

He has been in steady training at his home in the West for the event, and is in prime shape to make a record performance.

Charlie Seitz of the N. Y. A. C.; Harry Hillman, the noted hurdler, Paul Pilgrim, the Olympic champion at 880 yards and 440 yards, Hessing, Penn's intercollegiate champion half miler, Rogers, the Western crack and Saunders, the Iowa star, are in town and ready to compete.

A large attendance at the games is promised by John J. McCarthy, chairman of the athletic committee, at this best set of outdoor amateur games in the East this season.

NEPONSET WINS AGAIN.

At Nightingale Field, Dorchester, yesterday the strong Neponset team added another game to their long list of victories by defeating the strong St. Alphonsus team to the tune of 8 to 2. Newell, the Amherst star box artist, again acquitted himself well, allowing the visitors four scattered hits, and with the aid of proper support would have scored a clean shut out. The score:

Timely Stick Work Gives Lawrence Boys Game Over Lynn in Tenth

Special to Boston Sunday American.

Lynn, Sept. 1.—After tying Lawrence in the last half of the ninth Lynn lost in the eleventh, when two doubles by Lake and Fulmer netted the winning run. Lynn was retired in order in her closing inning.

Opportune batting, aided by good base running and poor fielding behind Burton, gave the game to Lawrence. With the score 4 to 2 against them and two down in the ninth, Lynn tied the score by a double by Clark and hits by Pastor and Bannon amid a pandemonium of the fans. Umpire Hastings, at whose hands Lynn fared so badly yesterday at Worcester, failed to make his appearance, and Frank Sullivan, formerly umpire in the league, was agreed on. Billet's batting and fielding were the features of the game. The score:

Haverhill, Sept. 1.—Haverhill played her last home game of the season this afternoon and after Fall River had apparently won in a close game the locals landed on Gilroy hard and [illegible] in five runs which gave them the game. WORCESTER WON TWO.

Worcester, Sept. 1.—Worcester took a double header from Manchester this afternoon. The first game was a pitchers' battle between Sline and O'Toole up to the eighth inning, when Burkett doubled with two men on bases, scoring these, and later tallying himself. The second game was easy for Worcester and was a batting affair on the part of Worcester. Cutting started to pitch, but in the sixth he was forced to retire, after a fusillade of two-baggers. He was replaced by Phelan, who fared no better, and who in turn gave way to Eustace. Zacher and Burkett swapped places because the sun bothered the former. The score:

GILCHRIST DEFEATS HARVARD CHURCH

Gilchrist defeated the strong Harvard Church nine on the Dunbar avenue grounds, Dorchester, yesterday afternoon, by the score of 8 to 7. It was anyone's game up to the ninth, when Gilchrist scored three runs, cinching the game.

The features were the pitching of Alberti for the Harvard Church, who held the Gilchrist men without a hit, and not a man reaching first. H. Slade played a good game in the field, catching four hard flies. The features for Gilchrist were the all round playing of Councilman Beatty at short, he making a pretty double play, and scooping up several difficult grounders, and the batting of Trusdale, and Faulkner. "I EXPECT TO WIN AGAIN"--NELSON.

GOLDFIELD, Nev., Sept. 1.—I realize that this is not going to be any pink tea session and I have plenty of respect for Gans's science. I have been up against the science game before, however, and have discounted it with a few good punches. I expect to repeat. Everyone says that Gans has a yellow streak. If he has I am going to show it up before the fifth round.

quarters just after the Dane had finished his afternoon's work. Nolan was discoursing to a group of newspaper men on his knowledge of the rules governing prize ring contests of to-day, and explaining why he was right in his contention about the negro weighing in at the ringside in his fighting togs. In the midst of this a member of the party bluntly asked Nolan if he would weigh Nelson before the newspaper reporters this afternoon.

"I certainly will not," said Nolan. Then, after a moment's hesitation Billy continued: "But I'll tell you what I will do, if Gans will agree. I'll have Nelson at an appointed place to weigh before the public if Gans will weigh at the same time and on the same scales. Not only that, but I'll agree to do the same from now until Monday. I believe it is due to the public, and I'll weigh my man in public if Gans will. I won't use Sullivan's scales, nor will I use my own. The weighing will be done on the club's scales. Isn't that a fair proposition?"

Several of those present smiled, but the proposition was later put up to Gans at his quarters.

"Nolan must be worried some when he would go to that length to see me on the scales," said Gans. "Just tell Mr. Nolan for me that I will weigh in at 12 o'clock Monday, and not before. And tell him not to lose any more sleep. I'll be at weight."

Thus it was that Nolan was openly accused along the line of another attempt to learn the actual condition of the Dane's opponent.

Betting Not Lively.

The betting is not by any means lively. There seems to be plenty of money in the pool room boxes, but most of the Gans coin is waiting for 8 to 10, and likewise the Nelson people are hanging on for 10 to 8. Tex Rickard's big place had $4,000 Gans money in hand to-night, $2,000 of which Tex put up himself for Gans, the negro giving him a mortgage on his share of the gate receipt as security.

Most of this money was still waiting at 10 to 8, with few takers in small amounts. This condition prevailed at other places, although there was apparently plenty of Nelson money to be bet at 10 to 7. The odds posted at Rickard's place were as follows:

Five hundred to five hundred or any part on Gans, $2,000 to $1,000 or any part on Gans, $700 to $1,000 or any part on Nelson, Gans 7 to 10, Nelson 5 to 4.

These odds prevail also in a few private bets. The mutuals, although not showing any large number of individual takers, have Gans favorite on the line from 6 to 10 and 11 to 13, and Nelson first choice in 16 to 20 and 21 to 25.

Numerous bets, running from $100 to $500, were in the hands of private stake holders. Outside of the main event, Clifford and Lundie, the participants in the preliminary, are making many friends, and no doubt considerable money will be bet on this bout. Each man seems to have numerous followers.

Advance Guard on Hand.

The advance guards of the sporting fraternity, East and West, is already on the scene. More are arriving on every train. Martin Brady, Tom Mulqueen and Eddy Graney, referee and horseshoer, were among the day's Western arrivals.

The town is already full of strange people, and the big crowd is not expected until Sunday. It is difficult now to secure hotel accommodations. To-morrow's influx will probably fill the remaining space, and there is rich promise that Sunday and Monday's arrivals will have to take to the tents pitched in the suburbs.

HARNESS HORSE STARS MEET IN CUP RACES.

All preparations have been completed for the great inter-city matinee of amateur driving clubs at Readville to-morrow and Tuesday afternoons. Over 120 entries of the fastest horses owned by the clubs in New York, Cleveland, Pittsburg, Syracuse, Chicago, Memphis, Boston, etc., have been received for the thirteen races scheduled the two days.

While for club members the feature of the meet will be the 2:09 trot for the $1,000 cup, the speed event will be the free-for-all pace to-morrow, in which the contestants are the fastest lot of pacers that have ever started in a race since the history of the wagon racing.

Stars Are Entered.

The entries for this class are Blacklock, trial of 2:01½, for whom C. K. G. Billings recently paid $12,500, and such an expert judge of speed as Ed. Geers, says is the coming pacing champion of the world; Angus Pointer, 2:02¾, owned by Senator George E. Whitney of Enfield, N. H.; Anthony N. Brady's Morning Star, 2:04¾; Baron Grattan, 2:04¾, the property of Frank Jones of Memphis, and King Direct, 2:05¼, owned by James Butler of New York. The prize for the winner is a $600 cup.

The best amateur drivers in the whole country will be seen at the meet. At the head of the list is Harry K. Devereux, president of the Cleveland Club. Frank Jones of Memphis is cool, fearless and a good track general. C. K. G. Billings, besides being a reinsman of the first class, is the most conspicuous amateur in the world, largely by virtue of his ownership of Lou Dillon and Major Delmar. At one time Mr. Billings owned both Morning Star and Angus Pointer, both of which will compete to-morrow in the free for all pace.

A. E. Perren of New York, who will drive Promise for the $1,000 cup, is another reinsman that has made his mark in the amateur wagon contests of the principal driving clubs. Among the skilful Boston amateur drivers who will be prominent are C. H. Belledeu, Frank G. Hall, Charles Sanders and G. F. Leonard. Arnold Lawson, who has been the leader in the club's affairs, will not start any of his horses in the intercity matinee.

Headquarters at Adams House.

Headquarters for the visitors, which will also be a bureau of information, has been established at the Adams House, where rooms 101 and 102 have been reserved by the Boston Gentlemen's Driving Club. The rooms will be at the disposal of the visitors on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

On Monday evening an elaborate banquet will be tendered the visiting horse owners, of whom over a hundred are already in town, in the large hall under the grandstand at the Readville track. This was picked as the most suitable place for the hearing of the after dinner speeches, as none of the rooms in the club house are large enough for the occasion.

The executive committee of the Boston Club wish the general public to know that the grandstand on the two days of the matinee meeting will be open to them free of cost. This explanation seemed necessary, as during the Grand Circuit meeting just closed, there was an added charge to those wishing seats in the stand, which caused the strongest sort of kicking by the sufferers.

The programme for to-morrow, outside of the free-for-all pace, is the 2:25 trot, 2:19 pace, 2:12 trot, 2:09 trot, 2:10 pace, and 2:17 trot.

PRESIDENT PROBABLY SEE MARBLEHEAD RACES

To-morrow morning at 11:10 o'clock, providing there is sufficient wind, the first race in the Roosevelt cup, German-American series will be sailed over a twelve or fifteen mile course, starting five miles outside of Marblehead harbor, off half-way rock, at the entrance to Salem Bay. There are six yachts entered, three German and the same number of American yachts. The cup will go to the owner of the yacht which first wins three races or wins the fifth of the series. Should a decision not be reached in the fifth race, owing to two yachts each having won twice, a sixth and deciding race will be sailed. All boats are sailed by natives born of the country their craft represent.

While at first it was regarded as improbable, the chances now point very strongly to the fact that President Roosevelt will witness at least one of the races this week. On account of the great naval parade at Oyster Bay the nation's chief presented his regrets to the regatta committee when an invitation was extended to him. As he stands sponsor for the trophy, his presence would have given even more weight to the races. He has practically decided to leave for Bar Harbor toward the end of [illegible] week on board the Sylph in which case he will unofficially witness part of the series. All details of his visit have been kept from publication.

Races Will Start To-morrow.

The races will start to-morrow. The second will be on Wednesday and other follow Thursday, Saturday, Monday and Tuesday if necessary. The time limit is six hours.

All six [illegible] have been hauled out at Marblehead [illegible] past four days or more [illegible] painted, leaded, rubbed and smoothed, varnished and looked after very carefully. They have been weighed and measured and found to be [illegible] the prescribed limits although [illegible] was shorn of some thirty-nine [illegible] after being weighed and just [illegible].

Last night the Vim, Auk and Caramba, the American defenders, were sent overboard once [illegible]. To-day they will get a good bath [illegible]. The German craft were not so lucky, as they were only taken out of the water on Friday and there has not been time enough for the smoothers to get their [illegible] and add the coat of varnish desired. They will all be put over this morning. All are now ready to be towed to the starting line in the best condition that [illegible] can place them.

The prevailing [illegible] seems to be that the American boats will win out if the air is light. In a few of the brushes that have taken place in Marblehead harbor, though they have been very few on account of the fact that the Eastern Yacht Club requested American yachtsmen to refrain from indulging in any scraps with the visitors, the Marblehead boats have managed to draw ahead of the visiting craft. It is true the boats have not been Sonders that have raced with the Germans, but these in turn have been tried out with our Sonders and the line has been made that way.

The German yachtsmen have proved themselves very thorough sportsmen, courteous, companionable and interesting, and have been entertained extensively about the North Shore. They dislike to commit themselves when approached about the outcome of the races. The nearest any of the thirteen visitors has come to expressing an opinion is contained in the following interview with Commander Hebbinghaus, naval attache of the German legation in Washington, who said to an AMERICAN reporter yesterday:

German Boats Want Breeze.

"Our boats, I believe, are better all round and they want a breeze."

Herr Wustrau, who is to sail the Wannsee, when approached, shrugged his shoulders and declined to give any relative opinion as to the outcome. He said, however:

"It's hard to form an opinion when [illegible] boats have ever had the shortest kind of a spin together. We have tried our own boats out thoroughly and [illegible] VI is much the better heavy weather boat. She won the Emperor's [illegible] at Kiel before coming over here and did that in a heavy wind. Between the Gluckauf and the Wannsee there is little choice. We hardly know ourselves which is the better boat."

The other German visitors are just as noncommittal.

After the races next week President Roosevelt will entertain the crews of all six boats and also the regatta committee of the Eastern Yacht Club at Oyster Bay.

On September 6 yachts in the harbor will dress ship late in the afternoon, and in the evening they will illuminate. A reception for the German yachtsmen will be held the same evening.

Two courses have been laid out, one being a triangle two and a half miles to the leg, over which the yachts will sail twice, making fifteen miles, and the second a windward or leeward course of three miles to a leg, over which the yachts will sail twice, making a total distance of twelve miles. Six or eight revenue cutters will patrol the course, and masters and owners of excursion and pleasure boats are enjoined to strict observance to the rules for the races.

A clear space of half mile about the starting line will be maintained, and no boats other than those flying the patrol flag will be allowed within. In the triangle [illegible] will be divided into two [illegible] points [illegible] and left of the direction of the wind. The space enclosed will be a right angle and will be reserved for the competing yachts.

THOMAS FAVORITE OVER MELLODY IN BIG BOUT.

Cleverness never won one nickel for either James Mellody of Charlestown or Joe Thomas of Frisco, and those expert in the game of jabs, swings and jolts anticipate a whirlwind of action and heavy punishment when this great pair of welterweights go into the Lincoln A. C. ring in Pythian Rink to-morrow night, ready to battle fifteen rounds at a killing pace.

Action is what made both of these fighters famous to fight goers. If [illegible] to box, they simply would give [illegible] account of themselves [illegible] [illegible] of this type [illegible] and if the Nelson-Gans bout was a matter of history, the eyes of the sporting world would be centred on Chelsea to-morrow night.

Thomas the Favorite.

Thomas is the favorite in the betting but the friends of Melody are so eager to get down on the short end it is likely that the speculation will be even money at the ringside. The dope is just as difficult to the local sports as it is to pick a winner in the lightweight championship contest between Gans and Nelson.

The "regulars" are placing their money on Gans and Thomas. Sentiment alone is said to be the cause for most of the bets that have been placed on Honey. Probably no fighter in the East has such a loyal band of followers [illegible].

Big Crowd Expected.

An overflow meeting of members is expected. Already Miah Murray has received enough applications [illegible] fill the rink, and each mail brings in scores of names of new members who are desirous of witnessing this contest.

The club has made arrangements with the Western Union for a leased wire which will run direct to the ringside. The big fight at Goldfield will be finished before the preliminaries go on at Chelsea but in order [illegible] rink will open at 8 o'clock.

ST. JOHN'S BEAT SALEM.

Salem, Sept. 1.—The St. John's defeated Salem at the Fair Grounds in Peabody to-day in the second game of the series. Maroney pitched [illegible] outpointing his opponent. [illegible] home run was over right field. The teams will meet [illegible] Monday.

FIGHT RETURNS AT PALACE.

A big army of ring fans will attend the performance at the Palace Theatre to-morrow night to get [illegible] of big Gans-Nelson fight [illegible]. Manager Charley Waldron, who is a great fight fan himself, has made arrangements for a direct wire [illegible] round [illegible] will deliver [illegible] as soon as they come in and with the regular burlesque show, the evening should be an entertaining one for the multitude of boxing enthusiasts who are bound to attend.

PROVIDENCE TEAM DEFEATS SKEETERS

Providence, Sept. 1.—Effective pitching by Poole and costly errors by Beane at short gave Providence the game with Jersey City to-day by the score of 6 to 2. The score:

STRUCK UMPIRE IN FACE.

Fitchburg, Mass., Sept. 1.—The Philadelphia Giants (champion colored team of world) defeated Fitchburg to-day in a very interesting game, 7 to 4. Feature of the game was hitting of Hill, Foster, Wilson and Russell. A riot nearly took place [illegible] ninth when Wilson struck umpire in the face for deciding a close play against him. The crowd rushed at the colored men, but the police saved them.

ST. JOSEPH'S FIELD DAY TO-MORROW

There have been many most enjoyable and successful field days in the history of St. Joseph's Parish, Belmont, but the coming one to-morrow promises to eclipse every preceding event, ever since these elaborate outdoor festivals have been an annual occurrence. The Rev. Nicholas J. Murphy, pastor, is at the forefront as usual in the preparations, and has planned with the greatest care for the pleasure and entertainment of all who attend.

The Field Day will be held on the Harris estate, Beach st., in that town. Games and athletic contests of all kinds for young and old and for which beautiful and valuable prizes are offered, will be in progress all day. The tug-of-war between the A. O. H., the town and the John F. Leonard teams will be intensely interesting. Great rivalry exists between the Lawrence A. A. baseball team and the St. Joseph's of Belmont. The Irish jaunting car with amusing Jarvies will be a feature of the outdoor merriment.

There will be an Irish village scene with the jig and reel dancing of the old heather fields of Ireland, with the piper and the fiddler in all the glory of their calling.

The electrical display in the evening will surpass all previous exhibitions in this line. The Festival will begin at 9 a. m. and continue till 11 p. m. Belmont and Waverley cars run close to the grounds.

VANDERBILT CUP CAR TO BE GIVEN PUBLIC TEST AT ATLANTIC CITY RACES

By J. C. KERRISON.

The [illegible] test of any of the American [illegible] at the Atlantic [illegible] the [illegible] can be given [illegible]. It is also [illegible] to see [illegible] just to see what power [illegible] she may possess. This [illegible] candidates. It is to be regretted that none of the other American candidates are not nominated for any of the specials at the beach tournament.

Twelve-Cylinder Experiment.

There is reason to believe that although having constructed a twelve-cylinder engine the Maxwell Company will be content to [illegible] Vanderbilt on [illegible] reasons for this. It must be [illegible] the twelve-cylinder [illegible] experiment and [illegible] much rather take [illegible] one to [illegible] month on the [illegible] thorough tryout [illegible] manifestly unfair [illegible]

What [illegible] there is no [illegible] will do their [illegible] possible that [illegible] to win and the other [illegible] This brings [illegible] the fact that the only other firms entering more than one car for the elimination are the Thomas and the Frayer-Miller people. Two foreign drivers will be included in the Thomas team and one American.

Surprises at Ardennes.

In the recent Ardennes race two of the teams sprang a surprise. Each had more than one car entered, so a division was made, under the terms of which a part of the team was sent to win first place and the other portion merely to finish the course. [illegible] one instance the man who was [illegible] and the [illegible] not finish.

In the elimination this little piece of generalship will unquestionably be copied by two of the [illegible] It is reasonable to suppose that [illegible] two French [illegible] and Mon[illegible] Roberts will get a [illegible] This [illegible] assumption that [illegible] more chances, drive [illegible] and take less ca[illegible] Roberts. It is the [illegible] to sacrifice everything [illegible] a car to the very finish [illegible] any regard to the signs of [illegible] trouble that the [illegible] may make.

Roberts More Careful.

On the other hand, Roberts, who has proven himself by his work in the elimination of a year ago a good driver and a [illegible] general, will certainly drive with care and judgment. Therefore, it is ar[illegible] will have a better chance of get[illegible] on the American team.

[illegible] who have given the matter any great consideration are satisfied that the Thomas will be represented on the team, likewise the Pope-Toledo, the Locomobile, and the other two places will it is believed go to the Maxwell, Oldsmobile or the Haynes.

The winning of the elimination means as much to the fortunate one as does the final victory race itself. It means that the car capturing that special contest will be considered as the speediest of American products. More so than it did a year ago. Then the cars went but a portion of the distance of the race, and certain place winners in the trials were later eliminated by the racing board.

This year it will be self-elimination, and the five cars going to full distance and in the best time will be awarded the honor of representing this country in the final [illegible] It had its precedent a year ago, when Joe Tracy in the Locomobile drove [illegible] under instructions from A. R. Riker and got third position. In the trials Tracy drove much the same way and if memory serves me right won the elimination.

The Oldsmobile and the Maxwell en[illegible]trants for the Vanderbilt have already been described in these columns. The latest information relative to the Pope-Toledo, which will be driven by Herbert Lytle, is that it is of 120 horse power, four cylinder, twin heads, cast integral individual copper water jackets for each pair of cylinders, ignition by gear-driven magneto.

The car is fitted with multiple disc clutch, running in oil, with a selective type of transmission, four speeds forward and one reverse. The valves are mechanically operated by means of a system of walking beams in the head, with one set of four cams and four push rods. This description tallies exactly with the description of the stock touring car for next year, with the exception that the stock touring car will have a wheel base of 115 inches, whereby the wheel base of the racer is only 104 inches.

This is the first racing car ever built by the Pope factory with a four-speed transmission. The regular stock touring car next year will be fifty horsepower, and the racer herein described develops fully 120 horsepower.

Car Cost $25,000.

The estimated cost of this car is $25,000. This is not at all surprising, inasmuch as all the steel construction throughout is chrome nickel steel. Even such parts as the frame, sprockets, chain, axles, etc., are made of this very expensive and highly efficient material. This not only insures great strength in wearing qualities, but by reason of its unusual strength, permits of a lighter construction than could otherwise be obtained. This is not an unimportant consideration as the rules of the Vanderbilt Cup [illegible] prohibit the weight [illegible] contesting car to be in excess of 2,204 pounds. [illegible] therefore not a few of the cars have been prevented from entering [illegible] overweight.

PERCY PIERCE IS REAL AMATEUR.

[illegible] season put it in his [illegible] for Percy H. Pierce to make a [illegible] which is an interesting piece of [illegible] he was an amateur [illegible] the trade. His [illegible] George N. DRIVERS OF FIVE CARS IN THE VANDERILT CUP RACE.

WHY HOTCHKISS CARS DIDN'T START IN RACE

The reason the Hotchkiss cars did not take in the Circuit des Ardennes race, it is said, was because the makers were trying to reduce their weight so as to allow them to use detachable rims in the Vanderbilt Cup race. Incidentally the Luxemburg authorities imposed a tax of $40 per car on the machines taking part in the Ardennes race.

FEWER REGISTRATIONS MADE BY MOTORISTS IN BAY STATE PAST WEEK

There was an appreciable falling off in the number of automobile registrations during the past week, when eighty-seven registrations were recorded. This is the smallest number recorded in any one week since April. The list shows fourteen visitors from other States; that several old machines have changed hands, and that there seems to be a healthy condition of business in up-to-date machines. The new list is as follows:

16,431—William Naismith, 78 Collins street, Woonsocket, R. I., Stevens runabout.
16,432—Elie L. Peutert, 10 West Thirtieth street, New York, White touring car.

LONG RUN MADE IN LITTLE CAR

Walter W. Wilson and wife of Syracuse, N. Y., arrived in Boston Tuesday morning from Syracuse, New York, in a little one-cylinder Reo runabout, making the 352 miles and all the hills in the Berkshire district in three and one-half days without a breakdown or a puncture. They spent the week touring about the North Shore, besides trips to Gloucester and other beaches of interest, and return home to-day by the same route.

PEERLESS AUTOMOBILE LIVES UP TO ITS NAME

Next Year's Cars to Be Higher Priced, and Two Models Will Be Built.

By ALEXANDER SCHWALBACH

Cleveland, O., Sept. 1.—The Peerless cars, made in this town, are certainly well named, because their reputation is one having more than a "local habitation and a name." Peerless cars being famous not only nationally, but internationally.

From the earliest pioneer days of the construction of the Peerless car it has been the policy of the Peerless Motor Car Company to see how well it could build each individual car, rather than to see how many cars it could put out. Consequently, when Mr. E. H. Parkhurst, the vice-president of the company, told me in his opening remark that the company had only built four hundred and twenty-five cars this year, I regarded it as a conservative but truthful statement compared with some of the statements of big outputs that I have heard elsewhere. Figuring this total amount of business out, it will be seen that the company's total output for the year exceeded in value over $2,000,000.

In order to keep pace with the growth of the industry, the company is, of course, like all the other big makers, building a new factory. The present plant comprises a group of buildings covering over [illegible] square feet of floor surface and covering five and one-half acres of ground. In the large assembly building, 27x190 feet, the motor parts and the cars are assembled, the bodies trimmed and finished, the whole system of doing this being founded on a system of evolution without covering the same ground in the shops twice. Another building 44x80 feet, contains the machine shop, power plant, stock room, experimental room, pattern shop, drafting room and office. The fourth [illegible] building 15x10 feet, while the motor testing, nickel-plating and testing are done in the fourth building, 27x30 feet, all the buildings being constructed of brick, the roofs being skylights, so as to give plenty of overhead light in addition to the side light from the windows.

E. H. Parkhurst's Views.

After a tour through the big plant with Sales Manager Kirkpatrick as a guide, Mr. Parkhurst had this to say concerning the automobile situation: "For next year we will build two models, one costing $4,000, and the other a 45 horsepower model costing $5,000, confining ourselves as heretofore wholly to the production of four-cylinder cars. We built an eight-cylinder car [illegible] years ago. It was [illegible] looking affair, noisy and [illegible] in its action, and lacking in speed, and we believe that a four-cylinder motor is faster. This we have demonstrated, I think, not only to our satisfaction, but to everybody else's. The Peerless Green Dragon still holds every world's record for circular tracks from one to forty miles, while the result of the National Circuit Championship, according to the A. A. A. point system for 1905, gave Barney Oldfield in a Peerless car the championship with twenty-six points, twice as many as credited to his nearest competitor.

"The Peerless stripped thirty-five-horsepower car driven by Charles Burman has also had a remarkably successful racing record against specially built racers. One of our touring cars driven by Charles Burman finished with a clean score in the recent Glidden tour, and no one will ever forget Ridgway's peerless ride in a twenty-four-horsepower Peerless car on the Brighton race track May 5 and 6, 1905, when he drove a thousand miles in 23h. 50m. 1s., without stopping. This record showed the enduring qualities of both man and mechanism.

"Prices for next year will undoubtedly be higher, we ourselves having listed our models at a little higher figure than last year. These prices are, however, predicated upon an honest desire to build if possible a better car than heretofore, to say nothing of better work and materials. We keep in touch with the best practice abroad, both in material, construction and design. Our ingenieur, Charles Schmidt, has just returned from a trip abroad, where he has been studying the automobile industry. He finds that abroad the makers are producing better finished cars as a rule than we do here, but that the tendency in our own and other big plants here is to equal if not excel them during the coming year in the quality of this finish.

"The six-cylinder proposition will come into vogue, and we have watched its growth with interest. It undoubtedly possesses some advantages, the main feature being its constant torque at low speed, but at higher speeds there is no difference, and hence this apparent advantage is lost.

"The great future use for automobiles [illegible] seasons of the year [illegible] Winter [illegible] enclosed car [illegible] town [illegible] over 60 per cent. of the [illegible] will be used for touring purposes. The question of maintenance is not such a pertinent one as it was some time ago. Carburetors are more economical, our oiling systems are near perfection and the use of bigger and better tires has removed the bugbear of the tire problem.

"The question of discounts and prices in New York city does not interest us very much, because we have a most excellent branch house there, which is on a paying basis. We have not found it necessary, owing to the ready facilities for daily newspaper advertising, to locate ourselves on the Great White Way, where the enormous rents eat up the fair profits of the business and produce sumptuary exaggerated and uncalled for repair and garage charges, to the detriment of the growth of the business. These conditions, however, will change, and it will be a case of the survival of the fittest for the concerns having the lowest fixed charges as compared with the amount of business done.

Don't Fear Foreign Cars.

"We have never feared the competition of the foreign makers, and, while the foreign trade has apparently kept pace with the growth of the American industry, close observers must realize that, on the whole, its future life is short, only the very best products from abroad having any chance of a selling existence here in competition with our best cars.

"We have never dabbled in the motor wagon branch of the business, but it does not take a very wise observer to note and to sapiently say that mechanical traction for commercial uses has got to come."

Before leaving the plant for a ride in a new Peerless car with Messrs. Parkhurst and Kirkpatrick, and winding up the day's visit by a delightful al fresco luncheon on the grounds of the famous Euclid Club, of Cleveland, I stepped into Mr. Charles Schmidt's office, the designer of the company, who is famous as an automobile designer, both in this country and France. Mr. Schmidt has [illegible] abroad, and said: "Our new car is not only right in design at the outset, but we have searched the European as well as the American market for the best materials to put into it. Moreover we have established to-day a standard of workmanship in our shop not excelled by any automobile factory in the world."

An interesting feature of Mr. Schmidt's office was his gigantic card system which occupied the [illegible] of his office wall, filling a space from ceiling to floor, at least ten by twelve feet. The cards showed in various colors and in typewriting the progress and the condition of the work on every part of Peerless cars in hand in the shop, and those parts that were somewhat behind were indicated by the danger signal of a red card. By this system Mr. Schmidt is able to tell at a glance the operating efficiency and condition of his forces and to hasten at once to the relief of the weak spot which might delay the assembling of any complete part. Every designer and constructor in this country, when he visits Cleveland, should drop in and see Mr. Schmidt and study his clever shop card system.

J. L. POOLE AROUND AGAIN.

John L. Poole, travelling representative and general sales manager of the Aerocar Company, has spent the greater portion of last week in his quarters at the hotel suffering from a slight illness. He is up and about again extolling the merits of the air-cooled proposition.

TOURING IN MAINE.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Frances, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Lowe of this city are making an extended tour through Maine in their air-cooled Marmon. The party left Boston last Wednesday and made the run to Portland without a single stop, and at last accounts were doing excellent work in the Pine Tree State.

HENSHAW LEAVES THOMAS COMPANY

Charles S. Henshaw, who since the early days of motoring has been the local representative of the Thomas Motor Car Company, severed his connection with that concern yesterday, the date of the expiration of h[illegible] season. It is understood, the Thomas interests in this vicinity will be cared for by the Harry Fosdick Company. This statement set at rest all rumors as regards the future of the Thomas agency.

Mr. Henshaw yesterday told the BOSTON AMERICAN reporter that he would shortly announce his new line, which includes two well-known and successful cars.

NEW WHITE WILL BE MORE POWERFUL

Announcement is made of a new model of White steamer for the coming season, to be known as the model "G." The new machine is larger, heavier and much more powerful than any previously made by the White company, and is, in consequence, somewhat higher priced. It is rated at thirty steam horsepower, or nearly twice that of the powerful model "F."

As regards the external appearance, the new car exhibits the same general characteristics as this year's White. The power plant consists of compound engine with White generator and auxiliary apparatus of the same general type as in previous [illegible]

Besides greater power, the New White [illegible] carrying capacity for both [illegible] than have the previous models. The Model "G" is supplied with two distinct types of bodies. The larger of the two, known as the Pullman body, is fitted with two revolving chairs, thus affording seating room for seven persons. The smaller body, known as the touring body, is shorter, seating five persons, and the extra space thus allowed on the frame is utilized as a car[illegible] for luggage.

The increased power of the new White, as compared with previous models, has been secured by increasing the size of the engine and of generator, with corresponding increase in the capacity of the condenser, pumps, etc. Furthermore, to take care of the increased weight and much higher speed of which the car is capable, every part of the frame and running gear has been considerably strengthened.

Another change in the new car which will readily be noticed is that the location of the gasoline tank is in the rear. It is hung in a well-protected position between the rear of the frame and one of the cross braces which connect the sides of the frame.

LONG TOUR IN THE WHITE MOUNTAINS

Simon Sorenberg and his son, Samuel [illegible], of Commonwealth avenue are spending a month touring through the White Mountain district in their thirty-five horsepower Locomobile. They went from Boston to Bretton Woods by way of Portsmouth, Rochester and Intervale, reaching the heart of the White Mountains without experiencing any difficulty whatever. After spending a few days at Bretton Woods, they will take up the route of the recent A. A. A. tour from Bretton Woods to Jackman, returning to Boston by the so-called shore route.

MANAGER HINCKLEY BETTER.

Manager Freeman Hinckley of the local branch of the Pope Company is on the road to recovery. He has so improved from the shock and results of his recent accident that he is able to make short trips to the office, although his physicians absolutely refuse to permit him to spend any great amount of time attending to business matters.

W. M. LYBRAND IN TOWN.

William M. Lybrand of Philadelphia arrived in Boston yesterday, having come over the road in his two-cylinder Reo touring car en route for Bretton Woods. After spending a week in the White Mountains district Mr. Lybrand will return to Philadelphia by way of Springfield, Hartford and New York.

A Report From The "Maxwell"
4 CYLINDER CAR

Mr. Dustin Farnum, the well-known actor with "The Virginian" company, who owns one of the new 4 CYLINDER MAXWELL CARS, reports a most successful tour this summer, covering 1,432 miles in 20 days, that being 200 miles farther and in [illegible] than the Glidden tourists went. Mr. Farnum followed the Atlantic coast line from New York to Portland, Me.; then north and west through the White Mountains, returning via the [illegible] Mountains to the Connecticut valley and Sag Harbor, thence to New York.

Mr. Farnum says he was not delayed 5 minutes on the whole tour, and made the different places on schedule time. Mr. Farnum proposes to use his MAXWELL CAR on his theatrical tour this season. He leaves New York to-day for Boston, where he plays at the Hollis Street Theatre, this week. Mr. Farnum [illegible] that he puts as much confidence in the MAXWELL CAR as he [illegible] in a railroad train, which speaks pretty well for the reliability of the car.

THE INCOMPARABLE
WHITE
THE CAR FOR SERVICE

New Model of the White Steam Car.

The new Model "G" White is a larger, heavier and much more powerful car than any we have previously manufactured. It is conservatively rated at 30 steam horsepower.

The mechanism of the Model "G" exhibits the general features of the well-known White system, with numerous improvements suggested by the study and experience of the year. Because of the much higher speed of which the car is capable, every part has been brought up to a new standard of size and strength. A feed-water heater has been added, materially increasing the efficiency of the car; the gasoline tank has been placed in a well-protected position at the rear of the frame; 36 inch wheels are used, giving greater clearance than in our Model "F"; both the hand and the foot brakes act direct on the rear wheels; and there is a greater carrying capacity for passengers and for baggage than in any of our previous models.

Will sell at Public Auction in Lexington on THURSDAY, SEPT. 6TH, 1906, At 10 o'clock in the forenoon,

THE REAL ESTATE AND PERSONAL PROPERTY of William C. Schouler, located on Waltham and Allen streets. The real estate consists of a farm of 52 acres of land, more or less, with the buildings thereon, viz.:

An old farm house of ten rooms, large barn with accommodations for 50 cows and 10 horses, containing complete dairy outfit, large silo and ice house. The land is divided into 30 acres of mowing and tillage, balance pasture and wood; large orchard of apple, cherry, peach, pear and plum trees; small fruits of all kinds. The land has a street frontage of almost one mile, and is one of the best farms in this location and very valuable for sub-division.

THE PERSONAL PROPERTY consists of THREE HORSES (1 pair blacks, 5 and 7 years old, weight about 2,400 lbs., sound and right in every way, a splendid team; one bay horse, weight 1,400 lbs., 10 years old, sound and kind, an extra nice roader for so large a horse); 1 covered milk wagon, 1-horse cart, sulkey plow, Deering 2-horse mowing machine, Deering hay rake, ensilage cutter and elevator, horse power, 1 gasoline engine, 3½-horse power; wheelbarrow, cross cut saw, evener and whiffletrees, hay fork, improved U. S. separator, churn, butter worker, 4 butter carriers, Babcock milk tester, blacksmith's vise and anvil, portable forge, milk cooler, grindstone, barrels, closet, grain box, feed trough, Advance manure spreader, 2-horse hoe, 2-horse corn planter, sulkey plow (side hill), 6 bushels grass seed, 2 bushels clover seed, gravel coop, harness, 2 express harness, 1 set double harness, almost new, small tools of all descriptions, too numerous to mention.

THE REAL ESTATE WILL BE SOLD AT 12 O'CLOCK NOON.

This sale is absolute, without reserve or limit, to the highest bidder, both real estate and personal. The terms of sale are as follows—Cash on personal property. On real estate, $200 at time of sale, balance cash in ten days, on delivery of deed. The property can be shown at any time previous to the sale by Mr. Bailey at the farm, or from the office of the auctioneers, by appointment. Per order WILLIAM C. SCHOULER.

PUBLIC WARNING.

DON'T let misleading ads. get your money; the papers are teeming with them; thousands of people have lost every dollar they owned by relying too fully on statements made by the person interested in the sale; you may think you cannot be caught by these sharpers, perhaps not, but you surely know that those who make a business of buying and selling business chances don't do it for their health; they set their traps and like mice you get caught, and their glib tongues do the rest; come and see us and learn of those who have been swindled in the past; we are saving people from the sharks every day; our services free. A LABOR DAY BUST!

THE mother or daughter of fashion rarely realizes that Labor has always been dignified. The laborer fills the precept, becomes an intelligent part of real life, a factor for all that is good, noble, moral and of benefit to mankind. The association of woman with labor ennobles it. The laboring woman in any situation of life is an object lesson for the advancement of morality, truth, wisdom and the better virtues of her sex. Unlike many of her sisters of society she has a mission for good; appreciates the trials, temptations and sorrows of womankind, is ready to sacrifice her own comforts in sickness and affliction, and is never found wanting in All that makes woman the noblest of God's creation. Working women, and all others, know that Dr. Conway's Bustoids is the only remedy on earth which enlarges the breasts 4 to 10 inches every time without exposure. No matter how flat you are, young or old, you can do this at home without injury. CALL FOR FREE FACTS, testimonials, &c. Sealed facts 4c. stamps. CONWAY SPECIFIC CO., 495 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

Russian Fugitives Bring Stories of Unparalleled Horrors

This little girl saw her home destroyed and her sisters thrown into the river and drowned.

Returning from her hiding place after the slaughter, Mrs. Jirata found her husband dying on the doorsteps, his skull crushed. Her boy went out to beg food and never returned. The girl is all she has left.

With his family he was driven from home while soldiers set it afire. His brother was murdered and the brother's daughter carried away to an unknown fate.

BROKERS IN UPROAR ON RECORD DAY FOR WHEAT

3,000,000 Bushels Delivered in Chicago Board of Trade. Speculators Cheer and Toss Hats in Air for Bumper Crop

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 1.—Excitement prevailed on the Board of Trade to-day when the delivery began of 3,000,000 bushels of wheat upon contracts that expired September 1, the amount of wheat to be delivered being the largest ever known in history of the Board.

Only 5,000 bushels of corn were delivered and 750,000 bushels of oats. Small quantities of provisions were delivered. Trading suspended, while brokers threw their hats into the air, and cheered.

The transfer was made by the passing of warehouse receipts to the bulls, who have bought heavily. The government reports show that the greatest amount of wheat ever produced by the West will be forthcoming this Fall.

With disaster impending, a market on the down grade, nobody willing to buy grain and everybody wanting to sell the traders turned to a plan for revival of speculation, demanding that commissions be slashed into pieces to stimulate the buying.

More than one hundred traders have joined in the stampede for cutting commissions from ¼ to ⅛ cent. This means, if it wins, a complete reversal of the Board's verdict of last March when the traders decided the stream of loss could be turned to profit by doubling commissions.

Mothers Whose Little Ones Had Been Slain, Wives Who Saw Husbands Shot Down, Come on the Ivernia.

The true story of Russia has been told in Boston by the Russian refugees who have just landed in this port, a story of the horrors and cruelties to which the people of their unhappy fatherland are being subjected by the ruthless Czar's government. They tell of their countrymen who have been made the victims of torture, unspeakable outrages and wholesale massacre, in which neither age nor sex was spared.

Seven hundred and seventy-seven Jewish refugees reached Boston on the Cunard liner Ivernia, which they boarded at Liverpool. Dr. Victor M. Safford, one of the leading students of immigration problems, said to a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter:

"They are seemingly a superior type of Jewish immigrants. As a rule, they are better dressed, better clothed and have more money than the average."

There were affecting scenes on the pier when the immigrants filed off the big ship. The dread of being unable to pass the required qualifications was a nightmare to many. They would rather die than have to go back to Russia and the mutability of Cossacks and officials.

Beautiful young Jewesses who had lived for months in fear of death or a worse fate went in joy to find themselves free at last from such anxiety. There were mothers who had seen their children's brains dashed out before their eyes, wives who had been widowed when their husbands fought to the last gasp to save them from violence.

Mrs. Rose Eeyzemkel was so overjoyed that she fell upon her knees and her first words on American soil were a prayer of thanksgiving. She was in the little town of Kovno on the Baltic when soldiers rushed into her home and shot down the father of the household. The women and children would have been slaughtered, too, if they had not fled while the marauders were wounding.

"It was terible," she said, "those days of blinding and dread. I did not know when I would be attacked or where I could find safety. My brother was terribly wounded, and I do not know yet whether he is alive or dead. I lay concealed for a week before I was able to escape over the border. Life in Russia is living death—it is a country where a Jew is not free to breathe in safety."

Drowned Girls in River.

"I fled," she said, "with my father and mother at Lida, Vilna province, and I don't know what became of them, whether living or dead. I only know that the cruel men who destroyed our home drowned my little sisters in the river. I was saved because an old man hid me in a cellar for days and days. Finally he wrote to my uncle here, who sent me the money to come to Boston."

Chaime Jirata held up her infant, saying:

"My babe is all I have left. I found my husband on the doorstep after an awful night of slaughter. His head was broken by a blow from a rifle, but he still breathed. But he never spoke again. We did not dare to stir from the house until the food was all gone. My brave little Mendelsohn, nine years old, said: 'Mamma, I cannot bear to see you hungry. I will go after food.' They will not notice me, and all will be well.' He went, but he never came back. Frantic with grief and anxiety, I ventured out to search for him. I could not find him. I was threatened with death. Friends took me to Morotch Qlusk, in the great Pripek swamp. There we were safe for awhile. Finally we got out of the accursed country."

"Will Be More Massacres."

Wolf Schneider of Chelsea, who is a woodcarver and most intelligent man, stepped from the ship with haggard face and with sorrow burning in his deep-set eyes. He had gone back to Russia for his family, but could find only his eldest son, Boris. His wife and two other children has disappeared. He does not know that they still live.

"There is no safe place in Russia for a Jew," he said. "Not only do the soldier of the line, the Cossack, the German noble and the Russian aristocrat thirst for his blood, but every other Russian, high or low. If the autocracy succeeds in maintaining the Government as it is then there will be more massacres of Jews."

From Bialystok came Abram Brudno, his wife and children. That city was the scene of a massacre second only in enormity to Kishineff. When a cessare was planted at the Brudnos' they showed as if it had been a machine gun. Their trembling ceased only when an interpreter said:

"Fear not, this man is a friend and only wants your pictures to put in a great newspaper." Reassured by this, Brudno said:

"Our home was put to the torch by the mob. I had 600 rubles in gold hidden and they rode me to America. My brother was slain. His daughter, Rachel, but sixteen years old, was carried away. God pity the poor child. Don't ask me of her fate. I shudder when I think what it may be.

Bullet, Knife and Bludgeon.

"The Bialystok riots were awful days of carnage. The mob fired houses and stabbed and shot the Jews who tried to escape from the shops and homes. It made no difference if they were honest citizens and helpless women. There was no mercy to be had for tears and prayers—only the bullet, the knife and the bludgeon.

Some of the refugees came from Ekaterinoslav, Mogunezow, Bessarabia, and many other Russian provinces were represented by the band of fugitives.

ROOSEVELT SEEKS PEACE IN OHIO POLITICS.

Republican Leaders Alarmed at Turn of Affairs That May Split Party and Relegate Senator Foraker to the Rear

Washington, Sept. 1.—Republican politicians here are alarmed over affairs in Ohio. It is believed that the President will endeavor to straighten out matters in Ohio and restore peace.

At the coming State convention a bitter debate between Senator Foraker and Representative Burton on the question of indorsing Ohio's United States Senators is anticipated.

Burton will demand that only a formal indorsement be given to the Senators, on the ground that they opposed the President's rate regulation and other important policies. Should he win, Burton will become the Ohio leader, and the early retirement of both Dick and Foraker will be presaged.

PEOPLE FLEE FROM FLOOD; RIVER UP 42 FEET

El Paso, Texas, Sept. 1.—The Massa river between Gomez Paliano and Larredo, Mexico, on the line of the Mexican Central railroad, has risen forty-two feet in the last twenty-four hours. The inhabitants of the two towns are fleeing to the hills fearing that cities will be swept away.

OPEN HIGH SCHOOL OF COMMERCE HERE

Boston is to have a "High School of Commerce," such as is being operated successfully in New York and Philadelphia. The new school will be located in a building now being renovated on Winthrop street, Roxbury, and the first school year will open September 12.

The establishment of the school was first proposed by the school board last year. Mayor Fitzgerald gave his indorsement to the movement, and strongly recommended its establishment in his inaugural address. The institution was finally authorized in March of this year, and F. V. Thompson of No. 84 Brooks street, Brighton, has been chosen as master.

The regular course of study is four years, and includes languages, history, political economy and all commercial studies. Supplementary subjects for postgraduate students will include merchandise, banking, brokerage, transportation and manufacturing.

The manifold commercial activities of Boston and her increasing importance as a seaport offer to young men, well trained and ambitious, most attractive careers. The new High School of Commerce is designed to prepare young men to take advantage of such opportunities.

As might naturally be supposed, the rush of applicants for entrance to the school is

AMBULANCE HORSES INJURED MAKING HURRY CALL.

Contact with a live wire while on the top of a telephone pole at the corner of Sargent and Park streets, West Newton, last night knocked Merwin W. Seely of Winter Hill, Somerville, a lineman, employed by the New England Telephone Company, to the ground. He will recover.

The police ambulance was delayed by one of the horses failing on the concrete bridge at the corner of Washington and Church streets, almost throwing the driver and Chief Mitchell into the road. Both horses quickly recovered and bolted up Church street with the broken pole dangling at their feet. The runaways, suffering from cuts and bruises, were finally pulled up and taken to Busher's stable, where they were attended by a veterinary. Seely was taken home in a carriage.

THREATENED STRIKE; ARE OUT OF JOBS

Worcester, Sept. 1.—Instead of being on strike to-day, as they threatened, the electrical workers of this city are out of jobs because Saturday ago the Journeymen's Union of Electrical Workers asked their employers to sign an agreement which would give them $3 a day for eight hours' work, and allow them to specify the number of helpers. Then the employers asked the men to sign an agreement by which they could not go on strike.

Both sides refused to sign and the journeymen have been discharged. Men from Providence and other places, who are willing to sign the employers' agreements, are taking the places of the discharged workmen.

ENFORCE 8-HOUR LAW IS ORDER OF MAYOR

Mayor Fitzgerald issued instructions yesterday to the officials in charge of the city institutions to see that the provisions of the eight hour law are complied with hereafter. To accomplish that purpose he issued the following circular to heads of departments:

"Complaints have been received from time to time that employees and persons employed in some of the departments are working more than eight hours per day. It is my desire that the provisions of the eight-hour law shall be carried out strictly, both in letter and in spirit. You are, therefore, requested to see that these provisions are enforced at once."

FIND DEAD CHILD; FEAR FOUL PLAY

What is believed to be a case of infanticide was called to the attention of the police of the East Boston station yesterday afternoon when the body of a male child was discovered wrapped in newspapers in an alleyway off No. 142 Porter street. Apparently the infant had been strangled.

Dr. Harris, the medical examiner, will perform an autopsy to-day. The police have been given a description of a woman who was seen to enter the alley on Friday night carrying a bundle and who came out empty-handed.

How to Exercise the Bowels

YOUR Intestines are lined inside with millions of suckers, that draw the Nutrition from food as it passes them. But, if the food passes too slowly, it decays before it gets through. Then the little suckers draw Poison from it instead of Nutrition. This Poison makes a Gas that injures your system more than the food should have nourished it.

The usual remedy for this delayed passage (called Constipation) is to take a big dose of Castor Oil.

It does not help the Cause of delay a trifle. It does slacken the Bowel-Muscles and weakens them for their next task.

Another remedy is to take a strong "Physic," like Salts, Calomel, Jalap, Phosphate of Sodium, Aperient Water, or any of these mixed.

This merely flushes-out the Bowels with a waste of Digestive Juice, set flowing into the Intestines through the tiny suckers.

They do not relax the Intestines by greasing them inside like Castor Oil or Glycerine.

They are put up in thin, flat, round-cornered Enamel boxes, so they can be carried in a man's vest pocket, or in a woman's purse, all the time. 1739

The time to take a Cascaret is not only when you are Sick, but when you first suspect you need one. Price, 10c a box.

MILK BOY, DISEASED, SPREADS TYPHOID

Haverhill, Sept. 1.—Agent Bryant of the Board of Health announced to-day that the local typhoid fever epidemic had been caused by a milk supply which was handled by a fifteen-year-old boy suffering from the disease. There were seventeen cases discovered along the route and the health officials took immediate action to check contagion.

STANFORD $1,000,000 GEMS TO BE SOLD

San Francisco, Sept. 1.—The precious stones and jewelry of the late Mrs. Jane Stanford, valued at nearly $1,000,00, will be sold by the trustees of Stanford University.

Part of the collection will be disposed of by private sale, many offers from leading Eastern jewelers being already on file. Those unsold will be put up at auction in New York and London. This is carrying out Mrs. Stanford's wishes that the jewels be sold and a library fund established.
